Part III

(comprising the bhāṣya on Sūtras from II. 3.1 to IV. 4.22)

PREFACE

With the publication of Part III of 'Sribhāṣya of Rāmānuja' the task entrusted to me by the University of Poona nearly ten years ago has been finished

In 1957, I was involved in a major accident, when a cyclist ran against me and managed to break my thigh-bone, which necessitated my stay at a hospital for one hundred days and an equal period at home afterwards, lying prostrate on the bed all the while. However I survived all that and was able to walk soon afterwards with assistance, and after a couple of years became more or less normal and resumed my activities, perhaps even with increased vigour

I may be permitted to heave a sigh of relief, now that the 'Sribhāṣya' in its complete form has been published.

It has been a source of great encouragement to me to find that my edition of 'Sribhāṣya' has been of great use to students of Rāmānuja's Viśiṣṭādvaita. I confess I am a Sankarite by inclination, but I hope that I have done no injustice to Rāmānuja consciously.

It has been suggested to me that an edition of the Sankara-bhāṣya on the Brahmasūtras, on similar lines should be brought out by me. I am accordingly engaged at present on the Sankara-bhāṣya

I am greatly indebted to my M. A. and Ph. D. students for the help given and suggestions made to make the edition serve better the requirements of the students and the general reader.

I am grateful to Padmabhūṣana Prof. R. N. Dandekar (Poona University) who suggested to me the pattern about the re-arrangement of the text, which has been found to be very useful. Dr. Mrs. Shilavati Oke, M. A., Ph. D. (my colleague at the Bhandarkar Institute), Dr. Miss Sulochana Nachane M. A., Ph. D. (M. S. University of Baroda), and Miss Vimal Thakar M. A. (Government of India fellow at the Bhandarkar Institute) deserve special mention for help in various ways.

Thanks are due to the authorities of the Aryabhushan Press, Poona, for the care with which they handled the job of printing this voluminous work

Third Quarter of the Second Chapter

Not the Sky, on account of not being heard (mentioned in

(Adhikaraṇa 1, Sūtras 1-9)

[328] In the case of the systems outside the pale of the Vedas, Sāṅkhya and others, we mentioned the absurdity thereof, on account of the contradiction owing to their being based on fallacious reasoning. Now, in order to announce that our own view is untainted by the blemish of contradiction etc., in respect of the worldly existence constituted of sentient and non-sentient admitted as being the product of Brahman, is being held under scrutiny, the mode of its being the product. There, the doubt arises, viz.—Is the Sky originated or not ?

What (is) proper ? The Sky is not originated. Whence ? There being no Śruti (passage endorsing that) ; for, there is the possibility of something that is possible, being heard. In the case of something impossible, the origination etc., of the sky-flower and the sky, there is no possibility of their being denoted by words. Not, indeed, is it possible to scrutinise the origination of the impartite all-pervading sky, as in the case of the Ātman.

For this very reason, on account of the origination being impossible, in the creation-chapter in the Chāndogya, is declared the origination of entities beginning with Tejas alone in (the passage)

‘ It reflected— May I be many, may I procreate, It created Light (Tejas) ’

(Chā. 6-2-3)

In the Taittirīya and the Ātharvaṇa etc.,

‘तस्माद्वा एतस्मादात्मन आकाशः संभूतः’

(तै. २।१)

‘एतस्माज्जायते प्राणो मनः सर्वेन्द्रियाणि च ।

सं वायुर्ज्योतिरपः’

(मु. २।१।३)

इत्यादिषु श्रूयमाणा वियदुत्पत्तिरर्थविरोधाद्वाध्यते, इति ॥ १ ॥

[329] एवं प्राप्ते, अभिधीयते—

अस्ति तु ॥ २ ॥

अस्ति त्याकाशस्योत्पत्तिः । अतीन्द्रियार्थविषया हि श्रुतिः प्रमाणान्तराप्रतीतामपि वियदुत्पत्तिं प्रतिपादयितुं समर्थव । न च श्रुतिप्रतिषेधेऽर्थे तद्विरोधि निरवयवत्वादिहेतुकमनुत्पत्त्यनुमानमुद्देतुमलम् । आत्मनोऽप्यनुत्पत्तिर्न निरवयवत्वप्रयुक्ता, इति वक्ष्यति ॥ २ ॥

[330] पुनश्चोदयति—

गौण्यसंभवाच्छब्दाच्च ॥ ३ ॥

‘तस्माद्वा एतस्मादात्मन आकाशः संभूतः’

(तै. २।१)

इत्यादिवियदुत्पत्तिश्रुतिर्गौणीति कल्पयितुं युक्तम्,

‘तत्तेजोऽमृजत’

(छा. ६।२।३)

‘From that, verily, from this Ātman, the Ākāśa was originated’

(Tai. 2.1)

‘From this, are produced the Prāṇa, mind and the sense-organs, the sky, mind, light, waters’

(Mu. 2.1.3)

the origination of the sky, declared in (the above passages) etc., is contradicted owing to the contradiction of the sense ॥ 1 ॥

[329] This (prima-facie view) being reached, it is stated (in reply)—

But there is ॥ 2 ॥

But there is the origination of Ākāśa; for, the Śruti dealing with supersensuous objects is certainly competent to propound the origination of the sky, although not comprehended from other means of proof. Not again, in a matter known from the Śruti, any inference opposed to it pointing to non-origination based upon the logical mark—being impartite etc.,—is competent to rise up. The non-origination of the Ātman himself is not due to his being impartite,—this he (Sūtrakāra) would say further ॥ 2 ॥

‘ (The origination-Śruti is) secondary, on account of the impossibility and on account of the word (Amṛta) ॥ 3 ॥

(Tai. 2.1)

etc.,—this Śruti describing the origination of the sky can be regarded as metaphorical (secondary), because it is not possible to, propound the origination of the sky, as in (the passage)

‘It created Tejas’

(Chā. 6.2.3)

इति सिद्धोऽब्रह्मणः प्रथमं तेज उत्पद्यते, इति तेजउत्पत्तिमाथम्येन वियदुत्पत्तिप्रतिपादना- संभवात् ।

‘वायुश्चान्तरिक्षं चेतदमृतम्’

(बृ. २।१।३)

इति वियतोऽमृतत्वशब्दाच्च ॥ ३ ॥

[331] कथमेकस्य संभूतशब्दस्याकाशापेक्षया गौणत्वम्, अग्न्याद्यपेक्षया मुख्यत्वम् ?
इति चेत्—तत्राह—

स्याच्चैकस्य ब्रह्मशब्दवत् ॥ ४ ॥

एकस्यैव

‘तस्माद्वा एतस्मादात्मन आकाशः संभूतः’

(तै. २।१)

इत्याकाशे मुख्यत्वासंभवात्, गौणतया प्रयुक्तस्य संभूतशब्दस्य

‘वायोऽग्निः’

इत्यादिव्यनुपक्तस्य मुख्यत्वं स्यादेव । ब्रह्मशब्दवत्—यथा ब्रह्मशब्दः

‘तस्मादेतद्ब्रह्म नामरूपमज्ञं च जायते’

(मु. १।१।९)

इत्यत्र प्रधाने गौणतया प्रयुक्तः, तस्मिन्नेव प्रकरणे

‘तपसा चीयते ब्रह्म ततोऽन्नमभिजायते’

(मु. १।१।८)

इति ब्रह्मणि मुख्यतया प्रयुज्यते, तद्वत् । अनुपक्षे च भवणानृत्ताधिवामिधानानृत्तिर्विद्यत एवेत्यर्थः ॥ ४ ॥

Tejas is originated first from Brahman desirous of creating, and so, as the origination of Tejas comes first, it is impossible to propound the origination of the sky, and because, Viyat (sky) is spoken of by the word Amṛta in ‘Wind and the mid-region—this is immortal (Amṛta)’.

(Br. 2·3·3)

[331] If it is argued —how in the case of the same word Sambhūta, there is a secondary nature in respect of Ākāśa, and a primary nature in, respect of Agni? —there says (the Sūtrakāra)—

There could be (different natures) in the case of one (and the same word), like the word Brahman ॥ 4 ॥

There would certainly be in the case of one and the same word Sambhūta, use in a secondary sense, owing to its primary sense being impossible in the case of Ākāśa in (the passage)—

‘From that, verily, from this Ātman, Ākāśa was originated’

(Tai. 2·1)

its primary sense being tacked on in (the passage)

‘From Vayu, Agni’

(Tai. 2·1)

etc., like the word Brahman. As the word Brahman used in a secondary sense to refer to Pradhāna in (the passage)—

‘From that, this Brahman, name and form, and food, are originated’

(Mu. 1·9·9)

is used in its primary sense in respect of Brahman in the same context—

‘Brahman is augmented by penance, from that, food is produced’

(Mu. 1·1·8)

—like that. —And in the case of what is tacked on, like repeated hearing, there does exist the repetition of the denotative. —this is the purport ॥ 4 ॥

इति तेजस उत्पत्तिश्चुतिर्वियदुत्पत्तिं चारयति । वियदुत्पत्त्यवचनमात्रेण तेजसः प्रतीयमानं

(The Sūtrakāra) refutes—

Non-stultification of the solemn declaration, on account of that being not different ॥ 5 ॥

[331A] It is not proper to speak of, in conformity with the Chāndogya Śruti-passage, the metaphorical nature of other Śruti-passages declaring the origination of the sky; because by the Chāndogya-Śruti itself has been accepted the origination of the sky, on account of all knowledge arising from the knowledge of Brahman, in

‘By what the unheard is heard’

(Chā. 6-1-1)

etc.,—the non-stultification of that solemn declaration can be there only on account of Ākāśa also not being different from that (Brahman), being the product of Brahman ॥ 5 ॥

(And) from the (Śruti) words ॥ 6 ॥

And thus is the origination of the sky apprehended from the Chāndogya, on account of the word definitely declaring oneness prior to creation in the passage,

‘The existent alone, gentle one, this was in the beginning, one alone, without a second’

(Chā. 6-2-1)

and on account of (the sky) being apprehended as not being different from Brahman, being a product, from the words (in the Śruti)

‘All this has this as the Ātman’.

(Chā. 6-8-7)

etc., Not again, does the Śruti mentioning the origination of Tejas

‘It created Tejas’

And owing to its being a modification, there is separate-ness: as in popular parlance ॥ 7 ॥

The word Tu has the sense of Ca (and). Owing to Ākāśa being spoken of as a modification in (the passage)

‘All this has this as the Ātman’

(Chā. 6-8-7)

etc., the separateness of that Ākāśa, from Prahman, the origination also has been spoken of that Ākāśa, Lokavat—as in popular parlance—having mentioned—all these are Devadatta’s sons,—by the direct mention of some amongst them being born of him, the birth of all of them (from Devadatta) is as good as spoken—like that. And this being so, (the passage)

‘The wind, and the mid-region—this is immortal’

(Br. 2-3-3)

is intended to point out the stay for a long time as in the case of the gods. ॥ 7 ॥

By this, the Wind (also) is explained ॥ 8 ॥

[332] By this very argument, is explained the origination of Mātarīśvan,—the Wind. The separate association of Viyat and Mātarīśvan is for the sake of referring to (the Śūtra)—

The word Tu is for the sake of emphasis Asambhava—non-origination—belongs to the existent Brahman alone. Non-origination of anything apart from that is not possible. This is what is intended to be said—The propounding of the origination of Sky and Wind is for the sake of giving an illustrative instance. The impossibility of origination, however, belongs to the Highest Brahman alone that is existent and the original cause. Non-origination is inappropriate in the case of everything other than that, such as the entire worldly existence, Avyakta (Unmanifest), Mahat, Ahankāra, the subtle elements, sense-organs, Sky, Wind, etc., whose being the product is known by the solemn statement—the knowledge of everything by the knowledge of one, etc. ॥ 9 ॥

The Tejas from this—To the same effect, says ॥ 10 ॥

(Adhikarana 2, Sūtras 10-17)

[333] Everything other than Brahman is stated to be the product of Brahman. Now this is being considered—Is the production of the intermediate products from only the entities—the immediate causes of the various products—or from Brahman possessed of the various forms? What (is) proper? From merely the various objects—Whence? The Tejas, for the matter of that, is produced from this, Wind (The Sruti), indeed, says

‘From the Wind, Fire’

(Chā. 2.3)

The Earth ॥ 12 ॥

The Earth is produced from the Waters.

‘From the Waters, the Earth’

(Tai. 2.1)

‘They (Waters) produced Food’

(Chā. 6.2.4)

—so indeed says (the Śruti) ॥ 12 ॥

[334] I say (says the objector)—How is the Earth denoted by the word Anna ? To this (the Sūtrakāra) says—

On account of the topic, colour and other words ॥ 13 ॥

That the Earth alone is mentioned by the word Anna is apprehended from the topic dealing with the creation of the great elements. Everything that is fit to be eaten is a modification of the earth, and so, the word denoting the effect is used to denote the cause. Similarly, in the concluding part of the passage describing the colour of the elements, it is apprehended that the sense of the word Anna is, verily, homogeneous with that of Waters and Tejas as in the passage

‘What (is) the red colour of Fire, that (is) the colour of Tejas; what white, that of Waters; what dark, that of Anna (the Earth)’

(Chā. 6.4.1)

—there are also other words in similar contexts— in the Śruti

‘From Agni, Waters; from Waters, the Earth’. (Tai. 2.1)

Therefore, the Earth itself is spoken of by the word Anna, and so, the Earth is produced from Waters alone. The Tejas etc., that are cited are merely for the purpose of indication. Mahat and others also are, indeed, produced from entities alone immediately near to them, on account of the non-contradiction in understanding the Śruti passages as they are—

‘From this are produced Prāṇa, mind, and all sense-organs, the Sky, Wind, Light, Waters (and) the Earth, the support of all (the universe)’

(Mu. 2.1.3)

‘From that, is produced this Brahman, name and form and food’

(Mu. 1.1.9)

‘From that, verily, from this Ātman, Ākāśa originated’

(Tal. 2.1)

‘It created Tejas’

(Chā. 6.2.3)

—These (passages) etc., would be appropriate even if Brahman were to be (an indirect) cause in succession ॥ 13 ॥

[335] This (prima-facie view) being reached, we reply —

But on account of his reflection itself, he (the Ātman is the cause,) on account of the characteristic feature ॥ 14 ॥

By the word Tu (but) the above view is turned away. That Puruṣottama alone is the cause even of the products, Mahat etc., having for body the various entities immediately near to them. Whence? On account of that characteristic mark in the form of his reflection. Abhidnyāna is the thought — ‘May I be many’.

From the declaration in the Śruti about reflection taking the form of thought about being many, in the case of Ātman in (the passages)

‘That Tejas reflected — May I be many, may I procreate’

(Chā. 6.2.3)

‘Those Waters reflected — May we be many, may we procreate’ (Chā. 6-2-4)

—regarding also the causes, Mahat, Abhāṅkāra, Ākāśa etc., it is known that the creation of their effects is preceded by that kind of reflection itself. And that kind of reflection is appropriate in the case of the Highest Brahman alone having those various entities as its body. It is declared in the Brāhmaṇa dealing with the inner Controller, that the Highest Brahman is the Ātman of everything because it has everything as its body —

‘Who, abiding in Waters’ (Br. 3-7-4)

‘Who, abiding in Tejas’ (Br. 3-7-14)

‘Who, abiding in Wind’ (Br. 3-7-7)

‘Who, abiding in Ākāśa’ (Br. 3-7-12)

And in the Subālopaniṣad, beginning with

‘Whose body (is) Pṛthivī’

‘Whose body (is) Āhāṅkāra, whose body (is) Buddhī, whose body (is) the Avyakta’ (Subā. 6)

etc. ॥ 14 ॥

[336] As to the statement that the creation of Prāṇa etc., from Brahman, declared in the Śruti

is appropriate even if (the creation is) indirect, in succession, —here, it is stated (in reply) —

विपर्ययेण तु क्रमोत्पद्यते च ॥ १५ ॥

But the order in the reverse is appropriate, thus ॥ 15 ॥

The word Tu is for the sake of emphasis. Which order of all effects, being subsequent to Brahman, is apprehended in (the passage)

(Mu. 2-1-3)

etc., — in the reverse order, Avyakta, Mahat, Ahaṁkāra, Ākāśa etc., — that order is appropriate, only if there is the creation of various effects from Brahman of various forms. If Brahman were to be the indirect (mediate) cause in succession, being the immediate mentioned in the Śruti would be contradicted. Therefore, the declaration such as in (the passage)

(Mu. 2-1-3)

etc., also, does prop up (corroborate) everything being directly produced from Brahman. ॥ 15 ॥

If (it be argued) that Vijñāna and Manas are in order in between owing to the indication mark, (the reply is) — No, on account of non-distinction ॥ 16 ॥

The sense-organs are called Vijñāna because they are the means of Vijñāna (knowledge). As to the statement that everything being the immediate product of Brahman, is declared in (the Śruti-passage) —

(Mu. 2-1-3)

etc., and thus by this passage, is propped up the immediate origination of everything from Brahman, known from the indicative mark—reflection—that is not proper, because this passage aims at a particular order. On account of the apprehension even here of the order for all, the order in the case of Sky etc., established in other Śruti passages is apprehended even here. On account of the indicative mark being mentioned along with them, Vijñāna and mind also are apprehended as being produced in order, in between the elements and the Prāna Therefore this passage cannot be taken as propping up the direct origination of that from Brahman alone—if it is argued thus—(we say) No Avisesāt—on account of the non-distinction from the passage

(Mu 213)

Because the relation of the form of direct origination of Vijnāna and mind and sky etc , mentioned in the passage —From this, is produced — is common with all entities beginning with Prāna and ending with the Earth that same should be mentioned and not the order And on account of contradiction with the order established in other Sruti passages: this does not aim at mentioning the order, on account of the apprehension of another order in the passage beginning with —the Earth gets merged in the Waters—and ending with —the Tamas becomes one— Therefore there is the origination of all products from the Highest Brahman alone with Avyakta etc , as its body And the words Tejas etc , denote Brahman itself which is their Ātman ॥ 16 ॥

[337] I say (says the objector) —If thus all the words were to denote Brahman the pointing out to the various things by the various words as established etymologically would be set aside There says— (the Sūtrakāra)

But that reference to the resort of movable and immovable is divided (secondary), on account of its envisaging the nature of that (Brahman) ॥ 17 ॥

The word Tu is for the purpose of removing the doubt raised The mention of the various words covering the entire movable and immovable things is divided — that is to say, it is applicable to the part of the thing denoted Because Brahman which has all the entities as its modes is incomprehensible by the means of proof, Direct perception etc , that apprehend the entities that are the modes, and because there is no apprehension of the entity possessing the modes prior to the study of the Vedānta, and because the culmination refers to the realisation of Brahman possessed of modes, in popular parlance the various words are used to denote the parts, referring merely to the various entities that form mere portions of the various entities denoted. Or, (the Sūtra) Carācaravyapāśrayastu, etc., is stated here, having raised the doubt—Is the reference to Brahman metaphorical, that is, not in the primary sense, by the words Tejas etc., denoting etymologically the various entities alone? Carācaravyapāśrayah, tadvyapadeśah—the word denoting that the word denoting the movable and the immovable is not metaphorical in respect of Brahman, that is, it is to be sure primary. Whence? Because the denotative nature of all words points out to the nature of Brahman, for, that much is apprehended from the Śruti referring to name, form and modification ॥ 17 ॥

Not the Ātman, on account of the Śruti, and on account of (the Ātman) being eternal from those (Śruti passages) ॥ 18 ॥

(Adhikaraṇa 3, Sūtra 18)

[338] The origination of everything, Sky etc., is stated to be as from the Highest Brahman. Now the doubt is raised—whether there is the origination of the Jiva also or not. What (is) proper? There is. Whence? On account of the solemn declaration about the knowledge of everything by the knowledge of one, being possible (only thus), and on account of oneness being emphasised prior to creation. And there are Śruti passages speaking of the origination even of the Jiva like that of the Sky etc.,—

‘प्रजापतिः प्रजा असृजत्’ (तै. ब्रा. १.१.१०)

‘सन्मूलाः सोम्येमाः सर्वाः प्रजाः सदायतनाः सत्प्रतिष्ठाः’ (छा. ६.८.४)

‘यतो वा इमानि भूतानि जायन्ते’ (तै. ३.१.१)

इति । एवं सचेतनस्य जगत उत्पत्तिवचनाज्जीवस्याप्युत्पत्तिः प्रतीयते । न च वाच्यम्—ब्रह्मणो नित्यत्वात् ‘तत्त्वमसि’ आदिभिर्जीवस्य ब्रह्मत्वावर्गमाज्जीवस्य नित्यत्वमिति,

‘सर्वं खल्विदं ब्रह्म’ (छा. ३.१५.१)

इत्येवमादिभिर्विद्यदेरपि ब्रह्मत्वावगमान्नस्यापि नित्यत्वप्रसक्तेः । अतो जीवोऽपि विद्यदादिव-

‘Prajāpati created the people’ (Tāi. Brā. 1.1.10)

‘All these people, gentle one, are rooted in Sat, have their abode in Sat, have their stability in Sat’ (Chā. 6.8.4)

(Tāi. 3.1.1)

—Thus on account of the statement about the origination of the world along with the sentient, the origination even of the Jiva is apprehended. And it should not be said that on account of Brahman being eternal, and Jiva being apprehended as being Brahman, in passages ‘That thou art’ etc., Jiva is eternal; because in that case, on account of the Sky etc., also being known to be Brahman from passages like those also would have perforce to be admitted as eternal. Therefore, the Jiva also like the Sky etc., is originated—This (prima-facie view) being reached, it is stated (in reply)—Nātmā, Śruteh—the Ātman is not originated. Whence? On account of the Śruti. In (the following) passages and others—

‘All this, has this as the Ātman’ (Chā. 6.8.7)

‘The wise one is neither born, nor dies’ (Kā. 2.18)

‘The knower and non-knower, the two unborn—the Controller, the no;-Controller’ (Śve 1.9) is declared by the Śruti the repudiation of the origination of Jiva. And the eternal nature of Ātman is apprehended from those Śruti passages themselves ‘Eternal among the eternal, the sentient among the sentients, one among the many, who lays down the desires’ (Śve 6.13)

‘अजो नित्यः शाश्वतोऽयं पुराणो न हन्यते हन्यमाने शरीरे।’ (का. २।१८)

‘Unborn, eternal, permanent, thus, the ancient one, is not killed, when the body is being killed’ (Kā. 2 18) etc. And thus the Ātman is not originate^d. How is then the solemn declaration about the knowledge of everything by the knowledge of one, feasible ?

—Thus it is feasible — on account of the Jiva also being a product, and also on account of cause and effect being non-different. (The objector) —Well, in that case, that would be tantamount to admitting (Jiva) having origination as the Sky etc. — (We reply) — No; for, being a product is, indeed, the taking to another state, by one (and the same) substance, and that (kind of Kāryatva) does exist in the case of Jiva also. This, however is the distinction — There is not that kind of transformation in the case of Jiva as obtains in the case of Viyat etc., that are non-sentient. Changing over to another state in the case of the Jiva is characterised by contraction and expansion of knowledge. In the case of sky etc. however, it is characterised by the transformation of one's (very) nature. And that such origination characterised by the change over of one's nature is repudiated in the case of the Jiva.

This is what is intended to be said —Having propounded the object of enjoyment, enjoyer, and the Controller as having separate characters; having negated in the case of the enjoyer, origination etc., belonging to the object of enjoyment; having propounded its eternal nature, also; having negated in the case of the Controller, origination etc., belonging to the object of enjoyment, and not being the resort of salvation, belonging to the enjoyer; having propounded as well his eternal nature, blameless state, being omniscient, being with thoughts fulfilled, being the master of masters of sense-organs, being the Lord of Universe at all time;—it has been propounded that the sentient and the nonsentient in all the states are the body in respect to him, and that he is the Ātman. Therefore, Brahman, on account of having for its body the sentient and the non-sentient entities always, has them as its modes. Having the sentient and the non-sentient as its body, it exists, sometimes attaining to the extremely subtle state not deserving to be designated as separate from itself; — that is Brahman in the causal state. Sometimes it has for the body the sentient and non-sentient bodies, gross, with separate names and forms — that is Brahman in the state of the effect. There, when (Brahman) in the causal state attains to the state of effect, the non-sentient portion which is bereft of (distinctions due to) words etc., in the causal state, becomes possessed of (the distinctive features) words etc., for being fit for enjoyment, and thus there is the modification of the nature of change over of one's own form. And in the case of the sentient portion for being the enjoyer of the particular fruits of Karman, there is the transformation in the form of the expansion of cognition befitting that. And in the Controller -portion particularised by both modes, there is the transformation in the form of being particularised by both, in the various states. The transformation of the causal state, in the form of attaining to another state, is common to the two modes and the entity possessing the mode. For this very reason, after having made the solemn declaration — the knowledge of everything by the knowledge of one — in (the passage)

‘By which the unheard is heard’

(Chā. 6-1-1)

—the illustrative instance of earth etc., has been pointed out in (the passage)—

etc., speaking of the origination and death of the Jīva, intending to refer to the connection and separation of the various bodies, contributing to the contraction and expansion of such knowledge. And there are Śruti passages such as

‘ Is not born, dies (not) ’

(Kā. 2-18)

and such like

‘ Eternal among the eternal ’

(Śve. 6-13)

speaking of the negation of origination and speaking of eternal nature intending to refer to the absence of change of one's nature, like the non-sentient portion.
There are Śruti passages referring to the Highest such as — ‘ He, verily, this great unborn Ātman, ageless, immortal, deathless — Brahman ’

(Br. 4-4-25)

‘ Eternal among the eternal ’

(Śve. 6-13)

intending to refer to the absence of change over of one's nature, and the absence of any undesirable changes of both kinds, of the nature of contraction and expansion of knowledge. Thus, the definite statement about Brahman being one prior to creation, particularised by the sentient and non-sentient, for all times, is appropriate, on account of the absence of the division into name and form.

‘ That, verily, this was unmodified then; it became modified in name and form ’

(Br. 1-4-7)

--thus they speak of manifoldness and oneness as due to the presence and absence (respectively) of the division into name and form.

scribe to the definite statement of oneness, on account of the absence itself of the distinction in name and form at that time (of dissolution) although the power of Avidyā, the power of the limiting adjunct, and the power of enjoyer, the object of enjoyment and the Controller, do persevere at the time of the universal dissolution; on account of the admitting of beginninglessness of the division of Jivas and the stream of their Karman by the Sūtras —

‘Disparity and mercilessness (exist) not, on account of (Īśvara) being dependent... if (it be argued) that Karman (exists) not, on account of non-division, that is appropriate on account of the beginninglessness (of Samsāra), and it is so experienced’

(Bra. Sū. II. 1-34-35)

This, however, is the speciality (here)—According to one, Brahman of its own accord, gets infatuated by the beginningless Avidyā, for another, the very nature of Brahman is circumscribed by a real beginningless adjunct, on account of the absence of any entity other than Brahman with the limiting adjunct. According to another (third) one, Brahman itself is transformed in various forms and enjoys the undesirable fruits of Karman. Even though the Controller-portion is not the enjoyer, still on account of omniscience, it gets associated with the enjoyer, not different from it, and so it itself enjoys. As for us, Brahman having for its body, sentient and non-sentient entities in gross and subtle conditions, although staying in both the states,—that of the cause and that of the effect—does remain always with any trace of any blemish removed, being the ocean of endless noble qualities like being with thoughts fulfilled etc. And there matters not pertaining to salvation belong to sentient and non-sentient entities that are the modes, and also the change over of one’s own nature—all this is thus reasonable. ॥ 18 ॥

The knower, for this very reason ॥ 19 ॥

[340] It is stated that the Jīva is not produced, like the Sky etc. In that connection, the nature of Jīva is looked into — Is the nature of Ātman mere consciousness favoured by the Bauddhas and Kapila; or is it the non-sentient nature itself, like the nature resembling that of a stone, favoured by Kaṇāda (the Vaiśeṣikas), with the occasional quality of consciousness; or is, being the knower itself, the nature of this (Jīva) ?

What (is) proper ? Mere consciousness. Whence ? On account of the Śruti to that effect. In the Brāhmaṇa dealing with the inner-Controller, the followers of the Kaṇva recension read —

‘Who, abiding in Viśṇāna’

(Br. 3·7·22)

in place of the alternative reading in the Mādhyandina recension —

‘Who, abiding in Ātman’.

Similarly in (the passage),

‘Viśṇāna spreads the sacrifice, and spreads the Karmans also’

(Tai. 2·5)

is to be found the nature of the doer Ātman, as Viśṇāna itself. And in the, Smṛti passages

(V. P. 1·2·6)

etc. is apprehended Ātman as having knowledge as his nature, (As for) the second however, (this is the position) — If it is admitted that Jīvātman is naturally the knowledge as well as the knower, there would perforce be his presence everywhere at all time as he is all-pervading, and the sense-organs would be useless; and in the states of deep sleep, swoon, etc., even though the Ātman is there, there is the non-perception of cognition, and in the waking state, there is the perception of origination of cognition, when the means thereof are there—and so, this Jīva has not knowledge as his nature, not is he a knower. And the consciousness is, verily, occasional. The all-pervading nature in the case of Ātman has got to be necessarily admitted, on account of its effects being seen everywhere, on account of the admission of the presence of the Ātman everywhere, and on account of the absence of any means of proof for postulating any movement when the effect can be possibly had by the movement itself of the body. The Śruti also points out to the absence of cognition in deep sleep in

Similarly (the Śruti) points out to the absence of cognition in the state of salvation, in (the passage)

‘Not, having departed, there is cognition’

(Br. 2.4.12; 4.5.13)

The use of the expression

‘The nature of Jñāna’

(V. P 1-2.6)

etc., (to describe Ātman) is metaphorical (and indicates) that cognition is his peculiar quality.

[341] This (prima-facie view) being reached, we say (in reply)—The knower, for this very reason. The Ātman is the knower himself, having the nature of the knower alone, not merely consciousness; not again, having a non-sentient nature. Whence? For this very reason, that is to say, from the Śruti itself. The Śruti-passage referred to in (the Sūtra)

[343] (If it be said) Not atomic, on account of no-Śruti to that effect, — (the reply is) — No, on account of (the topic) concerning the other one ॥ 22 ॥

If it be said that in (the passage),

‘Who, this constituted of Viñāna among the Prāṇas’

(Br. 4.3.7; 4.4.22)

introducing the Jīva, there is the Śruti describing his greatness,

‘He, verily, this great unborn Ātman’

(Br. 4.4.22)

and so, Jīva is not atomic — (To this, we reply) — No, on account of (the topic) concerning the other one; on account of the Prājña, other than the Jīva, being the topic there. Although in the introductory part Jīva is the matter in hand, still, because in the middle, the Highest is propounded as in —

‘To whom is known the awakened Ātman’

(Br. 4.4.13)

—and so, this greatness (magnitude) is in respect of that, and not (in respect) of the Jīva, ॥ 22 ॥

And on account of the direct word (Aṇu being used) and the dimension. ॥ 23 ॥

The word Aṇu is directly mentioned in (the Śruti-passage) —

‘This Aṇu (atomic) Ātman should be known by the mind, where the Prāṇa has entered five-fold’.

(Mu. 3.1.9)

Unmāna — measurement extracted; having taken up the thing resembling the atom, it is mentioned (in the Śruti) about Jīva having that measure —

(Sve. 5-8)

So this Ātman is, verily, atomic. ॥ 23 ॥

[344] It may be argued — If Ātman is atomic, pain pervading the whole body is not possible — There (the Sūtrakāra first) gives the refutation in accordance with another view—

Non-contradiction like the sandal ॥ 24 ॥

Just as a drop of (red sandal) Haricandana, although remaining on one part of the body, produces delight pervading the whole of the body, — like that, the Ātman also, abiding in one part of the body, experiences pain abiding in the whole of the body ॥ 24 ॥

If (it be argued, it is so in the case of the sandal) on account of its particular habitat, — (the reply is) — No, on account of (a particular habitat, in the case of the Ātman) being indeed admitted in the heart (— region) ॥ 25 ॥

If it be said — Because the drop of Haricandana etc., has a special abode in the particular part of the body, and so, there is that kind of nature (experience). But that does not exist in the case of the Ātman — (we say) — No, because even in the case of the Ātman, existence in a particular part of the body is admitted. The staying of the Ātman in the heart-region is mentioned in the Śruti —

‘This Ātman is indeed in the heart, and there are a hundred and one veins.’

'Who, this one, constituted of Vijñāna, among the Prāṇas, the inner light in the heart' (Br. 4.3.7)

etc.— The illustrative instance of the sandal is set forth to point out the abiding of the Ātman in a particular part of the body. In the case of the sandal, however, there is no need of a specific region. ॥ 25 ॥

(The Sūtrakāra) refers according to his own view, to the manner in which a thing residing in one part can do its task of pervading the whole body

Or, on account of the quality, like light ॥ 26 ॥

The word Vā is for the purpose of excluding the other view. The Ātman remains pervading the whole body, by his quality, — knowledge — like light. Just as the light of gems, the Sun etc., residing only in one region is not seen as pervading (only) one region; similarly the consciousness of the Ātman residing in the heart is there, pervading the whole body. It is proper that the cognition standing in the position of the lustre, of the knower, exists elsewhere than its own resort, like the lustre of the gem, — this has been established in the first Sūtra. ॥ 26 ॥

[345] I say (says the objector) — It has been stated that mere consciousness alone is the Ātman; then, how is it stated that consciousness is the quality apart from his nature? — There (the Sūtrakāra) says (by way of reply) —

The separateness, like the smell, and (the Śruti) points out to that effect. ॥ 27 ॥

Just as the smell which is perceived as the quality of the Earth is other than that, similarly, that consciousness which is apprehended as the quality of the knower, in the form — I know — is proved to be separate from the Ātman.

(Br. 4-3-30)

॥ 28 ॥

[346] As to what has been stated in (passages)

‘Who, abiding in Vijñāna’

(Br. 3-7-22)

‘Vijñāna spreads the sacrifice’

(Tai. 2-5)

‘The nature of Jñāna, extremely pure’

(V. P. 1-2-6)

etc. it is pointed out that Jñāna alone is the Atman—There says (the Sūtrakāra)

The designation of that (Vijñāna), on account of the Atman's having that quality as his essence, like Prājña. ॥ 29 ॥

The word Tu turns away the objection. Tadgunasāratvāt—on account of having the quality of Vijñāna as the essence, there is the designation of Atman as Vijñāna. Vijñāna alone is his essential quality. Just as, because bliss is the essential quality of Prājña, Prājña is referred to by the word Ānanda (bliss) in

‘If this Ākāśa were not the Ānanda’

(Tai. 2-7)

‘One should know Ānanda as Brahman’.

(Tai. 3-6)

For, indeed of the Prājña, Ānanda is the essential quality, in (passages)

‘स एको ब्रह्मण आनन्दः’ (तै. २।८)

‘आनन्दं ब्रह्मणो विद्वान् बिभेति कुतश्चन’ (तै. २।९)

इति । यथा वा

‘सत्यं ज्ञानमनन्तं ब्रह्म’ (तै. २।१)

[347] यच्चोक्तं सुषुप्त्यादिषु ज्ञानाभावाज्ज्ञानस्य न स्वरूपानुबन्धिधर्मत्वमिति, तत्राह—

‘That is the sole Ānanda of Brahman’ (Tai. 2.8)

‘Knowing the Ānanda of Brahman, he does not fear anywhere’ (Tai. 2.9) or, as in (the passage)

‘Existence, Knowledge, Infinite Brahman’ (Tai. 2.1)

there is a reference by the word Jñāna to the wise one, Prājña. In (passages)

‘With Brahman, the wise one’ (Tai. 2.1)

‘Who, omniscient’ (Mu. 1.1.9)

etc., it is known that Jñāna is the essential quality of the Prājña ॥ 29 ॥

And, (the quality exists), so long as the Ātman exists,—on account of this, there is no fault, on account of that being seen (elsewhere) ॥ 30 ॥

On account of Vijñāna being the attribute as long as the Ātman exists, the reference by that (Vijñāna to the Ātman) is no fault. And similarly, the broken-horned etc., are seen being referred to as bull, by the word denoting the attribute bullness etc., existing as long as the nature (of the bull) exists—that is to say, on account of its being the attribute describing its nature. By the use of Ca (and), Ātman also, like Jñāna, being self-illuminating, there is no fault in referring (to Ātman) as Jñāna, (the Sūtrakāra) brings in this addition. ॥ 30 ॥

[347] As to what has been said that in the case of deep sleep etc., there is the absence of Jñāna, and so Jñāna is not an attribute persisting in his nature—There says (the Sūtrakāra)—

पुंस्त्वादिवत्त्वस्य सतोभिव्याक्तियोगात् ॥ ३१ ॥

तुशब्दश्चोदिताशङ्कानिवृत्त्यर्थः । अस्य ज्ञानस्य सुषुप्त्यादिव्यवि विद्यमानस्य जागर्यादिव्यभिव्यक्तिसंभवात्स्वरूपानुबन्धिधर्मवोपपात्तिः । पुंस्त्वादिवत् । यथा पुंस्त्वाद्यसाधारणस्य धातोर्बाल्याद्यस्थायां सतोऽप्यनभिव्यक्तस्य युवत्वेऽभिव्यक्तौ पुंस्स्तद्वत्ता न कादाचित्की भवति । सप्तधातुमयत्वं हि शरीरस्य स्वरूपानुबन्धि ।

इत्यपि न मुक्तस्य ज्ञानाभाव उच्यते, अपि तु

‘एतेभ्यो भूतेभ्यः समुत्थाय तान्नेषानुविनश्यति’ (बृ. २।४।१२)

But on account of the association with the manifestation of the (attribute) existing in this (Ātman), like the virile power etc. ॥ 31 ॥

The word Tu (but) is for the sake of turning away the doubt raised. In the case of this Jñāna existing even in deep sleep etc., there is the possibility of its manifestation in the waking state etc., and so, its being an attribute persisting in its nature is appropriate. Like the (virile) nature of a man etc. — Just as the virile ingredient etc., the essential characteristic of a man, although existing in childhood, is unmanifest, and is manifested in youth, — by this (one cannot say that) being possessed of that virility is only occasional in a man. For, being constituted of the seven basic substances persists in the nature of the body, on account of the nature of the body as pointed out in (the passage) —

‘That body has seven basic substances, has three blemishes, two sources, made up of fourfold eatables’. (Garbhopa. 1)

It has already been stated that even in deep sleep etc., the I-entity shines forth. — And his existing consciousness is perceived in the waking state etc., as comprising objects of knowledge. And these attributes of the Ātman, — bring the knower etc., have been pointed out already. Therefore, the nature of the Jīvātman is being the knower itself. And that same, this Ātman is atomic in dimension. Even in (the passage) —

‘No consciousness exists, after departing’ (Br 2-4-12)

— is not mentioned the absence of Jñāna in the released Soul; but on the contrary, (what is stated is) that the perception of birth, destruction etc., prompted by something associated with the beings in the state of worldly existence, in (the passage) —

‘Having risen up from these elements he perishes after them’

(Br. 2-4-12)

॥ 31 ॥

[348] Now, (the Sūtrakāra) speaks of the blemish in the doctrine advocating Jñāna as the Ātman, if he is all pervading —

Otherwise (there would be) the undesirable contingency —, all-time perception and non-perception, or either as a rule. ॥ 32 ॥

Otherwise, according to the doctrine that he is all-pervading, and the doctrine that he is mere consciousness, there would perforce be the perception and non-perception indeed always together, or either as a rule — there would be perception alone always, or non-perception alone. This is what is intended to be said —

In the case of the perception and non-perception of the Ātman obtaining for the matter of that in the world, this all-pervading Jñānātman would be the cause of perception alone or of non-perception alone. If he were the cause of both, there would perforce be existing both everywhere always; if (Ātman is the cause) of the perception alone, there would not be non-perception of everything, everywhere at any time; if only of non-perception, there would be no perception at any time anywhere. As for us, on account of the Ātman abiding, verily, within the body, there alone is the perception of that, and not elsewhere — this is the settled arrangement. Even if (the perception is said to

Here ends the Jñādhikarana (4)

The Agent, on account of the Sāstra being significant ॥ 33 ॥

[349] It has been stated that this Ātman is the knower, and that he is atomic in dimension. Now, it is considered—Is he alone the agent, or, being himself indeed a non-agent he superimposes upon himself the nature of the agent of the non-sentient qualities? What (is) proper here? Ātman (is) but a non-agent. Whence? For, it is pointed out in metaphysical works that Ātman is a non-agent and the nature of an agent belongs to the qualities. To explain the same—

In the Katha sections, repudiating all the qualities of the Prakṛti, such as birth, old age, death etc., in the case of the Jīva in (the passage) beginning with

‘ He is not born nor dies ’,

is repudiated the nature of the agent also, in respect of acts such as killing etc., in (the passage) —

‘ If the killer thinks of killing, if the killed one thinks (himself as) killed,—both those do not know—this one neither kills, nor is killed ’.

(Kā 2-19)

—That is to say—knowing Ātman to be the killer, one does not know the Ātman. And likewise by the Lord himself personally, has been spoken of स्वरूपं कर्तृत्वाभिमानस्तु व्यामोह इत्युच्यते ।

‘प्रकृतेः कियमाणानि गुणैः कर्माणि सर्वज्ञः ।’

(गीता १४।१९)

‘कार्यकारणकर्तृत्वे हेतुः प्रकृतिरुच्यते ।’

पुरुषः सुखदुःखानां भोक्तृत्वे हेतुरुच्यते ॥’

इति च । अतः पुरुषस्य भोक्तृत्वमेव । प्रकृतेरेव तु कर्तृत्वम् ।

एवं प्राप्ते, प्रचक्ष्महे—कर्ता शास्त्रार्थवत्त्वात् । आत्मेव कर्ता न गुणाः । कस्मात् ? शास्त्रार्थवत्त्वात् । शास्त्राणि हि, यजेत स्वर्गकामः, मुमुक्षुर्वह्नीपासीत, इत्येवमादीनि स्वर्गमोक्षादिफलस्य भोक्तारमेव कर्तृत्वे नियुज्यते । न एचेतनस्य कर्तृत्वे चेतनो नियुज्यते । शास्त्रनाच्च शास्त्रम्, शास्त्रं च प्रवर्तनम्, शास्त्रस्य च प्रवर्तकत्वं बोधजननद्वारेण । अचेतनं च प्रधानं न बोधयितुं शक्यम् । अतः शास्त्राणामर्थवत्त्वं भोक्तृचेतनस्यैव कर्तृत्वे भवेत् । तदुक्तम्
‘शास्त्रफल प्रयोक्तारि’
(जै त् ३।७।१८)

the nature of the Jīva as being the non-agent, and the regarding oneself as an agent as infatuation in ‘Karmans on all sides (are) being done by the Gunas of Prakṛti, (but) one with mind confounded by Ahankāra (I-ness) thinks—I (am) the doer’

(Gītā 3.7)

‘When the Seer perceives no other agent than the Gunas’
(Gītā 14.19)

and

‘Prakṛti is spoken of as the cause in respect of the body, sense-organs and the state of the agent; Puruṣa is spoken of as the cause in respect of the nature of the enjoyer of pleasures and miseries’.
(Gītā 13.20)

Therefore, the Puruṣa has the nature of the enjoyer alone, and Prakṛti alone has the nature of the agent—

This (prima-facie view) being reached, we say (in reply)—The Agent, on account of the Sāstra being significant—Ātman alone is the agent, not the qualities,—How? On account of the Sāstra being significant For, the (passages in the) Sāstras,—one desirous of heaven should sacrifice, one desirous of liberation should meditate on Brahman—these and others assign the nature of an agent to the enjoyer alone of the fruit,—heaven, salvation etc. Not indeed, is a sentient assigned the nature of an agent belonging to the non-sentient, the Sāstra is (so called) because of its Śāsana (ordering), and Śāsana, is—directing (one) to act and the role of a director in the case of Sāstra is through producing knowledge And it is impossible that the non-sentient Pradhāna should enlighten one. Therefore it is only when the enjoyer, a sentient one, is the agent, that the Sāstra can have significance That is stated in (the Sūtra)

As to what has been stated in (the passage)

‘ If the killer thanks ’

(Kā. 2.19)

etc., that the Ātman is mentioned as the non-agent in respect of the killingact,—that is said on account of the absence of (the Ātman) being fit to be killed as the Ātman is eternal. And as to (the statement) that the qualities alone are known in the Smṛti-works to be the agent, in (the passage)

‘ Of the Prakṛti, being done ’

(Gītā 3.27)

etc.,—there is the nature of the doer, of this (Ātman) in respect of activities pertaining to the worldly existence, due to the association of qualities, Sattva, Rajas and Tamas, and not prompted by his own nature, and so, it is stated that the qualities alone are the agent, in the light of the discrimination about what is pertinent and what is not pertinent. And similarly it has been stated even there

‘ Association of this one with the Guṇas (is) the cause of his births in good and bad wombs (families) ’

(Gītā 13.21)

Similarly, even there is stated, after taking for granted Ātman as the agent—

‘ There, this being the case, he who perceives the Ātman alone as the agent, with his intellect not (properly) developed,—that one, of wrong ideas, sees not. ’

(Gītā 18.16)

And when the nature of the Ātman as an agent, being dependent upon (things) kinds, and the manifold several activity; and fate, verily, (is)

With the introduction

‘As a great king’

(Br. 2।1।18)

in

‘In this very way, he, catching hold of these vital airs, moves about at will within his body’

(Br 2।1।18)

the nature of the agent is referred to, in the matter of taking hold of the Prāṇas, and sporting about. ॥ 34 ॥

And on account of the reference (to being the agent) in respect of acts, if (Ātman is) not (the agent), there would be a change in the reference (of that matter) ॥ 35 ॥

And Ātman is the doer on account of the description of (his) being the doer in mundane and Vedic activities in (the passage) —

‘Vijñāna spreads the sacrifice and also spreads the Karmans’

(Tai 2-5)

If it be argued that there is no reference to Ātman by the word Vijñāna, but to Buddhi, the inner sense-organ — (then our reply is) — If this is the case, there would have been a change in the way the reference is made. Because Buddhi is the instrument, there should have been the pointing out (of that Buddhi) by the instrumental case as Vijñānena (by Vijñāna) ॥ 35 ॥

No rule, like the perception. ॥ 36 ॥

A blemish is pointed out, if Ātman were not to be the agent — Just as it has been pointed out that, in case Ātman were to be all-pervading, there is non-regulation in

‘(There would be) the undesirable contingency—all-time perception or non-perception’.

(Bra Sū. II. 3.32)

etc.,—like that, if Ātman were not to be the agent, and if Prakṛti were to be the agent,—all Karmans would be there for the enjoyment of all, because that (Prakṛti) would be common to all the Purusas; or, not indeed of some one at all. Owing to admitting Ātman to be all-pervading, even his presence is unrestricted to all. For this very reason, no rule even in the case of the inner sense-organ etc., can be reasonable, depending on which there would be the proper adjustment. ॥ 36 ॥

On account of the change of power ॥ 37 ॥

If Buddhi were to be the agent, there being the impossibility of another agent being the enjoyer, even the power of being the enjoyer would belong to it (Buddhi) alone—thus the Ātman would be divested of his power as enjoyer; and because the nature of enjoyer would befall Buddhi alone, there would be the absence of the means of proof regarding the existence of the Ātman. For, it is their tenet that ‘Puruṣa exists by virtue of the nature of an enjoyer’.

(Sā. Kā. 17)

And on account of the absence of the state of concentration ॥ 38 ॥

If Buddhi were to be the agent, it would be the agent even in the Samādhi (state), the means of salvation. And the Samādhi is of the form (of the cognition)—I am other than Prakṛti—and the Prakṛti (entertaining the idea)—I am other than Prakṛti—is not competent to indulge in concentration. Therefore also, the Ātman alone is the agent. ॥ 33 ॥

I say (says the objector)—If it were admitted that the Ātman is the agent, his activity for all time would not cease—To this, (the Sūtrakāra) says—

And as the carpenter in both ways. ॥ 39 ॥

The Ātman, although endowed with the sense-organs—Vāk (Speech) etc., acts when he wishes, but does not act when he wishes not ; just as a carpenter even when the tools, axe etc., are near, acts or does not act, according to his will. But, if the non-sentient Buddhi were to be the agent, there is bound to be activity for all time, on account of the absence of any regulating cause such as desire for enjoyment, etc. ॥ 39 ॥

[350] Is this activity of the Jīva independent, or dependent upon the Paramātmān ? What is reached (as the prima-facie view) ? —Independent. If (the activity) were to depend upon the Paramātmān, the Sāstra-passages dealing with injunctions and prohibitions would perforce be useless. For, he who is competent to begin or refrain from an activity by his own will—he alone is fit to be enjoined. Therefore, his is an independent activity.—This (prima-facie view) being reached, it is stated (in reply)—But from the Highest. The word Tu turns away the (preceding) view. That activity of his is there—Parāt—from the Paramātmān alone, the cause. Whence ? On account of the Śruti (passages)—

[351] I say (says the objector)—It has been said (by me) that there would perforce be the uselessness of the Sāstra-passages dealing with injunctions and prohibitions—There (the Sūtrakāra) says—

But (Īśvara) is dependent upon the effort made, so that there would not be uselessness of injunctions and prohibitions etc.

॥ 41 ॥

In respect of all activities, Paramātmān, the inner Controller, makes (the Puruṣa) act, by granting him permission, taking into account the effort, labour gone through by the Puruṣa. This is the sense—Without the permission of the Paramātmān, his activity would not be forthcoming. Whence this ? Vihutaprasiddhā-vaiyarthya-dibhyah—(So that the thing enjoined and the thing prohibited etc would not be useless) By the word Ādi are to be understood, favour, control etc. Just as when two are sharing wealth, the taking over of what belongs to another, is not possible without the consent of the other, still because the consent of the other (practically) is his own act, the fruit thereof belongs to him alone. Giving the consent even by one who is competent to dissuade one from a sinful act, does not amount to his being merciless—This has been propounded in the exposition of the Sāṅkhya doctrine.

I say (says the objector) — Thus (what is stated) in (the passage) desire to lift him up or to throw him down,—this does not stand to reason —(This) is stated (in reply)—This (is) not (a statement) applicable to all But he who is extremely well established in the favour of the Highest Puruṣa acts the divine one himself, of his own accord, favouring him, creates love (in him) for only those extremely auspicious acts which are the means to attain to him And for him who is extremely firmly established in his disfavour He creates love for acts opposed to the attainment to Him, which are the means of the downward course As has been said by the Lord himself in beginning with—

A portion of Brahman, on account of being designated as manifold, and also otherwise; some read (his) being possessed of the state of fishermen, gamblers etc. ॥ 42 ॥

(Adhikaraṇa 7, Sūtras 42-52)

[352] It has been said, that Jiva's being the agent is dependent upon the Highest Puruṣa. Now a doubt is raised—Is this Jiva absolutely different from the Highest, or is he the Highest Brahman itself infatuated, or Brahman itself characterised by limiting adjuncts, or a portion of Brahman?—The doubt is due to the conflicting Śrūti (in this respect). I say (says the objector)—in (the Sūtras),

‘There is the non-different nature on account of the words Ārambhana etc.’

(Bra. Sū. II. 1-15)

‘But more (in addition), on account of the reference as different’

(Bra. Sū. II. 1-22)

this matter has been decided here itself—(We reply) True, that same is decided in particular by declaring the Jiva to be a portion of Brahman, after having objected to it on the strength of the conflict between the Śruti (passages) referring to (Jiva's) being manifold and (his) being one, for, so long as it has not been decided that Jiva is a portion of Brahman, Jiva's being not different from Brahman, and Brahman's being over and above that, would not stand. What, for the matter of that, is (the prima-facie view) reached ? Absolutely different. Whence ? On account of the pointing out to the difference in etc — The Śruti passages mentioning the non-difference between the knower and the non-knower are secondary in sense, on account of their putting forth contradictory views, like — one sprinkles by the fire (The view) that the Jiva is a portion of Brahman, also cannot be justified, for, the word Amśa denotes a part of an object. If Jiva is a part of Brahman, blemishes belonging to him would exist in Brahman. Nor again is to be accounted for, the state of being a portion, because Jiva is a cut off portion of Brahman on account of Brahman being incapable of being cut into, and on account of the blemishes spoken of before intruding. Therefore, (in respect of Jiva) totally different from Brahman, his being a portion of that (Brahman) is difficult to sustain.

Or, Jiva is Brahman itself in a state of infatuation. Whence ? On account of the instruction about Brahman being the Ātman in (passages)

‘That thou art’

(Chā 6 8 7)

‘This Ātman (is) Brahman’

(Br. 2 5 19)

etc — As to (the Śrutis) mentioning manifoldness, they are declared as being within the fold of Avidyā by Śruti-passages giving instruction about non-duality not proved otherwise, like Direct perception etc., on account of their merely repeating the matter proved by Direct perception etc.

Or, Jiva is Brahman itself characterised by beginningless limiting adjuncts. Whence ? On account of the instruction about the Brahman being the Ātman, for that very reason. Nor again, is it possible to say that this limiting adjunct is imagined by infatuation, on account of the impossibility of the regulated arrangement about bondage and salvation,

A portion of Brahman. Whence ? On account of the mention of (his) nature as many. Anyathā ca—and on account of the mention as being one, for, the reference is seen as being both ways. The reference is being many, for the matter of that, is seen by (the mention of) being the creator, being fit to be created, being the controller, being liable to control; being omniscient, being ignorant, being self-dependent, being dependent upon another, being pure, being impure; being the mine of auspicious qualities, being the opposite of that; being the master, being the subordinate etc.—And also otherwise, the reference as being not different is also seen in (passages)

‘That thou art’

(Chā 6 8 7)

‘This Ātman, (is) Brahman’

(Br 2-5-19)

etc. Also, some read the Jiva being fishermen, gamblers etc The students of the Atharvāna read Brahman being fishermen, gamblers etc as well, in the (passages)

(Ātharvāna Sūkta)

—That is to say, from that is pointed out non-difference owing to (Brahman) pervading all Jivas Thus, this Jiva ought to be admitted as a portion of Brahman, in order that this twofold reference could be proved to be in the primary sense Nor again, are the difference-references proved otherwise, on account of the matter being established by Direct perception etc Being fit to be created by Brahman, being fit to be controlled by it (Brahman), being its body, being its subordinate, having it for his support, being its ward, being fit to be withdrawn by it, being its worshipper, being the enjoyer of the fourfold human purpose in life, constituted of Dharma, Artha, Kāma, and Moksa, that are to be secured by its grace, etc,—and the difference caused by that, between Jiva and Brahman, are not proved otherwise, on account of their not coming within the province of Direct perception etc. Therefore (the Sruti-passages) advocating the creation of the world are not aiming at instructing about something false, on account of their repeating the difference proved by other means of proof. Nor again, can it be declared that Brahman was under an illusion, (infatuation)—Brahman having an unbroken uniform pure consciousness as its nature, bringing about the connection of the Ātman with a nature other than that, the creation, sky etc., preceded by the thought as to being manifold, entrance into the same in the form of Jīva, the modification in various names and forms, the sharing of happiness, misery caused by the experience of endless objects of sense caused by that (modification) having stayed there, not as an enjoyer, being the inner Controller owing to its checking that (Jīva) and ensuring its own persistence as the cause Brahman, existing as Jīva and effecting release from Samsāra, and being responsible for the Sāstra giving instructions about that—If that were the case, this would amount to the ravings of a madman !

(The idea) that Brahman circumscribed by the limiting adjuncts is the Jīva, cannot be proved either, on account of the presence itself of the reference to being the controller, being fit to be controlled etc., mentioned before. Not indeed, in the case of one and the same Devadatta, is the establishment of the nature of the controller and the controlled etc., on account of the different limiting adjuncts, house etc. Therefore, in order to account for the twofold reference it should be admitted that this Jīva is a portion of Brahman ॥ 42 ॥ account of the Jivas being many. The singular number in the Sūtra also, Amsāḥ, is intended to refer to the universal. The singular number in

is here also intended to refer to the universal (genus), on account of the difference from Īśvara and the Ātmans also being many and eternal, being mentioned in the Śruti (passages) such as ‘Eternal among the eternal, sentient among the sentient, one among many, who lays down the desires’.

(Śve. 6. 13)

In this manner, when the (fact of the) eternal Ātmans being many, is backed by means of proof, although all of them are uniform, by having the nature of consciousness, their distinguishing form is apprehended by those competent to know the nature as it is of Ātman. Immediately afterwards (the Sūtrakāra) would mention the Ātmans being many, in (the Sūtra)

[355] The word Tu (but) turns away the objection Like light etc , Jiva is a portion of the Paramātmān,—as for instance, the light in the form of refulgence is a portion of the refulgent fire, the Sun etc , as for instance, the attributes, bullness etc , are part and parcel of entities particularised by bullness etc —bull horse, white, dark etc , or as for instance, the body is the portion of the embodied gods, men etc,—like that. For, being a portion means existing in a part of one object. The attribute of a qualified entity is but a portion of it And so, discriminating people point out in the case of a qualified entity—This is the attribute-portion, this (is) a portion—the thing qualified Even though the qualifying attribute and the qualified have the relation of part and whole, there is seen difference in their natures In the same way, in the case of the Jiva and the Highest—the attribute and the qualified—is appropriate the relation of part and whole, and the difference in nature All this is said (by the Sūtrakāra in the Sūtra-portion) Not so, (is) the Highest. As the Jiva is, not like that, the Highest,—that is to say, just as, indeed the lustre is different from the lustrous, in the same way from the Jiva, his portion, corresponding to the lustre, (is) the Highest, the whole, a different entity Thus, references pertaining to the difference become current, resorting to the difference in nature caused by the relation of the attribute and the qualified, in the case of the Jiva and the Highest The references to non-difference, on the other hand, are appropriate in the primary sense, pertaining to the attributes not fit for staying separately culminating into the thing qualified , because like the word Tat and the word Brahman in (the passages)—

(Chā 6 8 7)

‘This Ātman, Brahman’

(Br 2 5 19)

etc, the words Tvam, Ayam Ātmā also denote the same sense, being denotative of Brahman with Jiva as its body This matter has already been dealt with in detail ॥ 45 ॥

etc., also speak of the relation of the part and whole, due to the relation of the Ātman and the body. ॥ 46 ॥

[356] In this way, when being the portion of Brahman, being the servant of Brahman, and being the knower (are) common to all — permission in respect of the study of the Vedas, and the ritual thereof, in the case of some, and prohibition of the same in the case of others, permission in the case of some, for the sight and touch, and the prohibition of the same in the case of some in the Sāstras—How is (all this) to be reconciled ?—Raising this doubt, (the Sūtrakāra) says—

Permission and prohibition from the relation with the body, like the flame etc. ॥ 47 ॥

अखण्डिकरसप्रकाशमात्रस्वरूपस्य स्वरूपतिरोधानपूर्वकोपाधिभेदोपादानहेतुः, आभास

Although all are possessed of a uniform nature, in being a portion of Brahman, being the knower etc., permission and prohibition are appropriate depending upon association with bodies,—pure and impure, in the form of Brāhmaṇa, Ksatriya, Vaiśya, Śūdra etc.—Like the flame etc.—Just as though fire is of a uniform nature as fire, the fire from the fire-sanctuary of a learned Agnihotrin is taken; but the fire from the cemetery etc., is avoided; just as food etc., from a learned Brāhmaṇa etc., are permitted, but from a low caste fellow, etc., are prohibited. ॥ 47 ॥

On account of non-connection, (there is) no commingling ॥ 48 ॥

Although the Jivas are possessed of a uniform nature in being the portion of Brahman etc., there would not be commingling either of enjoyment, on account of their being mutually different, and being different for each body, owing to their being atomic. In the doctrine advocating Jiva as being Brahman infatuated, and in the doctrine advocating Jiva as Brahman circumscribed (by the limiting adjuncts), there would be all the blemishes like the commingling of the enjoyments in the case of the Highest and the Jīva, and among the Jīvas—Bearing this in mind, the absence of the commingling of the enjoyment according to his own view has been spoken (by the Sūtrakāra). ॥ 48 ॥

[357] I say (says the objector)—Even in the doctrine advocating Jīva as being Brahman infatuated, regulated arrangement about enjoyment etc., would be there on account of the deference of the limiting adjuncts caused by Avidyā.—So, (the Sūtrakāra) says (in reply to this) —

And (the Hetu) only a fallacy. ॥ 49 ॥

In the case of an entity having only untruffled and uniform light as its nature, the logical mark propounding the difference in the limiting adjuncts preceded by the screening of its nature, is but a fallacy. It has already been expounded before that the screening of light in the case of one having light alone as the nature, is nothing but the destruction of light.

Or, the reading is—Abhāsa eva. In that case, (the meaning is) — the logical reasonings are fallacious. On account of (the word) Ca, is referred to also the contradiction with the Śrutis—

‘Having regarded the Ātman as separate and impeller’

(Śve 1-6)

‘The Knower and the non-Knower, the two, Controller and non-Controller’

(Śve. 1-9)

‘Of the two, one eats the sweet fruit of the Pippala’

(Mu. 3-1-1; Śve. 4-6)

etc., In the case of the difference in the limiting adjuncts imagined by Avidyā, the commingling of the enjoyment continues in the same form, on account of the admission of there being only one thing with its nature screened by all limiting adjuncts. ॥ 49 ॥

[358] Even in the doctrine advocating Jīva as Brahman screened by real limiting adjuncts, there would be a (proper) regulated adjustment, by virtue of the beginningless Unseen, the cause of the difference of limiting adjuncts — Raising this doubt, (the Sūtrakāra) says —

On account of the non-regulation by the Unseen. ॥ 50 ॥

In the case of the Unseen also, which is the cause of the series of limiting adjuncts, there being the absence of any cause for regulation owing to the nature of Brahman being its resort, the absence of any regulated arrangement does persist, because it is impossible that the nature of Brahman could be cut off by the limiting adjuncts and Unseens, by their own connection ॥ 50 ॥

And even in the case of meditation etc., this same ॥ 51 ॥

Even in the case of meditation etc., which are the cause of the Unseen there is the non-regulation, owing to the cause already mentioned. ॥ 51 ॥

[359] If (it be said) that although one and the same nature of Brahman, not deserving any cut by them (limiting adjuncts) is connected with the limiting adjuncts of various sorts, still, the regulated arrangement about enjoyment would duly be there, on account of the difference of the regions of Brahman connected with the limiting adjuncts—(our reply is) —That (is) not (so), because the limiting adjuncts would be going all over the place, and all the regions would come within the limiting adjuncts, the commingling would be there in the same condition. Although there is the association involving difference of region, everything being the region occupied by Brahman, the misery associated with the various regions would belong to Brahman alone. Fourth Quarter of the Second Chapter

[360] While speaking of the origination of the entire (world)—Sky etc., other than Brahman, owing to its being a product, in the case of the Jīva, origination characterised by the nature being otherwise, was denied even though Jīva is a product. The nature of Jīva also was clarified in dealing with this (question). Now, the manner of origination etc., of the sense-organs, the instruments (for enjoyment) of Jīva, and of Prāṇa is held under scrutiny (lit. being clarified).

There it is considered—Are the sense-organs an effect like the Jīva or like Sky etc. ? What (is) proper ? The disputant holding the prima-facie view says—Like the Jīva himself ; (on account of the Sūtra) In the same way, the Prāṇas—Prāṇāḥ—sense-organs. As the Jīva is not produced, similarly the sense-organs also are not produced.—Whence ? On account of the Śruti—Just as the non-origination of the Jīva is apprehended from the Śruti, so, the non-origination of the Prāṇas is apprehended from the Śruti itself. The proof (in that connection) also is (here) extended by—In the same way, the Prāṇas. What again is the Śruti here?—

‘Asat, verily, was this in the beginning. There they ask—What was it at that time?—The seers, verily, they—in the beginning there was the Sat; they ask—Who (were) those seers ? The Prāṇas, verily, the seers’.

(Śa. Brā. 6-1-1)

—thus prior to the origination of the world, the existence of the sense-organs is mentioned in the Śruti. On account of the plural number of the word Prāṇas, it is ascertained that the sense-organs themselves (are meant here). Nor again, can this Śruti passage, like

‘वायुश्चान्तरिक्षं चैतदमृतम्’

‘The wind and the mud region—this immortal’ (Br 2.3.3)

‘That this is the deity that never goes to set, viz the be construed as referring to staying for a long time, on account of the Sruti passage

‘Asat verily, was this in the beginning’ (Śa. Brā 6.1.1) mentioning their stay even at the time of the dissolution of the entire worldly existence As for the (Sruti passages) advocating the origination (of Prāṇas), they should be construed like those (Srutis) advocating the origination of Jiva—This (prima-facie view) being reached, this is stated (in reply)—Like the Sky etc, themselves, the Prāṇas also are originated, Whence ?

On account of the ascertainment of everything being one prior to creation in (passages)

‘Existent (Sat) alone, gentle one, was this at the beginning’
(Cha 6.2.1)

‘The Ātman verily, this one alone, was in the beginning’ (Aī 1.1)

etc, and on account of the mention in the Sruti

‘From this, is originated Prāṇa, mind, and all sense-organs’
(Mu 2.1.3)

of the origination of the sense-organs they could not be staying prior (to origination) Nor again is it possible to construe the passages under discussion about the origination of sense-organs like the passages dealing with the origination of the Ātman because as in the case of the Ātman there are not seen Sruti passages repudiating the origination and Sruti passages teaching about the eternal nature

‘असदा इदमय आसीत्’ (शत. ब्रा. ६.१.११)
 इत्यादिवाक्येऽपि प्राणशब्देन परमात्मैव निर्दिश्यते,

इतश्च प्राणशब्दः परमात्मवचनः, वाचः परमात्मव्यतिरिक्तविषयस्य नामधेयस्य

‘तद्देहं तर्हीष्याकृतमासीत् । तन्नामरूपाभ्यां व्याक्रियत’ (बृ. १.४.७)

Even in the passage

‘Asat, verily, was this in the beginning’ (Śata. Brā. 6.1.1) it is the Paramātman himself that is pointed out by the word Prāṇa, because the word Prāṇa is well-known in the sense of the Paramātman also as in ‘All these beings, indeed, verily, enter into Prāṇa alone, leave off Prāṇa’. (Chā. 1.11.5)

The word R̥ṣi in (the passage)

‘Prāṇas, verily, the seers (R̥ṣayah)’ (Śata. Brā. 6.1.1) is used referring to the same Omniscient (Paramātman), not again referring to the non-sentient sense-organs. ॥ 1 ॥

[361] If (it be asked)—How is the Śruti (passage)—The R̥ṣis (are) the Prāṇas — using the plural number, appropriate ? — there (the Sūtrakāra) says—

Metaphorical, on account of the impossibility; and (Paramātman) being mentioned in the Śruti as being prior to that (creation) ॥ 2 ॥

The Śruti-passage containing the plural number is (to be understood as) metaphorical, on account of the impossibility of the sense—Many,—on account of that very Paramātman being mentioned in the Śruti itself, as staying prior to creation. ॥ 2 ॥

On account of Vāk being prior to that. ॥ 3 ॥

For this reason also, the word Prāṇa denotes Paramātman, on account of Vāk, the name referring to entities other than Paramātman, which is the province of speech, being there prior to the creation of Sky etc. That is to say—on account of the absence of entities resorting to name and form, according to (the passage)

‘Then this indeed was unmodified. That became modified in name and form’ (Br. 1.4.7) and on account of the absence of the functioning of the sense-organs Vāk (speech) etc.—they do not exist ॥ 3 ॥

Here ends the Prānotpattyadhikarana (1)

Seven, on account of the movement and being particularised ॥ 4 ॥

(Adhikarana 2, Sūtras 4-5)

[362] It is now considered—Are those sense-organs only seven, or eleven ? The doubt (arises) on account of the contradiction in the Srutis—What (is the prima-facie view) reached ? Seven—Whence ? On account of the movement and being particularised As for the movement it is mentioned in the Sruti of the seven only, of the nature of moving about in the worlds, along with the Jiva being born and dying in

(Mu 2।8)

—The repetition (of Sapta) refers to the different individuals And those Prānas moving about are particularised in their nature—as in

‘ When the five cognitions are steadied on, along with the mind, and Buddha does not function,—they call that the final course ’

(K 6।10)

Paramā gathi (the final course) is the moving out for the sake of Mokṣa, abandoning the moving about within the body Thus because the Sruti describes the movement of the seven alone, along with the Jiva in birth and in death, and they are particularised as cognitions in the state of Yoga —it is known that the instruments (at the disposal) of Jiva, are seven alone—viz ear, skin, eye, tongue, nose Buddha and mind As to the other sense-organs that are apprehended as extending upto fourteen on account of their being cognisers of the objects of senses, in (the passage)

‘अष्टौ ग्रहाः’

‘सप्त वे शीर्षण्याः प्राणा द्वाववाञ्चौ’

(तै. सं. ५.११.७.११)

(Br. 3-2-1)

‘Seven, verily, are the Prāṇas in the head, two down below’

(Tai. Sam. 5-1-7-1)

etc., and designated as tongue, hand, foot, organ of evacuation, organ of generation, Ahaṁkāra, and mind in passages dealing with Prāṇa,—their reference as Prāṇa is metaphorical, owing to their obliging the Jīva in a slight manner, there being the absence in the Śruti of any movement. ॥ 4 ॥

[363] This (prima-facie view) being reached, we say (in reply) —

But hand etc., when (the Jīva is) abiding (in the body); therefore not thus. ॥ 5 ॥

The sense-organs are not only seven, but indeed eleven; because hands etc., also are the means of his enjoyment, when the Jīva abides in the body and there is also the difference in their functions. For, as in the case of ear etc., even in the case of hand etc., is seen different functioning, like taking etc. Therefore, they also do exist. Ato naivam — therefore, not thus; therefore, it should not be thought that hand etc., do not exist—this (is) the sense. The mind itself is referred to by the words—Buddhi, Ahaṁkāra and Citta, on account of the difference in functioning viz. resolution, egoism, and thought.—and so (there are) eleven sense-organs. Therefore in (the passage).

‘These ten Prāṇas in the Puruṣa, Ātman the eleventh’

(Br. 3-9-4)

the mind is denoted by the word Ātman. The number of the sense-organs stands (like that), established in the Śruti and the Smṛti—

‘इन्द्रियाणि दशैकं च पञ्च चेन्द्रियगोचरा.’

And the best ॥ 7 ॥

In the Prāṇa-dialogue the chief Prāṇa is judged as the best owing to his being the cause of the existence of the body, in ‘That one breathed forth, without any wind by its own power’.

(Tai. Brā. 2-8-9)

(Mu. 2-1-3)

where is mentioned the existence of life which is his effect, at the time of the dissolution,—the mention in the Śruti of the birth (of Prāṇa) being accounted for, like the mention in the Śruti of the birth of Jīva,—(the Prāṇa) is not originated—Raising this doubt, it is stated that the chief Prāṇa is also originated on account of (the prima-facie view) being in contradiction with the definite statement about there being only one, prior to creation, on account of the origination being like that of the earth etc.,

(Mu. 2-1-3)

and on account of the absence of the repudiation of the origination, The expression

‘It breathed forth, without the wind’

(Tai. Brā. 2-8-9)

is not mentioned as referring to the chief Prāṇa belonging to the Jīva; but (by that) is mentioned that the Highest Brahman alone was existing, on account of the expression in the Śruti—without the wind—even there. Though this is on a par with the previous (Sūtra) itself, its special distinct mention is for the consideration of later matter. ॥ 3 ॥

Here ends the Prāṇāṇutvādhikaraṇa (3)

Not the wind and (its) function, on account of separate mention. ॥ 8 ॥

[365] Is this, the chief Prāṇa merely the wind, the second great element ; or its throbbing action, or Vāyu himself attaining to some speciality ?
—this being the doubt, (the Pūrvapakṣa view) is reached—Vāyu himself, on account of the reference—

‘What the Prāṇa (is), that (is) Vāyu’ (Br. 3.1.5) or, on account of the absence of Prāṇa being known merely to refer to the wind, and the word Prāṇa being well-known in (the sense of) the functions of the wind, such as breathing out and breathing in, its function itself —

This (prima-facie view) being reached, it is stated — It is not mere wind, nor its functioning. Whence ? On account of the separate mention in

‘From this is originated Prāṇa, mind and all sense-organs, Sky, Vāyu’.

(Mu. 2.1.3)

For that very reason, separate mention—the function of Vāyu also can not be Prāṇa. Not indeed the function of light etc., is stated as a separate thing along with them. (The passage)

‘What (is) Prāṇa, that (is) Vāyu’.

(Br. 3.1.5)

is for the sake of making one know that Vāyu himself attaining to a different state is the Prāṇa and not a separate entity like light etc. Because Prāṇa alone functions in breathing out and breathing in ; the word Prāṇa is well-known as referring to a substance possessed of a function and not the functioning alone. ॥ 8 ॥

[366] Is this Prāṇa being a modification of Vāyu, another element like Agni ? — No — says (the Sūtrakāra) —

Like the eye etc., on account of its particularised mention etc., along with them etc. ॥ 9 ॥

(छा. ५।१।७)

This (Prāṇa) is not a distinct element, but it is a special helping instrument of the Jīva, like the eye etc., and the nature of the instrument is known from its being mentioned along with the sense-organs that are the instruments. This Prāṇa is mentioned along with the eye etc., in the Prāṇa-dialogue etc. Its mention along with them is proper, because it is homogeneous with them. By the word Ādi is understood its special denotation among the instruments, referred to by the word Prāṇa on account of its special denotation in

‘Now, verily, who, indeed, this chief Prāṇa’ (Chā. 1-2-7)

etc. ॥ 9 ॥

[367] If this one also were an instrument like the eye etc., then like them this one also must be possessed of a special functioning viz. obliging the Jīva. But that is not seen. Therefore, this one does not deserve to be like the eye etc.— If (it is argued) thus, there (the Sūtrakāra) says—

And no blemish on account of non-functioning, for the Śruti shows (that) to that effect. ॥ 10 ॥

Ākaraṇajvāt —, Karaṇa—functioning; on account of not functioning— That blemish which is pointed out, on account of this Prāṇa being without any special function that obliges the Jīva,—that does not exist, because the Śruti shows to that effect the functioning in the form of supporting the body, sense-organs etc., tantamount to a special obligation, in

is seen as though the most wretched’.

— because, having mentioned this and having shown the body and the other sense-organs as existing even when the Vāk and others had departed, there is the mention of the body and the sense-organs as ceasing to function. Therefore, this Prāṇa staying five-fold (in the form) Prāṇa, Apāna, Vyāna, Udāna and Samāna, does oblige the Jiva by supporting the body and the sense-organs—and so, Prāṇa has the nature of an instrument, like eye etc. ॥ 10 ॥

[368] I say (says the objector)—on account of the difference in name and the difference in functioning in this way, Prāṇa, Apāna etc., would be separate entities—there (the Sūtrakāra) says—

(Prāṇa) is mentioned as having five functions, like the mind ॥ 11 ॥

Just as even though there is the difference of their functions, when there is the difference of the natures, desire etc. desire etc., are not different entities from the mind, on account of the statement in (the passage)

‘ Desire, thought, doubt, faith, want of faith, firmness, want of firmness, bashfulness, intellect, fear,—all this (is) mind alone ’.

(Br. 1-5-3)

—similarly, it is known from the statement

‘ Thus, Prāṇa, Apāna, Vyāna, Udāna, Samāna—all this (is) Prāṇa alone ’

(Br. 1-5-3)

that even Apāna and others are special functionings of Prāṇa alone, and not separate entities. ॥ 11 ॥

But supervision by Fire etc., on account of His thought, along with the one possessed of Prāṇa (Jīva), from the Word. ॥ 13 ॥

[370] It is stated that the Prāṇas along with the Chief (Prāṇa) are originated from Brahman and that they have a limited dimension, and those Prāṇas being supervised over by the deities Agni etc., has been propounded in passing, already in the Sūtra—

‘But the reference to the supervising (deity) on account of the particular distinction and the following after’. (Bra. Sū. II. 1-5)

And that Jīva supervises over these means for his enjoyment, is well-known among the people; and it is established by the Śruti as well in (the passage)—

‘Thus indeed, this one, having taken hold of these Prānas, moves around at will in his body’ (Br 2.1.18)

etc. So, this supervision in respect of Prāna by Jīva and the deities, Agni etc.,— Is it self-dependent, or dependent upon others?—this doubt being there, the (prima-facie view) being reached—It is self-dependent owing to its not standing in need of anything—It is stated (in reply)—Supervision by Fire etc. Prānavatā—along with the Jīva, supervision in respect of Prāna,—Jyotirādinām—of deities Agni etc. Tadāmananāt—from the thought alone of the Paramātman Āmananam—reflecting whole-heartedly that is to say, it occurs from the reflection of the Paramātman itself. Whence this? Sabdāt—from the Sāstra propounding the dependence upon the reflection of the highest Purusa in respect of their functionings of the sense-organs with their supervising deities and of the Jivātman—as in the Brāhmana section dealing with the inner Controller—

‘Who, abiding in Agni, within Agni, whom Agni knows not, whose body Agni is, who controls Agni, within,—he, that your Ātman, the inner Controller, immortal’ (Br 3.7.5)

[371] Are all those designated by the word Prāṇa, sense-organs, or only those different from the chief Prāṇa ?—In the case of this doubt, this (prima-facie view) being reached, viz.—all without exception (are) the sense-organs, on account of their being denoted by the word Prāṇa, and on account of their being the instruments—it is stated (in reply)—

Prāṇas different from the Chief (Prāṇa) are alone the sense-organs. Whence ? Because Prāṇas different from the Chief alone are so referred to; are referred to as sense-organs ; for, in ‘Sense-organs, ten and one; and five perceptible to the sense-organs’

(Gītā. 13-5)

etc., the word Indriya refers to the eye etc., along with the mind alone. ॥ 15 ॥

On account of the Śruti referring to the difference and on account of dissimilarity ॥ 16 ॥

On account of Prāṇa being mentioned in the Śruti separately from the sense-organs in

(Mu. 2-1-3)

etc., it is known that only those different from the Prāṇa are the sense-organs. Although the mind is (here) mentioned separately in the Śruti, its inclusion among the sense-organs is mentioned elsewhere in ‘The sense-organs, with the mind as the sixth’ (Gītā 15-7) etc. The dissimilarity of the chief Prāṇa from the eye, etc., is patent — for, in deep sleep, the functioning of the Prāṇa is evident; but the functioning of the eye etc., is not evident. The activity of eye, tongue, etc., along with the mind, is the means of knowledge and action; that of Prāṇa, however, of had become her portion, on account of the expression — By this Living Self.

I say (says some objector), — In this way, as in — Having entered within, by means of a spy, I shall take stock of the army of the enemy — the first person in Vyākaraṇam, and the expression Praviśati which refers to the action in the agent, would be used metaphorically — (the reply is) —

Not so, there on account of the difference in nature of the king and the spy, there is the metaphorical use, but here, because the Jīva also is (Brahman's) own nature owing to his being its portion, entrance in that form and the modification belong indeed to himself,— so, no undesirable contingency of a metaphorical use. Nor again, is (this use of) the instrumental (case) pointing out to association, as it is not fair to understand a case as qualifying something when the use of it as (causal) directly connected is possible. Nor again, is the instrumental (case in the sense of) an instrument, on account of the Jīva being not the most efficient cause for entrance and modification which are the work of Brahman. Nor is it possible to say that Jīva's work as agent ends with mere entrance, but the modification of name and form belongs to Brahman alone on account of the apprehension of a common agent owing to the gerund-termination. Although Jīva is its (Brahman's) own nature by being its portion, the indirect reference in Jīvena is for the exclusion of the nature of the Highest. Therefore, the modification in name and form is caused by Hiranyagarbha—Therefore indeed, is declared in the Creation-section, modification in name and form as being effected by the four-faced (Brahmadeva), in the Smṛti works —

‘ The name and form, and the detailed amplification of the actions in the case of creatures, gods and others, he effected from the words of the Veda alone in the beginning ’ (V P 15-62)

etc

‘तत्तेज ऐक्षत...तदपोऽसृजत’ (छा. ६।२।३)

‘ना आप ऐक्षन्त...ता अन्नमसृजन्त’ (छा. ६।२।४)

[373] This (prima-facie view) being reached, it is stated (in reply) — But the modification in name and form. The word Tu (but) turns away the view (expressed before). Saṁjñāmūrtikṛti — the modification in name and form; that (comes) from the Highest Brahman alone, making (the world) three-fold ; for, that itself is declared as the modification in name and form; for, modification in name and form is mentioned, of that alone effecting the process of three-fold modification on account of the apprehension of the same agent in

‘That this Deity reflected—Goodness! I, having entered into these three deities by this Living Self would modify name and form; of those, I shall make each of them three-fold, three-fold’

(Chā. 6.3.2-3)

But the threefold modification is not possible in the case of the Four-faced (Brahmadeva) residing within the Egg; for, the egg indeed is produced by water, food, light made three-fold. And the existence (in the Egg) of the Four-faced (Brahmadeva) is mentioned in the Smṛti—

(Manu 1.9)

Thus, the three fold modification is by the Highest Brahman itself. And the modification in name and form having a common agent for that is known to be by that itself. How then does (the Śruti passage)

‘By this Living’ (Chā. 6.3.2)

harmonise? On account of the case-co-ordination in Ātmanā (by the Self), Jivena (by the Jīva) — the Highest Brahman itself having Jīva as its body is denoted by the word Jīva, as in (the passages)

‘That Tejas reflected ... that created Waters’ (Chā. 6.2.3)

‘Those Waters reflected ... those created Anna’ (Chā. 6.2.4)

इति तेजःप्रभृतिशरीरकं परमेव ब्रह्माभिधीयते । अतो जीवसमष्टिभूतहिरण्यगर्भशरीरकस्य परस्यैव ब्रह्मणः कर्म नामरूपव्याकरणम् । एवं च

[374] अथ स्यात्—नामरूपव्याकरणस्य त्रिवृत्करणेनैककर्तृकत्वात्परमात्मकर्तृकत्वमिति न शक्यते यत्तुम्, त्रिवृत्करणस्यापि जीवकर्तृकत्वसंभवात् । अण्डसृष्ट्युत्तरकालं हि चतुर्मुखसृष्ट्यजीवेषु त्रिवृत्करणप्रकार उपदिश्यते

the Highest Brahman itself having Light etc., as the body is denoted. Hence the modification in name and form is the work of the Highest Brahman itself having for the body Hiranyagarbha, the cosmic Jiva. And thus in

Pravīśati and the first person can comfortably be taken in the primary sense itself. And that entrance and modification have a common agent is also appropriate. And because the variegated creation of gods etc., is the work of the Highest Brahman itself, with the Four-faced Brahmadeva as the body, the mention about name — form — modification in the Section dealing with the creation by the Four-faced Brahmadeva is accounted for. Therefore, this is the meaning of the passage etc.—There three deities having the forms of light, water, food, having entered within by this Jiva — by the Ātman particularised as the cosmic Jiva — Nāmarūpe Vyākaraṇām — I shall set forth the variegated creation gods etc., and their names, and for that purpose, of these — light, water and food, that have not attained to mutual contact incompetent to effect particular creations, I shall make each of them three-fold, three-fold, for that power (to create). Therefore, this work of modification in name and form, is the work of the Highest Brahman alone. ॥ 17 ॥

[374] Now it may be (argued) that it is not possible to say that name — form — modification is the doing of the Paramātmān, on the ground that there is one agent for the threefold modification, because it is possible for the Jiva to be the doer even of the threefold modification. Because the method of threefold modification is mentioned in the case of the Jivas created by the Four-faced one after the creation of the Egg, in (passages)

‘यथा खलु सोम्येयास्तित्यो देवताः पुरुषं प्राप्य त्रिवृत्त्रिवृदेकैक्यं भवति तन्मे विजानीहीति’ (छा. ६।४।७)

‘The food eaten is specified as threefold; what is its grossest portion, that becomes the secretion; what the middle, the flesh; what the most minute, the mind.’ (Chā 6·5·1)

etc. In the same way in the previous passage also,

‘What (is) the red form of Agni, that (is) the form of Tejas; what white, that of the Waters; what black, that of Anna’ (Chā. 6·4·1)

etc., the threefold modification is indicated in the case of the fire, the Sun, the Moon, the lightning, created by the Fourfaced (Brahmadeva). And the threefold modification is mentioned (in the Śruti) as subsequent to the modification in name and form in (the passage)

‘That this Deity, having entered into these three deities by this Living Self, modified name and form, (and) made each of them tripartite, tripartite’ (Chā. 6·3·3-4)

after the creation of the Egg refers to the deities etc, created by the Fourfaced (Brahmadeva) — that is not proper. Because in (the passage) —

‘The food eaten is specified three-fold’

(Chā 6 5 1)

flesh and mind referred to as subtle and subtler (respectively) in respect of the secretion, would have to be possessed of the nature of water and light owing to the persistence of the cause and there would be the undesirable contingency of the gross and subtle urine and Prāna — even in (the passage)

Waters drunk’

(Chā, 6 4 2)

— being possessed of the nature of the earth and light. But this is not what is desired (by you), for, like the secretion, flesh etc are desired to have earth-nature, the flesh and the mind also are desired to be Bhauma i.e. earthly, on account of the introductory passage

‘The food eaten, threefold’

(Chā 6 5 1)

Yathāśabdāmitarayośca (And of the other two as directly expressed)—of the other two also, — Waters drunk, and light eaten — thus in the case of the two alternatives modifications are desired as expressed in words
The threefold transformation of the waters themselves is apprehended directly from the words —

‘The waters drunk are specified threefold’

(Chā. 6 5 2)

Similarly, the threefold transformation of the Light itself is apprehended directly from the words

‘The Light, eaten, is specified threefold’

(Chā 6 5 3)

Therefore the secretion flesh, and mind (are) the modifications of Prthivi, urine blood and Prāna (are) the modifications of Waters bones fat, speech (are) the modifications of light — this should be understood, on account of the non contradiction with the remaining part of the passage —

(Chā. 6.5.4)

etc. — By the passage

‘The food, eaten’ (Chā. 6.5.1)

etc., is mentioned the threefold modification of each one, the earth etc.
reaching the Purusa, that have already been modified in name and form. And the threefold modification of light, water, Anna, has got to be already there prior to the creation of the Egg, because they, not modified threefold, have no strength to begin (their) work. The strength to begin their work, is there only when they come together. And that same is the threefold modification.
To the same effect is the statement in the Smṛti —

While taking to another (body the Jīva), goes as enveloped, on account of the question and the exposition. ॥ 1 ॥

(Adhikaraṇa 1, Sūtras 1-7)

[377] In the previous two Chapters the matter viz that the Vedāntas propound as the object of worship by those desirous of salvation, the Highest Brahman which is the one cause of the entire world with (even) the tinge of all blemishes removed, the ocean of unlimited noble qualities, and which is different from everything else, has been established by the scrutines of various aspects of the business in hand, in the form of the removal of the contradictions due to (1 ■ based upon) Smṛtis, and logic, the attacks by the opponents, the removal of mutual contradictions of the Vedānta passages, — along with the arguments for the uprooting of the same Thus in the two Chapters, has been propounded the nature of Brahman - And now by the succeeding (portion), it ■ intended to consider the mode of the attainment, and the means for its attainment

There in the third Chapter is the consideration referring to worship as the means And as the means desired for the beginning of worship ■ desirelessness for the things other than the destination, and passionate desire for the destination, — for the accomplishment of that, are propounded in the first and second Quarters, the blemishes belonging to the Jīva moving in the different worlds—waking, dreaming, sleeping (soundly), and fainting (in swoon), and the absence of those and being the mine of (all) auspicious qualities in the case of the Highest Brahman

There, this Jīva going from one body to another goes, verily, as enveloped by the subtle elements, the causes of the production of another body, or not—this being considered, this (prima-facie view) is reached, viz. wherever the Jīva goes, in those places the subtle elements being easy to find, he goes (there) not enveloped by them.—Later on also, after introducing the opponent's points (seeds of the prima-facie view) (the Sūtrakāra) would refute them—And there (in the present case) he mentions the right view—While taking to another (body, the Jīva) goes as enveloped.

By the word Mūrti in (the expression—Saṃjñāmūrtikṛipti)

(Bra. Sū. II. 4-17)

the body is referred to, and that is indicated by the word Tat Tadantarapratipattau—in taking to another body, enveloped by the subtle elements, Jīva, Rāmhati—goes—this (is) the sense. Whence? Praśnanirūpaṇābhyām—from the question and answer. In the Section dealing with the Pañcāgnividya there are these questions and answers—

Pañcāla Pravāhaṇa having indeed asked Śvetaketu, the son of Āruṇi—Do you know the place to which the performers of sacrifice are to go, the mode of their return, the return from the paths—Devayāna and Pitṛyāna—and him who does not reach the other world, asked this also—

‘Do you know how waters in, the fifth oblation become designated as man?’

(Chā. 5-3-3)

And there, replying to this last question, having identified the heaven-world with fire, and in (the passage) —

‘There in this fire, the gods offer Śraddhā as the oblation; from that oblation King Soma is born’

(Chā. 5-4-2)

etc.,—in the heaven-world looked upon as fire, the Prāṇas of the Jīva, called gods, throw the object called Śraddhā; and that Śraddhā is modified in the form of a body formed of ambrosia, called Somarāja and that body formed of ambrosia the same Pranas throw in Parjanya (rain) looked upon as fire, and that body thrown there becomes a shower of rain, and that shower of rain, the same Prānas throw on the earth looked upon as fire, and that thrown there becomes the food, and that food, the same (Prānas) throw in man (Puruṣa) looked upon as fire, and that (food) becomes there the semen, and that the same throw into the woman looked upon as fire, and that same thrown there becomes the foetus — having said thus, says he ‘Thus again, in the fifth libation the waters become designated as man’

(Chā 5 9:1)

In this way, when the fifth libation (oblation) is offered, the waters become fit for being called by the word Man. When it is stated thus, it is as good as stated of waters having a subtle form existing even in the previous libations, that there is for them now a human form. For this reason, owing to the question and the answer, thus it is known that (the Jīva) goes to the various places along with the subtle elements which are the producing causes of the body ॥ 1 ॥

[378] I say (says the objector) — When it is stated

‘Waters are designated as man’

(Chā 5 9:1)

on account of the apprehension of the waters being modified in a human form, it is known that there is the close contact with the moving Jīva of them only.
Therefore, how is there the close contact with all the subtle elements? —
Therefore (the Sūtrakāra) says —

But on account of the preponderance, due to being three-fold. ॥ 2 ॥

The word Tu turns away the objection. There is no possibility of the production of the body, by merely the waters as its producing cause, for, it is for the sake of producing the body etc., that there is the threefold modification in

‘Of those, each one, tripartite, tripartite.’

(Chā. 6.3.3)

The mention in the Śruti, of the waters only, is on account of their being preponderant. And owing to the preponderance of blood etc., in the body, it is known that there is the preponderance of water in the producing causes

- And on account of the movement of the Prāṇas ॥ 3 ॥

From this also, it is known that there is the going out (of the Jīva) as enveloped by the subtle elements. When the Jīva is departing, it is mentioned in the Śruti that the Prāṇas go after him, in ‘Him departing, Prāṇa departs after; all (other) Prāṇas depart after the departing Prāṇa’

(Br. 4.4.2)

And it is mentioned in the Smṛti —

‘He drags the (five) sense-organs with mind as the sixth, stationed in Prakṛti; what body he secures, and what he departs from, the Ruler (Jīva) goes away taking these, like the wind, the odours from (their) resort.’

(Gītā 15.7-8)

And because no movement is possible in the case of those with no resort, movement of even those subtle elements that resort to him, has also got to be admitted. ॥ 3 ॥

[379] If (it be argued) on account of the statement in the Śruti about merging into Agni etc., (the Prāṇas do not depart with the Jīva, — we reply) — No, on account of that being metaphorical. ॥ 4 ॥

If it be argued that — because in (the passage)

‘Where of this person dead, speech goes unto fire; Prāna unto Wind; eye unto Āditya’ (B. 3.2.13) etc., — it is mentioned that the Prānas go unto Agni etc., at the time of the death of the Jīva, they can not be going along with the Jīva and so, the Śruti referring to their movement must be construed otherwise—(We reply)

—No, because the description in the Śruti about going unto the fire etc., is metaphorical. How (is it) metaphorical ?—(the answer is)—they do not go.
Because there is that Śruti-statement, along with the hair etc., not merging. —

‘Small (soft) hair unto the herbs, the long hair unto the plants.’ (B. 3.2.13)

Therefore, the Śruti mentioning the merging of the eye etc., refers to the going away of the supervising deity. ॥ 4 ॥

If (it is said) that, on account of the non-mention in the first—no, they (waters) alone are denoted there), on account of propriety. ॥ 5 ॥

[380] As to what has been said that the Jīva goes enveloped by the subtle waters connected with other elements,—this is known from the question and answer, —that is not proper, on account of the non-mention in the Śruti, of the waters being the oblation in the first sacrifice in the heavenly-world-fire. Śraddhā alone is mentioned as being the offering, in the Śruti

‘In that, this fire, the gods offer Śraddhā as the oblation.’

(Chā. 5.4.2)

Śraddhā, indeed, is well-known as being a special attitude of the mind, of the Jīva; so, waters are not the oblations there—if (it be argued) thus—(the answer is)—No. Because those self-same waters are denoted by the word

Śraddhā. Whence? On account of the propriety of question and answer. In the initial part of the answer to the question

‘Do you know how in the fifth libation, waters come to be called a human being?’ (Chā. 5-3-3)

Śraddhā is spoken of in the Śruti, as the oblation in the fire, the heaven-world. If there, waters were not to be denoted by the word Śraddhā, then (the result would be)—another question, another answer,—and thus, everything would be disjointed. In the answer

‘Thus in the fifth libation, the waters come to be called a human being’ (Chā. 5-9-1)

the conclusion again indicates that Śraddhā has the nature of waters alone. In (the expression)

‘Do you know how’ (Chā. 5-3-3)

there is the mode of the question and in (the passage)

‘Thus in the fifth’ (Chā. 5-9-1)

by the word Iti is concluded the answer. Having indeed mentioned the modification of the waters, in the form of Śraddhā, Somarāja, shower of rain, food, semen and foetus,—in this way, it is concluded that the waters come to be called a human being. The use of the word Śraddhā in the Vedas, in the sense of waters, is seen in

‘He takes the waters; Śraddhā indeed, is waters.’ (Tai. Brā. 3-2-4)

The modification in the form of Soma, of the waters alone is appropriate, in

‘He offers Śraddhā in the sacrifice; from that offering, comes into being Soma, Kang’ (Chā. 5-4-2)

Therefore, it is appropriate that the Jiva goes, enveloped all round by waters mixed with other elements. ॥ 5 ॥

On account of (this) not being mentioned in the Śruti—if (it be objected) thus, (our reply is) No—on account of the apprehension of those who perform sacrificial deeds etc. ॥ 6 ॥

[381] As to what again has been said that the Jiva goes, being enveloped all round by the waters—this sense is understood from this passage—it is not appropriate on account of the Jiva not being mentioned in this passage. For, here Śraddhā etc., alone in the particular watery state, are mentioned in the Śruti, as the offering but not the Jiva enveloped by them—If it is objected thus, (our reply is) — No, on account of the apprehension of those who perform sacrificial deeds etc.,—for, in that same passage further on, it has been said that those who go in for sacrificial and pious deeds, and gifts but without the knowledge of Brahman, having reached the heavenly world become Somarājas ; and with the holy merit come to an end, having come back again become the foetus.—Beginning with

‘ Now those who worship in the village taking to sacrificial and pious deeds and gifts, they go unto the smoke ’ (Chā. 5-10-3)

And ending with

‘ From the world of the Pitr̥s, to Ākāśa ; from Ākāśa, to the Moon ; this Soma-King (is) the food for the gods ; him the gods eat. ’ Staying there till falling down, then they return again by this same path. Whosoever eats food, whosoever sprinkles semen, does become that again. ’ (Chā. 5-10-4-6)

‘They offer Śraddhā; from that offering comes into being Soma-King’ (Chā. 5.4.2)

—this having the same sense, it is known that what is said is that he particularised by the body in the state of Śraddhā, becomes particularised by the body in the form of Soma. The word denoting the body having the sole nature of being the attribute of the Jīva, ultimately applies to the qualified Jīva himself. Thus, it is appropriate that the Jīva goes being enveloped all round. ॥ 6 ॥

Jīva cannot be said to be Soma-King on account of the statement of his being eaten up by the gods, because Jīva is unfit to be eaten—There (the Sūtrakāra) says—

But (the statement is) metaphorical owing to their being not Ātman-knowers; for, (the Śruti) indicates to that effect. ॥ 7 ॥

The word Vā turns away the objection—on account of the performer of the sacrificial rites etc., being not an Ātman-knower, he remains here as well as in the other world as an instrument of enjoyment for the gods. Here (on this earth), he obliges by worshipping them by the sacrificial rites etc. Having reached a particular world, vouchsafed by the gods pleased with his worship, he has common enjoyments with them, and becomes the instrument for them. As (for instance) in

—the Śruti points out to the non-Ātman-knower as the instrument for the gods. The Smṛti also points out to the acquisition of Brahman by the Ātman-knowers, and being an object of enjoyment for the gods, in the case of those not knowing the Ātman in (passages like)

‘The worshippers of the gods go to the gods; my worshippers go unto me also’ (Gītā 7-23)

Therefore, the description of Jīva as fit to be eaten as the food of the gods, is intended to point out to his being the means of their enjoyment. Therefore, it is metaphorical. So, the gratification alone of the gods is mentioned by the Śruti as the eating by them—

‘Not indeed, do the gods eat, nor do the gods drink; they are gratified by seeing this immortal itself.’ (Chā. 3-6-1)

Therefore, it is proved that the Jīva goes, enveloped all round by the subtle elements. ॥ 7 ॥

Here ends the Tadantarapratipattyadhikaraṇa (1)

On the exhaustion of the Karman, he possessed of a remainder; on account of the Śruti and the Smṛti; as he goes, not so (returns he) ॥ 8 ॥

(Adhikaraṇa 2, Sūtras 8-11)

[383] It has been mentioned in the Śruti that those who are, performers only of sacrificial and pious deeds, and give gifts, go by the Pitr̥yāna path beginning with smoke etc, and come back again, when the fruit of the Karman is exhausted—

‘Having stayed there till falling down,—then they return again by this very path’ (Chā. 5-10-5)

—There is doubt is raised—Does the Jīva descending, descend possessed of some remainder (of the holy merit), or not? What (is) proper?
(The prima-facie view) reached (is)—Not with a remainder as the entire Karman is enjoyed. For, Anuśaya is the Karman remaining after enjoyment. And that would not be remaining, if there was the enjoyment of the entire fruit.

‘कर्णा जाययाश्च स्वकर्मानिष्ठाः पेत्य कर्मफलमनुभूय ततः शेषेण विशिष्ट-

In (the passage)

‘Having stayed there till falling down’

(Chā. 5-10-5)

the enjoyment of the entire (Karman) is spoken of. Sāmpāta is that by which people fall on to the heavenly world,—spoken of as Karman—And there is another Śruti-passage (to the same effect)—

‘Having gone to the end of that Karman,—whatever he does here,—he comes back from that world to this, world for the sake of Karman,’

(Br. 4-4-6)

[384] This (prima-facie view) being reached, (this) is stated (in reply)—He descends with a remainder. Whence? Deśasmṛtibhyām—that is to say, from the Śruti and the Smṛti. As for the Śruti,—it is mentioned by the Śruti in respect of those who descend—

‘There, those who here possessed of good conduct, verily, descend;
they would be attaining to a good womb, Brāhmaṇa-womb, Kṣatriya-womb or Vaiśya-womb; those again who possessed of bad conduct, verily, descend; they would be attaining to ■ abject womb, or ■ dog-womb, or ■ hog-womb or a Cāṇḍāla-womb.’

(Chā. 5-10-7)

Amongst those that have come down from the other world, those who have to their credit good Karman, attain to the good Brāhmaṇa-womb etc.;
those having to their credit something sinful (Kapūya), those who have done bad deeds, attain to the abject womb of a dog, of a hog or of a Cāṇḍāla. Thus, the Śruti points out to the enjoyment of holy and sinful Karmans in the case of those that have descended. The Smṛti also (points out ■ the same effect)—

‘The castes and the stages in life depend upon one’s own Karman. Having departed this life, having enjoyed the fruit of Karman, they, by virtue of the remainder, thereafter take to the birth of one associated with a particular region, caste, family, form, life, learning, wealth, conduct, happiness, and talent : Those who go the wrong way acting contrary perish' (Gautā Smr. 2.11-12-13)

Likewise,

'On returning from there, by virtue of the remainder-fruit of Karman, they take to caste, form, colour, strength, talent, intelligence, substances, and performance of religious duty. And like a wheel, in both the worlds, they live on, verily, happily'

(Ā Dha. Sū. 2.1-2-3)

(The expression)

'Till falling down'

(Chā 5.10.5)

refers to the particular Karman which has begun to give its fruit. (The passage)

'Whatever he does here'

(Br. 4.4.6)

also refers to the same matter. And the destruction of Karmans, the fruits of which are not enjoyed, for which no atonement has been made, by the experience of the fruit of another Karman, is also inappropriate. Therefore, those who have gone to the other world, come back again as they had gone but not in the same way, being, verily, with some remainder—that is to say, by the way of ascent, but they return again in another order. The ascent is in the order of—smoke, night, the dark fortnight, the six months when the Sun goes to the south, the world of Pitrs, Ākāśa and the Moon. But the descent from the moon-region is in the order—Ākāśa, wind, smoke, cloud, and rain. There, Yathetam—on account of Vāyu etc., being reached while descending from Ākāśa, and Aneva—Pitrloka etc., not being reached. ॥ 8 ॥

If (it is argued that) on account of Carana,—(we say) No, that is to indicate (Karman)—thus Kārṣṇājīni. ॥ 9 ॥

[385] If it be argued that in the expressions Ramanīyacaraṇāḥ, Kapūyacaraṇāḥ — by the word Carana is not denoted Karman — merit and demerit—because the word Carana is well-known in the Vedas and in the world, to mean conduct. Men of the world, indeed, regard as synonyms Carana, Ācāra (conduct), Śīla (character), Vṛtta (behaviour). And in the Veda—

‘Whatever blameless deeds are of ours, those should be taken to (by you), not others; whatever good deeds of ours, those should be attended to by you.’ (Tai. 1.11.2)

In this passage Carana and Karman are mentioned separately. Therefore, from Carana,—from conduct—there is the attainment to a particular womb, and not from the remainder,—if (it be argued thus)—(we reply)—Not so. The Śruti—passage referring to Carana is for the sake of pointing out indeed Karman —thus opines the preceptor, Kārṣṇājīni,—on account of the impossibility of securing happiness and misery, from mere conduct; for, happiness and misery are (respectively) the fruit of Karman in the form of merit and demerit. ॥ 9 ॥

If (it be argued) that uselessness (would result) — (we say) — No, on account of that being dependent upon that (conduct) ॥ 10 ॥

[386] Then in that case, the conduct prescribed by the Smṛti, would be quite useless on account of its leading to no fruit,—if (it is argued thus),—(we say)—No, on account of holy Karman being dependent upon that. Only he, who has good conduct to his credit is entitled to perform meritorious deeds, on account of the statements—

‘संध्याहीनोऽशुचिर्नित्यमनर्हः सर्वकर्मणि ।’

‘One not performing the Saṁdhyā rite, impure, is always unfit to do any Karman’

(Dakṣa. Smr. 2.27)

‘The Vedas do not purify one bereft of good conduct.’

(Vasistha. Smr. 6.3) etc.,—Therefore, the Śruti referring to Carāṇa indicates Karman—this (is) the view of Kārṣṇājini. ॥ 10 ॥

But Bādari (says)—good and evil deeds themselves. ॥ 11 ॥

The preceptor Bādari thinks that good and bad deeds themselves are denoted by the word Carāṇa, as the metaphorical sense is improper when the primary sense is possible, on account of the root Car being used in the sense of Karman, in (statements like)—He performs holy Karman, he performs sinful Karman, and the separate mention with its object of reference established by the direct Śruti, and established by the Śruti inferred from the Acāra, being appropriate after the maxim of Gobalivārda (cow and bull). Here, the view of Bādari alone is the (Sūtrakāra's) own view. It has indeed been accepted by us that the fruit of the twilight-worship etc., prescribed by the Śruti as inferred from the established conduct, is to ensure eligibility for other Karman.
Therefore, he does descend, possessed of the remainder. ॥ 11 ॥

Here ends the Kṛtāyayādhikaraṇa (2)

Of those who perform evil deeds etc., also, it has been described by the Śruti. ॥ 12 ॥

(Adhikaraṇa 3, Sūtras 12-21)

[387] It has been stated that those who perform merely sacrificial deeds, pious deeds and give gifts, having gone to the Moon, return with the remainder itself (of Karman) to their credit. Now it is considered—whether those who perform evil deeds etc., also go to the Moon or not. Those who do not do,

In their case also, going there is mentioned by the Sruti on account of the going being mentioned in the case of all without distinction, in (the passage)

॥ 12 ॥

Well, in that case, there would be the same common course even for both performers of good deeds and performers of evil deeds !—No, (the Sūtrakāra) says—

But the ascent and descent of the others, after enjoying (the fruit of Karman) in Saṁyamana, on account of movement there being seen. ॥ 13 ॥

The word Tu (but) removes the doubt. In the case of others—those that perform evil deeds etc.,—the ascent to and descent from the Moon (take place) only after experiencing the agonies inflicted by him (Yama) in Saṁyamana ruled over by Yama ; not otherwise. Whence ? On account of the movement there being seen ; for, in the case of the evil-doers, going there under the control of Yama is declared in—

‘ One who thinks this world exists not, nor the other, again and again comes under my control ’

(Kā. 2-6)

They also refer in Smṛti-works to seven hells, Raurava etc., as the places where the sinners have to go ॥ 15 ॥

I say (says the objector)—How can those who move in the seven worlds (hells) be said to reach the house of Yama?—To this (the Sūtrakāra) says—

On account of his jurisdiction there also, (there is) no contradiction ॥ 16 ॥

There is no contradiction on account of their going even to (all) those seven (hells) under the orders of Yama himself. Therefore, even in the case of the evil-doers etc., ascent to and descent from the Moon are there, later, after having reached the world of Yama and after having experienced agonies befitting their Karman ॥ 16 ॥

Devayāna path, because they are deficient in the (necessary) knowledge (Vidyā); exactly in the same way, going to the Moon by the Pitṛyāna also, is not possible, because they have not to their credit sacrificial and pious deeds and charitable gifts. If (it is asked)—How is it known that the Devayāna and the Pitṛyāna (respectively) pertain to the Vidyā and pertain to the meritorious deeds?—(the answer is)—As those are the matter in hand For, Vidyā is the subject-matter in (the case of) the Devayāna, and Karman in (the case of) the Pitṛyāna, on account of the reference to the Devayāna in—

‘They proceed on to the flame, from the flame to the day’

(Chā. 5-10-1)

etc., after having stated

‘Then, those who know thus and those who worship in the forest Śraddhā and penance’

(Chā. 5-10-1)

—And on account of the reference to the Pitṛyāna in ‘They proceed on to the smoke’

(Chā. 5-10-3)

etc, after having stated—

‘Now, those who worship (practise) in the village sacrificial and pious deeds and give gifts.’

(Chā. 5-10-3)

‘Those, verily, whosoever depart from this world—they all go to the Moon alone’

(Kau. 1-2)

—This statement also is to be construed as (to mean) those all i. e. those who perform sacrificial deeds etc ॥ 17 ॥

[389] I say (says the objector)—In the absence of evil-doers going to the Moon, there would not be the production of the body itself, on account of the absence of the fifth offering; for, in (the passage)

‘In the fifth libation, the waters come to be called a human being.’ (Chā. 5.9.1)

As mentioned by the Sṛuti the production of the body, and that oblation has been shown to be preceded by going to the Moon. Therefore, for the production itself of the body, ascent to and descent from the Moon must be surely admitted in their case also. To this (the Sūtrakāra) says (in reply)—

Not in the case of the third, on account of the actual perception accordingly. ॥ 18 ॥

In the case of the third place, there is no need of the fifth oblation for the production of the body. Whence? Tathopalabdheh—(As that is actually perceived). By the word ‘Tṛtiyasthāna are spoken of those that do only sinful deeds. In their case is seen the absence of any need for the fifth offering, for the purpose of producing the body.

‘Do you know how and why is not that world all filled?’—

(Chā. 5.3.3)

—in reply to this question, the answer (is)

‘Not by either of these two paths; those become these insignificant creatures repeatedly revolving (taking on existence)—are born, die (in this manner)—thus (is) the third place. Therefore, that world is not all filled—’ (Chā. 5.10.8)

Therefore, because, in the case of the third place, there is the statement about the non-filling of the heavenly world on account of the absence of the ascent to and descent from the heavenly world, there is no need for the fifth offering for the production of the body in the case of the third place. The expression—In the fifth offering—propounds that the connection of waters with the fifth fire is merely the cause of the designation Puruṣa, but does not ward off anything else, on account of the non-mention of any emphasising factor. ॥ 18 ॥

In the Śruti also is seen the production of the body in the case of some, without any need for the fifth offering—

‘Of those, indeed, of these beings, there are three seeds only —born of the egg, born of the living Jīva, born of the earth.’

(Chā. 6.3.1)

Out of them, is seen the production without the fifth offering, of beings—born of the earth and born of perspiration ॥ 20 ॥

I say (says the objector)—There is no mention here of those born of perspiration on account of the statement—Three seeds only. There (the Sūtrakāra) says—

The inclusion, by the third word, of that born of perspiration.

॥ 21 ॥

In (the passage)

‘Born of the egg, born of the living Jīva, born of the earth,’

(Chā 6.3.1)

born of the heat—born of perspiration, also—This (is) the sense Therefore, in the case of the sinners only, there is not possible going over to the Moon. ॥ 21 ॥

(Adhikaraṇa 4, Sūtra 22)

[390] It has been stated that those who perform sacrificial rites etc., ascend up to the Moon, enveloped by the subtle elements and with the residue (of Karman). As to the mode of descent, on the authority (of the Sruti)—

‘ Now, to this very path they return again, as they had gone, to Ākāśa; from Ākāśa to Vāyu; having become Vāyu, he becomes smoke; having become smoke, he becomes the cloud; having become the cloud, he becomes a water-giving cloud; having become a water-giving cloud, he showers forth rain.’ (Chā. 5.10.5-6)

—it is stated that as he had gone, but not in the same way. There, there being a doubt,—Is there in his case possession of the nature of Ākāśa etc., like the nature of god, man, etc., when he becomes identified with Ākāśa etc., or, is there, merely attaining to similarity with them ?—(the prima-facie view)—, the possession of the nature of Ākāśa etc., on account of no distinction there, like (the possession of) the nature of Soma etc., by one in the state of being Śraddhā—(this) being reached, it is stated that—(there is) only attainment to the similarity with that. Tatsvābhāvyaṣṭi means attainment to the similarity with them. Whence this ? On account of propriety ; for, in respect of the possession of the nature of Soma, the nature of man, etc., there is indeed the nature of them for the purpose of the enjoyment of happiness and misery ; but here in respect of Ākāśa etc., there is the impropriety about the possession of their nature, on account of the absence of the enjoyment of happiness and misery. And so, the statement about becoming that has the sense of attaining to similarity with them due to their contact. ॥ 22 ॥

Not for very long, on account of the speciality ॥ 23 ॥

(Adhikarana 5, Sūtra 23)

[391] Beginning with the attainment to Ākāśa up to the attainment to rice etc.,—(during this period)—Does he stay on there at the various places not for a very long time, or is there no rule about it ?—such a doubt being raised, (the prima-facie view) being reached viz.—No such rule on account of the absence of any cause for such a rule—it is stated (in reply)—Nāticireṇa—not for very long. Whence ? On account of the speciality. Further, on attaining to (the nature of) rice etc, there is the special mention about his getting out with difficulty in (the passage)

‘Henceforward, verily, indeed, there is all the greater difficulty of getting out.’

(Chā. 5-10-6)

—and so, it is apprehended that on attaining to Ākāśa etc, before there is the getting out in a short time There is the Vedic elision of the word Ta in Durnisprapataram. Durnisprapataram—getting out with greater difficulty —This (is) the sense. ॥ 23 ॥

Now a doubt being raised—Do they stick on to rice etc., supervised over by other enjoyers with rice etc., as ‘their bodies; or are they born as enjoyers with rice etc., as their bodies?—and (the prima-facie view) being reached viz.—On the strength of the expression—Are born—they are, verily, possessed of rice etc., as their bodies (as warranted by the expressions), like—A god is born,—A man is born,—It is stated (in reply)—supervised over by another. There is a mere contact of theirs, with the body, rice etc., supervised over by another Jiva. Whence? Pūrvavadabhīlāpāt—on account of the mention of merely the various natures like that, beginning with the sky and ending with the cloud. For, where the idea is that of being the enjoyer, there is mentioned the Karman which is the means thereof, as in (the passage)

(Chā. 5.10.7)

Here is not mentioned the Karman as in the case of Ākāśa etc., on account of the Karman,—sacrificial etc., which has the fruit to be enjoyed in heaven, which has (actually) started giving its fruit, being finished owing to the enjoyment of heaven itself, because (the Karman) which has not yet begun (to give its fruit) is being mentioned later in (the passage)

‘Those possessed of good conduct, those possessed of sinful conduct’

(Chā. 5.10.7)

and because there is no other Karman in the middle (intervening period). Therefore, like the statement about the nature of Ākāśa etc., the statement about being born in the state of rice etc., is metaphorical ॥ 24 ॥

If (it be said) that, impure. (we say) — No, on account of the word. ॥ 25 ॥

[393] It cannot be said that there is mere contact with the rice-body etc., occupied by another; and on account of the absence of any reason for being the enjoyer, no birth in the rice-state etc., because there exists a reason for being the enjoyer. The Karman—sacrificial rite, etc., with its fruits to be enjoyed in heaven, is itself impure being mixed with demerit on account of the sacrifices Agniṣomiya etc., being associated with killing; and killing being prohibited as in (the passage)

‘One should not kill any being’.

(M. Bh. Śā. 278.5)

is nothing but sin. Nor again is here possible any exception to the rule, like the Padāhavanīya etc., on account of their referring to different things. The injunction about killing in Agniṣomiya etc., points out to the killing being an obliging factor for the sacrifice. (The passage) ‘One should not kill, on the other hand, aims at the result viz., the prohibition of the killing.

If it were said—In the case of activity due to the injunction in (sacrifices) Agniṣomiya etc., the prohibition—injunction cannot be a hindrance referring to the same, on account of that referring to something which is due to passion.—(We reply)—Not so. Here also, something due to passion is common. For, in

(Tai. Sām. 2.5.5)

etc., on account of the instruction about sacrifice etc., as being fit to be performed by one possessed of the desire, one proceeds to perform the sacrifice etc., through keenness for the fruit itself, on having understood the sacrifice etc., as the means for heaven etc. In the case of the Agniṣomiya etc., also, one proceeds through passion alone, after having understood from the Śāstra that sacrifices etc., that are the means for the fruit thereof, are an obliging factor. In the case of the non-religious (secular killing also, one does proceed through passion, after having understood by some means of proof or other that killing is the means for securing one’s own desired object—so there is no

etc., that they are the means for securing the fruit there is the activity through passion itself—and so, they also are associated with impurity. Therefore because the sacrificial performances etc., are associated with impurity, being mixed with sin the fruit to be experienced in heaven having been enjoyed in heaven the fruit of the killing-part is experienced in the form of inanimate entities, rice etc. In the Smṛti they also say that the inanimate state is the fruit of sin—

Therefore if it is said that those possessed of the residue are born for enjoyment as rice etc. — (we reply) —Not so. Whence? Sabdāt—On account of the word—In the case of Agnisomiya and other sacrifices there is the word referring to the absence of the nature of killing as the cause of the attainment to heaven in respect of the killing (of the victim) For, they mention in the Scriptures the word describing the attainment to heaven due to the killing of the victim—Golden-bodied, he (the victim) goes high up to the heaven—etc. The operation which is the means of excessive prosperity, though involving a little injury, is not killing, but it is verily, protection

To the same effect (is) the Mantra-passage—

‘ Not, verily, indeed, you die here you are not injured, you are indeed going to the gods by paths of easy movements where go

Second Quarter of the Third Chapter

Creation in the dream, for (the Śruti) says ॥ 1 ॥

(Adhikaraṇa 1, Sūtras 1-6)

[394] Thus has been established the waking Jīva being in a state of misery on account of his association with going and coming, birth etc., in conformity with his Karman. Now his dream-state is examined. Referring to the dream, in the Śruti it is stated—

‘ Not there are chariots, nor chariot-horses, nor paths;—but he creates chariots, chariot-horses, paths; not there are delights, joys, excessive joys;—but he creates delights, joys, excessive joys; not there are mansions, (lotus-) tanks, rivers,—but he creates mansions, (lotus-) tanks, rivers. For, he (is) the doer’. (Br. 4.3.10)

—There (arises) the doubt—Is this creation of chariots etc., effected by Jīva himself or by Īśvara?—What (is) proper? The creation in the dream, by the Jīva. Whence? Sandhyam is called the dream-place, on account of the statement about Sandhya being the third, dream-place; and that (creation) is, however, effected by Jīva himself; for (the Śruti) does say ‘... creates, for he (is) the doer’ (Br. 4.3.10)

—There is apprehended the dream-seeing Jīva himself. ॥ 1 ॥

And some (speak of Jīva as the) creator, and the sons

etc. ॥ 2 ॥

And further, the followers of some recension read this Jīva to be the creator of desired objects in dream,

‘य एषु सुतेषु जागर्ति कामं कामं पुरुषो निर्दिशतिः’ (का. ५।८)

इति । पुत्रादयश्च तत्र काम्यमानतया कामशब्देन निर्दिश्यन्ते, नेच्छामात्रम् । पूर्वत्र हि

[395] इति प्राप्ते, अभिधीयते—

मायामात्रं तु कात्स्न्येनानभिष्वक्तस्वरूपत्वात् ॥ ३ ॥

तुदावः पक्षं व्याख्येयति । स्वप्ने रथपुष्करिण्यादर्थजातं मायामात्रं—परमपुरुषसृष्ट-मित्यर्थः । मायाशब्दो ह्याश्चर्यवाची

‘जनकस्य कुले जाता देवमायेव निर्मिता’ (रा. वा. १।२५)

इत्यादिषु तथा दर्शनात् । अत्रापि, न तत्र रथा न रथयोगा न पन्थानः—सकलैतरपुरुषानु- भाव्यतया न भवन्तीत्यर्थः । अथ रथान्त्रययोगान्पथः सृजते—स्वप्नदृग्नुभाव्यतया तत्कालमात्रा- वसानानुसृजत इत्याश्चर्यरूपत्वमेवाह । एवंविधाश्चर्यरूपा सृष्टिः सत्यसंकल्पस्य परमपुरुषस्यै-

‘He who keeps awake, when these are asleep, the Purusa creating the various desired objects.’ (Kā. 5.8)

And there sons etc., are pointed out by the word Kāma, because they are fit to be desired, not merely the desire. For earlier, in (passages)—

‘Pray for all desires at will’ (Kā. 1.25)

‘Choose sons and grandsons, living for a hundred years’
(Kā. 1.23)

sons etc., themselves—the desires,—are the matter in hand. Therefore, the Jīva creates chariots etc., in dream. And that the Jīva has his thoughts fulfilled, is mentioned in the utterance of Prajāpati. Therefore, even in the absence of means etc., creation is possible. ॥2॥

[395] This (prima-facie view) being reached, it is stated (in reply)—

But only wonder, on account of its nature not being manifest in entirety ॥3॥

The word Tu turns away the (above) view. The aggregate of objects, chariots, (lotus-) tanks etc., in dream is mere Māyā (wonder)—created by the highest Purusa.—This (is) the sense. For, the word Māyā denotes wonder on account of that (meaning) being seen in (the passage)

‘Born in the family of Janaka, created as the wonderful creation of the gods’— (Rā. Bā 1.27)

Here also in—not there chariots, nor chariot-horses, nor paths—the sense is—these do not exist as being fit to be experienced by any other person.
Now, he creates chariots, chariot-horses, paths—he creates (them) existing only for the time being, as fit to be experienced by the dream-seer—thus (the Śruti) speaks of the wonderful nature itself. Such a wonderful creation is appropriate in the case of the highest Puruṣa alone who has his thoughts fulfilled, not in the case of Jīva; because although Jīva is endowed with the nature of having his thoughts fulfilled etc., his own nature is not manifested in its entirety in the worldly state, that kind of wonderful creation is not possible in the case of Jīva. And in (the passage)

‘ Puruṣa creating the various desired objects ’ (Kā. 5·8)

(the writer) speaks of the highest Puruṣa alone as the creator, on account of the apprehension of the unique nature of the highest Puruṣa in the introductory and the concluding parts, in

‘ Who keeps awake when these are asleep ’ (Kā. 5·8)

‘ That alone is refulgent, that Brahman; that alone is called immortal; therein all worlds abide; no one, verily, transcends it. ’

(Kā. 5·8)

And he speaks of the highest Puruṣa alone as the creator in ‘ Then he creates mansions, lotus-tanks, rivers; for he (is) the doer ’ (Br. 4·3·10)

on account of this Śruti having the same sense as that. ॥ 3 ॥

[396] If, having all sins destroyed etc., is natural with the Jīva, why is it not manifested? — (If it is objected to) thus, (the Sūtrakāra) says—

But on account of the thought of the Highest, is concealed:

for, from that, bondage and its opposite are his (of the Jīva) ॥ 4 ॥

The word Tu is for removing the doubt. Parābhidhyanāt — on account of the thought of the highest Puruṣa — the natural form of this Jīva is concealed; for, the highest Puruṣa conceals the natural auspicious form for him who has committed faults due to the series of beginningless Karman.
Therefore, from His wish alone, the bondage and salvation of this Jīva, indeed, are mentioned in the Śruti —

‘यदा ह्येष एतस्मिन्नदृश्येऽनात्म्येऽनिरुक्तेऽनिलयनेऽभयं प्रतिष्ठां विन्दते ।

etc. ॥ ४ ॥

Or, on account of the association with the body, that also.

॥ ५ ॥

That also—the concealment also—happens either through the association with the body, or through the association with the subtle nonsentient power—At the time of creation (tirobhāva) exists on account of its association with the non-sentient entity, in the body-condition; and at the time of dissolution, (tirobhāva) on account of the association with the extremely subtle non sentient entity incapable of being divided into name and form. Therefore, on account of his nature not being manifest in dream, Jiva is not able to create chariots etc., merely by his wish. In (the passage),

‘In that abide all the worlds; no one transcends that indeed’.

(Ka. 5-8)

—being awake while all are asleep, being the resort of all the worlds etc.,—these indeed are possible in the case of the Parama-Puruṣa alone. Therefore, (the highest Puruṣa) creates objects for the Jivas in order that they might experience the fruit in conformity with their extremely meagre Karman lasting for that period only and fit to be experienced by that particular Jiva alone ॥ ५ ॥

And indicating, indeed on account of the Śruti, and the

And for this reason, the dream-objects do not proceed from the wish of the Jiva ; because it is known from the Śruti that dream is indicative of prosperity and adversity—

‘When he sees in dreams a woman in connection with the Karmans desired for, one should know, there in that dream-indication prosperity’,

(Chā. 5-2-8)

And in

‘If he perceives in dream a dark person with dark teeth, he kills him (the dreamer)’.

etc. And those well-versed in chapters dealing with dream, speak of dream as indicative of auspicious and inauspicious (happenings). And being an indication is not appropriate in the case of (a dream) dependent upon one's own wish. And so, an inauspicious thing being undesirable, (the Jiva) having created (a dream) indicative of auspicious things alone, would see it. Therefore, creation in dream is effected by Īśvara himself. ॥ 6 ॥

‘Now, when he is in deep sleep, when he does not know of anything, the Nādis called Hṛdā seventy-two thousand of them, proceed from the heart to the Puritat Being surrounded by them he sleeps in the Puritat’
(Br. 2.1.19)

Similarly—

‘Where this Purusa is indeed fast asleep, then, he gentle one, becomes closeted with Sat,’
(Chā 6.8.1)

—Thus the Nādis, Puritat, and Brahman— (these three) are mentioned in the Sruti as being the place of deep sleep. The doubt being there—Are these the alternatives, or are they to be taken together? —(the prima-facie view) being reached—these are the alternatives on account of the apprehension of these being independent of one another, and on account of the impossibility of their staying in different places simultaneously—it is stated (in reply)— Tadabhāvaḥ Tadabhāvaḥ—the absence of dream, deep sleep exists in the Nādis, in the Puritat, and in the Ātman That is, these places are one collective unit—this (is) the sense ‘Whence?’ Tacchruteḥ!—on account of the Sruti mentioning the three as the place. And it is not proper to admit option which involves contradiction of other alternatives, when a collective unit is possible by admitting difference in the working. And the difference in working is possible in the Nādis (veins) etc., as in the case of a palace, a cot and a couch. There the Nādis and the Puritat are in the place of the palace and the cot, but Brahman is in the place of the couch. Therefore, Brahman itself is the direct place of deep sleep ॥ 7 ॥

Therefore, awakening from this. ॥ 8 ॥

Because Brahman alone is the direct place of deep-sleep, therefore the [398] The doubt being raised—Does the same person who is in deep sleep get up at the time of waking up, or some one else? — (the prima-facie view) being reached—some one else gets up, on account of the absence of connection with the previous body and sense-organs etc., of this (Jiva), because he is not different from a released soul, being free from all limiting adjuncts and being merged into Brahman—it is stated (in reply)—But that same—the word Tu (but) turns away the above doubt. He alone gets up. Whence? On account of Karman, remembrance, word and injunction. Karman, for the matter of that, of the nature of merit and demerit, done previously by the one in deep sleep, has got to be enjoyed by that same one, prior to the knowledge of Reality. Remembrance (Anusmṛti) (is of the form)—I, the very one who had been asleep, the same am I awakened—Word also (Śruti passage) shows that one who was asleep and who had awakened are one and the same person—

‘They here, whatever they are, whether a tiger, or a lion, or a wolf, or a boar, or a worm, or a moth, or a mosquito—, they become (after being) awake.’

And the injunctions for the purpose of salvation would be useless if the one in deep sleep were to be released. But he is not free from all limiting adjuncts, with his own form manifested, on account of the mention (in the Śruti)—introducing the person asleep with—

‘Where this one is asleep—’ (Chā. 8-11-1)

‘Not indeed, this one now knows the Ātman thus,—This one I am, neither again these beings; he goes to destruction alone, not do I see anything fit for enjoyment here.’ (Chā. 8-11-1)

And the released soul being omniscient etc., is mentioned in the Śruti in (the passage)

‘Having merged into the highest Light, he rises in his own form, he there wanders about, eating, sporting, enjoying’ (Chā. 8-12-3)

‘He become Self-ruler, in all the worlds there is his movement at will’ (Chā. 7-25-2)

‘The seer, verily, sees everything, attains to everything every way’ (Chā. 7-26-2)

—Therefore, one in deep sleep, moving about, with all one’s sense-organs discarded, incapable of knowledge, enjoyment etc., having gone unto the highest Ātman, the place of rest, refreshed, once again gets up for enjoyment ॥ 9 ॥

Whence? On account of (the rule of) remainder. (It is) not, for the matter of that, dream and the waking state, on account of the absence of consciousness; and it is not deep sleep and death, on account of the difference as regards the cause, and on account of the change in the bodily form; for, the cause of the swoon is the stroke with a club etc. On account of what remains, the swoon is but merging halfway towards death; for, death is the complete cessation of the connection of the body with Prāṇa. The swoon is the persistence of the connection of the body with the subtle Prāṇa ॥ 10 ॥

pointing out to the blemishes. Now, in order to create a thirst for the attainment of Brahman, (the Sūtrakāra) begins (the following sections) for propounding that Brahman which is to be reached, is without blemishes (and) is possessed of auspicious qualities. There now, it is discussed whether the blemishes of the Jīva in the places of the departure in waking, dream, deep sleep and swoon occasioned by those various places —whether those (blemishes) belong even to the inner Controller, the Highest Brahman, abiding in those various states or not—What proper ? They do belong. Whence ? On account of its staying in the body in the different states. I say (says the objector) — In (the Sūtras)—

‘If (it be argued that there is) the acquisition of enjoyment,
(the reply is) No, on account of the distinction’.

(Bra. Sū. 1-28)

(Bra. Sū. 1-3-6)

etc., the absence of any blemish in the case of the Highest, is stated on account of its not being subject to Karman; then, how can you talk of any blemish in the case of the Highest Brahman not subject to any Karman, due to the connection with those various places ?—(the reply is)—Thus we talk (of it) —It has been stated that the Karmans also by bringing about association with the body become the producers of what is not the highest purpose in life in (the Sūtra)—

‘Or, on account of the connection with the body’.

(Bra. Sū. 3-2-5)

And that is so, because the association with the body is not for the purpose of salvation ; otherwise, if Karmans themselves were to produce misery, what is the use of association with the body ? Therefore, although not being subject to Karman, the association with various impure bodies is anyway not salvation.

Therefore, for the purpose of controlling that, even though Brahman were to enter into it at its will, the connection with what is not salvation is unavoidable. For, wallowing into putrid and blood etc., although undertaken at one's own will, is nothing but the reverse of salvation. And although Brahman, the sole cause of the world, is the mine of auspicious qualities, omniscience etc., still, on account of the statement (in the Śruti) in

‘Who, abiding in Ātman’ (Br. 3·7·22)

‘Who, abiding in the eye’ (Br. 3·7·18)

‘Who, abiding in the semen’ (Br. 3·7·23)

etc., there are activities not conducive to salvation, of the form of connection with the various things of Brahman abiding in the various places—

[401] This (prima-facie view) being reached, we reply—Na sthāna-topi parasya—Not even from the places, the earth, Ātman etc., of the Highest Brahman is possible even a tinge of what is not salvation. Whence? Ubhaya-lingam sarvatra hi; for, everywhere in the Śruti and Smṛti works, the Highest Brahman is described as Ubhaya-lingam—endowed with the characteristics of both, having all blemishes removed, and being the mine of all auspicious qualities. For, Brahman is apprehended as possessed of both characteristics from the Śruti and Smṛti (passages)— and there is the repudiation of the reverse of salvation, prompted by the connection with various entities while carrying out the control at his will at the various places. In the case of the Jiva, on the other hand, that his own nature has been concealed is stated here in (the Sūtra)

‘ On account of the reflection of the Highest, however, that is concealed ’.

(Bra. Sū. 3-24)

[403] I say (says the objector)—It has been stated though (the inner Controller is) acting at his sweet will, connection with the reverse of salvation dependent upon the natures of the various entities is unavoidable. (We reply)— This (is) not proper. Not indeed, even a non-sentient thing is by nature itself, the reverse of salvation. In the case of those that are subject to Karman, however, through the wish itself of the highest Purusa, in conformity with the nature of Karman, one and the same thing may be conducive to happiness and to misery, owing to the difference in time, and the difference of the Purusas. But if being of that nature were to be prompted by the nature of the entity, everything always would be conducive to happiness alone or to misery alone for all ! But it is not seen thus. To that same effect, has been stated—

‘ O best of Brāhmanas, demerit and merit are, verily, designated as hell and heaven

Because, one and the same thing is for misery, for happiness, and for the production of envy and anger—therefore, how can a thing be constituted (only) of the nature of a thing ?

That same having been conducive to gratification is, again, produced for misery, because that same is produced for anger, and for gratification.

Therefore, there is nothing constituted of misery or constituted of happiness (alone).’ (V. P. 2:644-47)

Therefore, because Jiva is subject to Karman, in his case, connection itself with the various things in conformity with the various Karmans, is the reverse of salvation. But in the case of the Highest self-dependent Brahman that same connection would be for the mere sportive interest of the form of the various variegated control ॥ 12 ॥

And further, thus some ॥ 13 ॥

And further, students of some recension read with the specific word used, in one and the same connection with the body, the reverse of salvation, but the absence thereof and connection with refulgence dependent upon overlordship in the form of control in the case of the Highest, in,

[404] (The objector says)—Now it may be in (the passage)

‘Having entered into within, with this Living Self, I would modify name and form’ (Chā. 6:3:2)

there is the modification in name and form, preceded by the subsequent entrance of the Jiva with Brahman as his Ātman; so, in the case of Brahman also, which is the Ātman of that, there is the form of god, man etc., and the applicability of those various names etc. And thereupon, being subject to Karman is unavoidable, on account of its coming within the province of the Śāstric injunctions and prohibitions such as—A Brāhmana shall sacrifice—
There says (the Sūtrakāra)—

अरूपवदेव हि तत्प्रधानत्वात् ॥ १४ ॥

[405] ननु च

‘सत्ये ज्ञानमनन्तं ब्रह्म’

(तै २।१)

For, it is void of any form whatsoever, on account of that being the prominent ॥ 14 ॥

Although endowed with the various forms on subsequent entrance into bodies of gods etc., that Brahman is Arūpavadeva—indeed equal to being void of form. That is to say, like the Jīva, being subject to Karman dependent upon being possessed of a body, does not belong to it. Whence? On account of being prominent owing to being the manifestor of that. Although there is the subsequent entrance into everything, (the passage)

Ākāśa, verily, is the manifestor of name and form; within what the two are, that (is) Brahman. (Chā. 8।4।1) propounds Brahman as having the nature of the manifestor itself of name and form, not being touched by the effects of name and form.

I say (says the objector)—When Brahman is the inner Controller, by having that as its body, how could it be said that Arūpavat (is) ‘equal to being divested of the connection with the body’?—(We reply)—Thus—Just as in the case of the Jīva, there is the connection with the various forms on account of his enjoying happiness and misery produced by the various things, in the same way, on account of the absence of that there is the absence of form in the case of the Highest Brahman. The Śāstric passages dealing with injunction and prohibition, have application to one subject to Karman alone. Therefore, the Highest Brahman, verily, is equal to one having no form. And therefore, Brahman although abiding in the form of the inner Controller, is verily, possessed of both the characteristics viz having all the blemishes removed, and being the mine of all auspicious qualities ॥ 14 ॥ etc., Brahman is apprehended as having the sole nature of attributeless light, but the other (nature) should be known as false, as it is being repudiated in

‘Not this, not this’

(Br. 4-2-4)

etc.,—being omniscient, being with thoughts fulfilled, being the cause of the world, being the inmost Ātman of all, being with desires fulfilled, etc.,—so how can Brahman be possessed of both characteristics viz. being the mine of auspicious qualities, and having all blemishes removed? — To this (in reply the Sūtrakāra) says—

And like the light, on account of the significance. ॥ 15 ॥

Just as, in order that (the passages)

(Tai 2-1)

etc., be not without significance, Brahman is admitted to have light as its nature—so, in order that there should be the significance of the passages denoting having thoughts fulfilled, omniscience, being the cause of the entire world, being the Ātman of all, having all the blemishes Avidyā etc. removed—Brahman, verily, is possessed of both the characteristics. ॥ 15 ॥

And says that much. ॥ 16 ॥

Furthermore, the passage

‘Existence, Knowledge, Infinite Brahman’

(Tai. 2-1)

etc., propounds merely that Brahman is possessed of the nature of light : (it) does not repudiate other things known from other (Śruti) passages, such as having the thoughts fulfilled etc. The subject of the repudiation in

‘Not this, not this’

(Br. 4-2-4)

would be mentioned just below. ॥ 16 ॥

दर्शयति चाथो अपि स्मर्यते ॥ १७ ॥

‘यो मामजमनादिं च वेत्ति लोकमहेश्वरम् ।’

(गीता १०।३)

And (the Śruti) shows, and the Smṛti also says. ॥ 17 ॥

The (following) host again of Vedānta passages shows (Brahman's) being the mine of auspicious qualities, and being with all blemishes removed.—

‘Him, the Highest, great Lord of the lords, and him, the highest Deity of deities’ (Śve. 6-7)

‘He (is) the cause, the Lord of the lord of the sense-organs, and there is no progenitor for him, nor a Lord’

(Śve. 6-9)

‘In his case, there is no effect (body) and the sense-organs; there is not to be seen any one equal to him or superior; his supreme power is heard to be definitely multifarious, and knowledge, strength, activity (are all) natural (in him)’

(Śve. 6-8)

‘Who, omniscient, all-knower, whose penance is constituted of knowledge’

(Mu. 1-1-9)

‘Through fear from him, the wind blows on; through fear, rises the Sun’

(Tai. 2-8-1)

‘That alone is the bliss of Brahman’

(Tai. 2-8)

‘From what words turn away, along with the mind, without reaching (the same); one knowing the bliss of Brahman, fears not from anywhere’

(Tai. 2-9)

‘Without parts, without action, tranquil, blameless, stainless’

(Śve. 6-19)

etc. And in the Smṛti it is stated—

‘Who knows me as unborn, beginningless and the Great Lord of the worlds’

(Gītā 10-3)

‘विष्टम्याहमिदं कृत्स्नमेकांशेन स्थितो जगत् ।’ (गीता १०।४२)

‘मयाध्यक्षेण प्रकृतिः सूयते सचराचरम् ।

इत्यादि । अतः सर्वावस्थावस्थितस्यापि ब्रह्मण उभयलिङ्गत्वात् तत्तत्स्थानप्रयुक्ता दोषाः परं ब्रह्म स्पृशन्ति ॥ १७ ॥

अत एव चोपमा सूर्यकादिवत् ॥ १८ ॥

(Gītā 10-42)

‘With me as a supervisor, the Prakṛti produces (the world) along with the movable and the immovable; and by this reason, (O) son of Kuntī, the world goes on, revolving’ (Gītā 9-10)

‘But the highest Puruṣa (is) another, cited as the Paramātmān, who, the Lord immutable, supports the three worlds, having entered into (them)’ (Gītā 15-17)

‘Omniscient, doer of everything, possessed of all power, knowledge, strength, and prosperity; without decrease and without increase, self-dependent, having no beginning, the Controller.

Not associated with exhaustion, idleness, fear, wrath, desire etc., blameless, beyond reach, independent, and with an imperishable course.’ (V. P. 5-1-46-47)

etc. Therefore, even though Brahman abides in all states,—because Brahman is possessed of both the characteristics, the blemishes pertaining to various places do not touch Brahman ॥ 17 ॥

And for this very reason, there is the comparison—like the reflection of the Sun etc. ॥ 18 ॥

Because the Highest Brahman does not share in the blemishes pertaining to them, although abiding in various places.—for this very reason, like the reflected Sun etc., in water, mirror etc., the Paramātmān is free from blemish, although staying in various places—this comparison is made in the Śāstras (Smṛtis)—

‘माषाशमेकं हि यथा घटादिषु पृथग्भवेत् ।

‘For, just as the one Ākāśa becomes different, in jar, etc., similarly, one Ātman, indeed, resides in many places like the Sun

One and the same Ātman of beings, stays well in various beings, and is, indeed, seen as being one, and as being manifold like the (reflection of) the Moon in water’. (Yā. Smr. 3.143-4)
etc. ॥ 18 ॥

[406] Here (the objector) objects—

But not apprehending as in the case of water, it is not like that ॥ 19 ॥

The word Tu indicates the objection. In the expression Ambuvat the termination Vat in used with the locative (Ambuni iva). Just as the Sun, face etc., are apprehended in water, mirror, etc.,—not in the same way is the Paramātmā apprehended in various places, Pṛthivi etc.; for, in the case of water etc., the Sun etc., are apprehended as though being there through misconception, not as abiding there in reality. But here, in (passages)

‘Who, abiding in Pṛthivī’.

(Br. 3.7.3)

‘Who, abiding in waters’.

(Br. 3.7.4)

‘Who, abiding in Ātman’.

(Br. 3.7.22)

and such others, the Paramātmā is apprehended as abiding in the earth etc., in reality. Therefore, the non-contact of the Sun etc., with the blemishes caused by water, mirror etc., is due to not being present itself in those various places. Therefore, the thing to be compared is not like that,—that is to say, is not possessed of the equality with the illustration. ॥ 19 ॥

(The Sūtrakāra) refutes (the above view)—

Sharing in increase and decrease, on account of being included, on account of both (illustrations) being reasonable thus, and on account of this being seen. ॥ 20 ॥

By the illustration of the Sun etc., is refuted merely sharing in the blemishes, such as increase and decrease belonging to the places, the earth etc., in its real nature, and as attributes, in the case of the Highest Brahman abiding in some place being included within the places, the earth etc. How is this known? Ubhayaśāmanījasyāt evaṁ (on account of both (illustrations) being reasonable thus) on account of the reasonableness of both the illustrations this is ascertained. In (the passage)

‘For, as the one Ākāśa may become different in jars etc.,

.....like the Sun in stores of water’ (Yā. Smr. 3.143)

—in the case of the Ākāśa that does abide in reality in many entities full of blemishes, and in the case of the Sun not abiding in reality—the use of both the illustrations becomes reasonable when it is to be propounded that the Paramātmā is to be excluded only from sharing in the blemishes belonging to the earth etc. Just as the sky even though being conjoined separately with jar, hail etc., that are subject to increase and decrease, is not touched by the blemishes—increase, decrease etc., and just as the Sun being seen in the uneven reservoirs of water is not touched by increase, decrease etc., belonging to them—similarly, this Paramātmā abiding in sentient and non-sentient entities of different forms, the earth etc., untouched by blemishes, increase, decrease etc., belonging to those, although existing everywhere, is one alone without any tinge of blemish touching him, the mine of auspicious qualities alone.

This is what is intended to be said— Just as in the case of the Sun not really abiding in water etc., there is no contact with the blemishes of water existence alone, the basis of all particularities, and the particularities are imagined by Brahman not knowing its nature of this form. Therefore, how is Brahman possessed of both characteristics ? There (the Sūtrakāra) says—

For (the passage) repudiates (Brahman's) being so much, the matter in hand, and speaks of again. ॥ 21 ॥

It is not proper to say that in (the passage)

‘Not this, not this’

(Br. 2.3.6)

is repudiated Brahman being possessed of the particular nature under discussion ; in that case, it would be amounting to the prattle of one gone mad. Not, indeed, having taught as the attributes of Brahman, everything not known as attributes by other means of proof, would one not out of senses repudiate the same. Although among those pointed out, some objects are established by other means of proof, still their being the mode of Brahman is definitely not known. In the case of the others, however, their nature as well as their being the mode of Brahman are unknown. Therefore, there being no possibility of their mention being carried forward, they are taught here itself. Therefore, the repudiation of them is not right. Because it is so, therefore, this passage repudiates Brahman being so much, the matter in hand—what particular aspects of Brahman are the matter in hand—the limit being apprehended of Brahman as particularised by them, is repudiated by ‘Not thus, not thus’

(Br. 2.3.6)

Neti neti—not thus, not thus. Brahman is not particularised by only the mode referred to. What limit of Brahman as particularised by the mode referred to, is the matter in hand—that is referred to here by the word Iti—thus (is) the sense ; and because after the repudiation it speaks again of the host of qualities in Brahman, therefore, (the Śruti) repudiates in the case of

Brahman only the limit connected with the particularity which is the matter in hand ; for (the Śruti) speaks again of the host of qualities in ‘Not indeed from this one, not anything beyond it exists. And there is the name, the truth of truth ; Prāṇas, verily, are truth, of them this is the truth.’

(Br. 2.3.6)

—This is the sense—what Brahman is propounded in—Not thus, not thus—Beyond that, beyond this,—there is indeed no object beyond. There is nothing which is by its nature, and by virtue of qualities, superior to Brahman—this (is) the sense, and of that Brahman, Satyasya Satyam is the name. And this is the explanation thereof—Prāṇas indeed are Satya, and of them, this (Paramātmā is) Satya. By the word Prāṇa the Jīvas are referred to, on account of their company with the Prāṇas. They, for the matter of that, (are) Satya, on account of the absence of modification involving change of their nature like the sky etc.

Teṣāmesa Satyam—this highest Puruṣa is Satya, even beyond them. In the case of the Jīvas, contraction and expansion of knowledge in conformity with Karman, do exist. In the case of the highest Puruṣa, however, who is with all sins destroyed, those two do not exist. Therefore, this one is Satya, even beyond them. Hence, in this way, on account of the association with the host of qualities spoken of in the remaining part of the passage, Brahman being possessed of attributes, is not repudiated by (the passage)

‘Not thus, not thus’

(Br. 2.3.6)

but only the limit referred to before. Therefore, the Highest Brahman is possessed of both the characteristics. ॥ 21 ॥

(मु. ३।२।२)

[408] Because Brahman is not within the province of other means of proof, there is the impossibility of its repudiation, by the mention of its having a form and not having a form, being repeated, as being associated with it—and so, the repudiation is spoken of as confined to the limit which is the matter in hand. (The Sūtrakāra) corroborates that same—(i. e.) not being within the province of other means of proof—

For the Sāstra speaks of that as Unmanifest (by the means of proof) ॥ 22 ॥

That Brahman is not made manifest by other means of proof. For, the Sāstra (says)—

‘ His form cannot come within the range of sight; none sees this one by the eye ’.

(Kā. 6-9)

‘ Not by the eye is (it) grasped, nor even by speech ’

(Mu. 3-2-8)

etc. ॥ 22 ॥

And (the Sūtrakāra) speaks of another reason—

And further in concentration, on account of the Śruti and the Smṛti ॥ 23 ॥

Api—and, Samrādhane—in proper propitiation, (i. e.) in contemplation attaining to the status of devotion; verily, there is here direct realisation of this, not elsewhere.—This is known from the Śruti and the Smṛti—

‘ Not is this Ātman to be secured by lectures, nor by memory (intelligence), nor by abundant learning; whom only this one chooses, by him is he to be secured; for him this Ātman lays bare his body. ’

(Mu. 3-2-3)

‘He, with the purified Sattva quality by the favour of knowledge, and then contemplating upon (Him,) he sees Him without parts.’

(Mu. 3-1-8)

— Thus the Śruti; the Smṛti also—

‘Not I, by the Vedas, nor by penance, nor by giving gifts, nor again, by sacrificing’

(Gītā 11-53)

‘But, by whole-hearted devotion, I of such nature, (O) Arjuna, can be known and seen in reality, and also, entered into, (O) enemy-chastiser.’

(Gītā 11-54)

Worship itself attaining to the status of devotion is Samrādhana—his propitiation—this has already been mentioned. Therefore, the Sāstra-
passage

‘Two, indeed (the forms) of Brahman’

(Br. 2-3-1)

etc., teaching the nature of Brahman for contemplation, is not competent to carry forward (repeat) the mention of Brahman being particularised by the two forms, Mūrta (incarnate) and Amūrta (formless) etc., not established before. ॥ 23 ॥

And, like light etc., no distinction; and light in the (Samrādhana-) act through practice. ॥ 24 ॥

[409] For this reason also, (the Śruti) repudiates only so much (limit) of the matter in hand, and not its being particularised by Mūrta and Amūrta (forms) etc., because in the realisation by Vāmadeva and others who directly realised the nature of the Highest Brahman, are apprehended the qualities of Brahman as not showing any particularity even in respect of being particularised by the worldly existence, material and formless states etc., like the nature of knowledge, of bliss etc., as in the case of light etc.—

(The Sūtrakāra now) winds up the topic — Brahman being possessed of both characteristics — under discussion —

Therefore, owing to (being) infinite, and in that way (possessed of both) the characteristics ॥ 25 ॥

Therefore, by the reasons mentioned it has been established that Brahman is particularised by an infinite host of auspicious qualities for (only) in that case Brahman as possessed of both the characteristics becomes appropriate ॥ 25 ॥

Here ends the Ubhayalingadhikarana (5)

the limit of Brahman is repudiated as being possessed of the form of non-sentient entities and the material and formless; by (the passage)

‘ Not, indeed beyond this, — not anything beyond exists ’

(Br. 2.3.6)

is propounded that there is nothing superior to Brahman. For logically arguing it out, by (the passage)

‘ Then the name — Satyasya satyam — (Truth of Truth) —

Prāṇas (are), verily, Satya; of those this, Satya ’ (Br. 2.3.6) is stated that this one is Satya beyond the sentient beings pointed out by the word Prāṇa, on account of the absence of the contraction of knowledge etc., at any time. And similarly, by the Śruti (passages)

‘ The Master of Pradhāna and the Ksetra-knower, the Lord of qualities ’ (Śve. 6.16)

‘ The Master of the universe, the Lord of Ātman ’

(Nā. 13.1)

‘ Eternal of the eternals, sentient of the sentients ’

(Śve. 6.13)

etc., is understood this sense. And now is being considered as to how that non-sentient thing is the mode of being the form of Brahman, to establish that Brahman is free from blemish—(The alternatives are)—

Is this non-sentient entity the form of Brahman in the manner of the serpent and the coil,—or, by the association with one and the same universal, as of the lustre and the lustrous— or, by the relation of the part and the whole, by the relation of the qualification and the qualified as in the case of Jīva himself ?—Having admitted the relation of the qualification and the qualified that is being established here, in (the Sūtras)

‘And the Prakṛti in conformity with the solemn declaration and the illustration’ (Bra. Sū. I. 4-23)

‘That (effect) not being different from that (cause) owing to the word Ārambhana etc.’ (Bra. Sū. II. 1-15)

it has been stated here, that from the Brahman qualified by the subtle sentient and non-sentient entities, there is the origination of something qualified by gross sentient and non-sentient (entities), and also the non-difference. — What (is) proper ? Like the serpent and the coil. Whence ? Ubhayavyapadeśāt — on account of the reference to both; on account of the reference to identity in ‘Brahman alone (is) all this’ (Nr. Tā. 5)

‘Ātman alone, all this’ (Nr. Tā. 5) and on account of the reference to difference in ‘Goodness! Entering into these three duties with this Living Self, I would modify name and form’ (Chā. 6-3-2)

— like the state of coil, and the state of being straight, in the case of the serpent, the non-sentient entities are particular configurations of the same Brahman ॥ 26 ॥

But like light and its resort, owing to (their) being possessed of light ॥ 27 ॥

The word Vā is for the purpose of turning away the (above) view. If the nature of Brahman itself abides in the form of the non-sentient, the Śruti passages speaking of difference and also those speaking of the non-transformation of Brahman would be stultified; therefore, just as there is the identity of lustre and its resort, although different, on account of (both of them) being possessed of lustre, — thus Brahman has a form with the paraphernalia of the non-sentient ॥ 27 ॥

But as before. ॥ 28 ॥

The word Vā is for the purpose of excluding both the (above) views.
Even though one and the same substance be associated with different states, the blemishes mentioned cannot be got rid of, on account of the nature of Brahman itself being non-sentient.

If (it be said that) what is intended here is that there is only the association with the genus Brahman-hood in the case of the non-sentient and Brahman, as in the case of the lustre and its resort — Well, then because like horseness and bullness, Brahman will also be a generality persisting in Īśvara and the sentient and the non-sentient entities, the contradiction with the statement (practice) in all the Śrutis and the Smṛtis, indeed, stands ■ before. Like the Jīva in (the Sūtras) —

‘A portion, on account of the reference as many’

(Bra. Sū. II. 3.42)

‘But like light etc., not thus the Highest’

(Bra. Sū. II. 3.45)

the non-sentient things are a portion of Brahman, because they are the qualification not fit to be separately established. The description of non-difference also is the main thing on account of that being the portion of a qualified thing. And the description of the difference also is the main thing on account of the difference in nature and form of the qualification and the qualified. (In this way), Brahman being void of blemish is also guarded (kept in tact). Therefore, in this way, just as light-generality, quality-body, being qualifications not fit to be separately established, are the portion (respectively) of gem-individual, object possessed of quality and Ātman, similarly here Jīva and the non-sentient objects are a portion in respect of Brahman. ॥ 28 ॥

—And on account of the repudiation of non-sentient nature in the case of Brahman, by these etc., — that is to say, there is the relation of the part and the whole, by the relation itself of the qualification and the qualified. Therefore, Brahman is the cause particularised by subtle sentient and non-sentient entities; Brahman is the effect particularised by gross sentient and non-sentient entities—and so, there is the non-difference of the effect from the cause; by the knowledge of Brahman which is the cause, the effect is known, etc.—all this is quite in order. And (thereby) the blemish-less-ness of Brahman is guarded against. And owing to Brahman being void of blemish and owing to its being the mine of auspicious qualities, Brahman being possessed of both the characteristics also is established ॥ 29 ॥

Here ends the Āhikūṇḍalādhikaraṇa (6)

Something beyond (this) on account of reference to bridge,

(Adhikaraṇa 7, Sūtras 30-36)

[411] Now, having raised a doubt by several fallacious reasonings that there is some principle even beyond the Highest Brahman, this Highest, the highest Cause, constituted of the instrumental and the material causes of the world, — that is being repudiated for the purpose of the firm establishment of being free from blemish and being the mine of unlimited excessive, innumerable auspicious qualities, in the case of this object of worship (Brahman) —

‘अमृतरूप पर सेतु इन्धेन्धनमिवानलम् ।’

(श्वे १।१९)

‘अमृतरूपैव सेतुः’

(मु २।२।५)

There this (is) the doubt—What is this Highest Brahman possessed of both the characteristics — even beyond this, the cause of the entire world, there is some principle How? On account of this Highest being referred to as a bridge in ‘Now, what this Ātman, he (is) the bridge, the support’

(Chā. 8 4 1)

And on account of the word Setu being well-known in the world as the means of reaching the other bank, it is known that there is something to be reached by one, other than this In the same way, this one is mentioned as fit to be crossed over in (the passage)

‘Having crossed over this bridge, one being blind becomes non-blind’

(Chā. 8 4 2)

For this reason also, there is something else to be reached And on account of the reference to the measure — Unmita — measured (is) this Highest Brahman on account of the reference to a measure in (the passages) —

‘Four footed (is) Brahman’

(Chā. 3 18 2)

(Pra 61)

— And that, this reference to the measure indicates the existence of something not measured and which is to be reached by that bridge. And likewise, the reference to the relation of the bridge and the thing to be reached by the bridge, is seen as characterised by the nature of one who leads and the nature of the thing to be reached, as in (the passages)—

‘The highest bridge of the immortal, like fire with the fuel all burnt up’

(Śve 6-19)

‘This, the bridge of immortality’

(Mu 2 2-5)

इति । अतश्च परात्परमस्ति । भेदेन च परात्परं व्यपदिश्यते

(ना. १।५)

इति च । तथा

‘तेनेदं पूर्णं पुरुषेण सर्वम् ।

ततो यदुत्तरतरं तदरूपमनामयम् ।’

(वे. ३।५-१०)

इति । अत एम्यो हेतुन्यः परस्माद्ब्रह्मणः परमपि किञ्चिदस्तीति गम्यत इति ॥ ३० ॥

‘एतं सेतुं तीर्त्वा’

(छा. ८।४।२)

इति तरतिश्च प्रातिचचनो यथा चेद्वर्त्तत तरति, इति ॥ ३१ ॥

And therefore, there is the highest beyond (this) Highest. And something higher than the Highest is indicated separately in (the passages)

‘He goes to the highest Purusa beyond the high’ (Mu. 3.2.8)

‘The high beyond the high—what the great beyond the great’

(Nā. 1.5)

Likewise in

‘By that, all this is filled by the Purusa,

‘And what is still further beyond that, that is the formless, free from disease.’

(Śve. 3.9—10)

Therefore, from these reasons, it is known that there is something even beyond the Highest Brahman ॥ 30 ॥

[412] This (prima-facie view) being reached, it is stated—

But on account of a general (description) ॥ 31 ॥

The word Tu (but) turns away the (above) view. What, for the matter of that, has been stated — there is something beyond the highest, on account of the reference to its being the bridge — that is not proper. Not indeed, is this bridge here spoken of as referring to something to be reached ; on account of the Sruti (passage) speaking of the absence of the confusion of the various worlds by referring to it as a bridge in general in

‘For the non-encroachment (non-breaking) of these worlds’

(Chā. 8.4.1)

Sinoti, binds within; (Brahman) is called Setu as within it the entire aggregate of sentient and non-sentient entities, is not scattered pell-mell In (the passage)—

‘Having crossed over this bridge’

(Chā. 8.4.2)

(the word) Tarati is in the sense of reaching as in — He crosses over (becomes an expert in) the Vedānta ॥ 31 ॥

(Pra 6 1)

(Tai Ā 3 10)

—that is (in respect) of Buddha — for the sake of worship on account of the impossibility of Brahman being measured in its own nature, because Brahman which is the cause of the world is known to be unlimited from etc. For, that alone is known in the Sruti (passages) as the cause of the world,

‘Existence, Knowledge, Infinite Brahman

(Tai 2 1)

‘From that, verily, from this Ātman, Ākāśa is originated’

And on account of propriety ॥ 34 ॥

As to what has been stated—in (the passage)

(Mu. 2-2-5)

on account of the reference to the relation of something reached and something leading to it, there is something to be reached beyond what leads to it. — That (is) not (so), because it is proper that in the case of the highest Puruṣa who is to be reached, he alone should be the means to reach him, on account of the mention by the Śruti of no other means in

(Śve. 3-9)

that the Puruṣa being higher and the impossibility of anything else being beyond that, (the Śruti) concludes the subject-matter mentioned before with reasons, in (the passage) desirous of describing the worship says that the fruit (of the worship) of the nature of reaching that (highest Pūruṣa), called salvation is from this highest Puruṣa alone, in the case of the worshippers. The fruit mentioned in the Śāstra, belonging to this world as well as to the hereafter comes from this very highest Pūruṣa, owing to the situation being common (owing to the common state of things); and so, Phalamatah is spoken of in a general way. Whence this ? On account of propriety; for, that same omniscient, ‘all-powerful, extremely liberal one, when propitiated with sacrifices, gifts and oblations etc., and with the worship, is the master to dispense the aggregate of enjoyments belonging to this as well as to the other world—and salvation of the form of the attainment to his own nature. Not indeed does the non-sentient Karman perishing in a moment, deserve to become the means of the fruit that is to accrue after a lapse of time. ॥ 37 ॥

And on account of the mention in the Śruti ॥ 38 ॥

For, it is mentioned in the Śruti that this one alone gives the fruit of the nature of enjoyment and salvation—

‘He, verily, this great unborn Ātman, the giver of food, the giver of wealth’

(Br. 4-4-24)

‘This one alone causes delight’

(Tai. 2-7)

॥ 39 ॥

[416] Now (the Sutrakāra states) the prima-facie view—

Dharma (says) Jaimini, for this very reason, ॥ 39 ॥

Ata eva—On account of the propriety and on account of the Śāstra, the preceptor Jaimini thinks that Dharma alone of the nature of sacrifices, gifts, oblations and worship is the giver of fruit; for, in the world, Karman such as an agricultural operation and Karman such as the giving of gifts etc., are seen to be the means of the fruit of their own accord, either directly or indirectly.

Thus, even in the Vedas, even though sacrifices, gifts, offerings etc., are not the direct means of the fruit, their being the means of the fruit indirectly through the Apūrva (Unseen) is appropriate. In the same way, the Śāstric passage—One desirous of heaven should sacrifice—etc., mentioning sacrifices etc. as fit to be performed by one desirous of accomplishing the heavenly world, does make one understand that it (Karman) alone is the means of the fruit through the Apūrva, it not being accounted for otherwise. ॥ 39 ॥

But, the former (says) Bādarāyaṇa, on account of the reference to the producing cause. ॥ 40 ॥

[417] The word Tu (but) is for turning away the (above) view. His Holiness Bādarāyaṇa thinks that the highest Purusa himself is the giver of fruit, as mentioned before. Whence? Hetuvyapadeśāt—because there is the reference even in the various passages, to the deities, fire, wind etc., alone that are to be propitiated in the sacrifices etc., that involve the worship of the deities in accordance with (the etymological meaning of) the root Yaj meaning—to worship the gods,—as being the producing cause in respect of the various fruits—

etc. Inasmuch as the teaching also about the mode of being the means of the fruit desired to be accomplished, in the case of one longing for it, stands certainly in need of an injunction—thus the doubt about its referring to something else is not proper.

Thus, when the mode also about being the means of the fruit that is desired, is known from the word (of the Śruti) itself, persons honouring the means of proof do not tolerate abandoning that and fancying the Unseen, etc.,

It has already been stated that the injunctive mood etc., mention that the meaning of the root of Yāga (sacrifice) etc., which involves the worship of the deities, is to be accomplished by the operation of the agent, is proved by etymology and is favoured by the rules of grammar, and not anything else that is not mundane.—Thus in this way, from the Word (the Śruti)—

etc., Wind and others are known to be givers of fruit. And that the highest Purusa alone remains as the giver of fruit, being fit to be worshipped as he is the Ātman of Vāyu etc., is mentioned in the Śruti—

‘He, the navel of the universe, supports sacrifices, pious deeds etc., the universe, produced or being produced in various ways—that same (is) Āgmi; that, Vāyu, that, the Sun; that, verily, the Moon.’

(Nā. 1.2)

Third Quarter of the Third Chapter

What is understood from all the Vedāntas, on account of the directive etc., being non-different ॥ 1 ॥

(Adhikaraṇa 1, Sūtras 1-5)

[418] What had to be said for producing a desire to worship Brahman, right up to Brahman being the giver of fruit, has been (already) stated. Now, the discussion about the difference and non-difference of the Vidyās, is mooted in the case of (the different kinds of) worships of Brahman, for the purpose of deciding the optional inclusion of the qualities. First, for the matter of that, it is considered whether in the case of the same Vaiśvānara-Vidyā etc., being mentioned in the Śruti in various recensions, there is one Vidyā or different Vidyās. Because, the repeated mention in the Śruti without any difference and the context being different, make for difference, and because both these are unavoidable in another recension, there is the difference in the Vidyās—This (prima-facie view) is reached. For this very reason, the restriction regarding the teaching of the Vidyā is appropriate in the case of the students of the Atharvaveda alone, observing the vow of carrying the fire on the head, as (in the passage)—

‘ For them alone, one should expound this Brahmanvidyā, by whom has been properly observed the vow of carrying the fire on the head. ’
(Mu. 3.2.10)

For, if the Vidyā was to be one, the Śirovrata, a factor of the Vidyā, would have to be accepted by students of other recensions as well—so, the restriction would not be appropriate.

[419] यत्कृतम्— अविशेषपुनःश्रवणात्प्रकरणान्तराच्च विधेयभेदप्रतीतिर्न विद्यैक्यमिति, तदनुभाष्य परिहरति—

This (prima-facie view) being reached, it is stated (in reply) —

There is only one worship—what is understood from all Vedāntas. Whence? On account of the non-different directive etc. The directive, for the matter of that, is a special injunction involving the root-meaning as homogeneous with expressions like—one should worship, one should know—By the word Adi are to be understood (factors such as) the connection, form, and name mentioned in the Sūtras in the topics of other recensions of the Karmakāṇḍa, as in

‘Or one, on account of the connection, form, directive, name, being non-different’ (Jai. Sū. 2-4-9)

—on account of the directive etc., being non-different, it is recognised in another recension, that this is that same Vidyā. Thus (to explain the same) — In the Chāndogya and the Vājasaneyaka recensions, the directive, for the matter of that, is the same—

on account of the use of the root Upās, the synonym of Vid. The form of the worship the nature of which is to be pointed out, as the one to be known, is also not different, on account of the oneness of Vaiśvānara, the object to be known. And the name viz. Vaiśvānara-Vidyā is the same. The connection with the fruit of the form of reaching Brahman in even both is not different. Thus, on account of the recognition of these (indications), there is the oneness of Vidyā even in the other recension. ॥ 1 ॥

[419] As to what has been stated that because there is the mention once again without any difference, and there is a separate context, there is apprehended the difference of the object of injunction—and so, there is no oneness of the Vidyās — (the Sūtrakāra) refutes, having commented upon that—

If (it be argued) No, on account of the difference —
(we reply) — even in the case of one (Vidyā) ॥ 2 ॥

If it be argued that there is no sameness of the Vidyā on account of the difference of the object of injunction, owing to the mention in the Śruti again, of no difference, and the context being different — (we reply) — Even in the case of one and the same Vidyā, the mention again in the Śruti, the separate context — these are appropriate on account of the person learning that being different. For, where, the student being the same, there is the mention in the Śruti again, and a separate context, — there the thing being not capable of being accounted for otherwise, there is the difference of Vidyās, on account of the difference of the object enjoined. But, when the students are different, the mention in the Śruti again, etc., being accounted for by serving the purpose of comprehension by them, there is no possibility of another to be enjoined ॥ 2 ॥

[420] As to what has been said that the difference of Vidyās is apprehended, on account of the existence of the teaching of the Vidyā being restricted only to the followers of the Atharvaveda observing the Śirovratā — here (the Sūtrakāra) says —

The study of one's own Veda is for that purpose, on account of the authority of the Samācāra, and like the Sava (offering), that restriction, ॥ 3 ॥

It is not that the existence of the restriction regarding the teaching about the Śirovratā points out to the difference in Vidyās, because the Śirovratā is not a part of the Vidyā; for, that is the rule only when the study of one's own Veda is like that (part of the Vidyā); for, the rule about the teaching of the Śirovratā is for making one's own Veda have that nature, and for the sake of making it fit for being the resort of impressions produced by it, and not for the Vidyā. Whence this? Because in that is connected with the study. Samācāre adhikārācca — in the work called Samācāra, this also is explained as being a vow for the study of the Veda — on account of this extension of the principle — to them only

And (the Śruti) points out. ॥ 4 ॥

And the Śruti points out that the worship is apprehended from all the Vedānta passages — To explain the same — In the Chāndogya, having stated

‘What is inside in that, that is to be searched for’

(Chā. 8-1-1)

it has been stated, with the question preceding it

‘What is that existing-here which is to be searched for?’

(Chā. 8-1-2)

that the Paramātman is to be worshipped therein, who is particularised by the eight qualities, being with sins destroyed, etc. And in the Taittiriya (Upaniṣad), having based its statement upon the corresponding reference in the Chāndogya, is mentioned the worship of the Paramātman particularised by the eight qualities —

‘तत्रापि दहं गगनं विज्ञोक्तस्मिन्पदन्तस्तदुपासितव्यम्’

‘There also, the Dahara sky, free from grief; what is inside in that, that is to be worshipped’

(Nā. 12.3)

— (so) the Vidyā being the same in both, that is appropriate by the inclusion itself of the qualities. ॥ 4 ॥

Thus in this way, having firmly established the oneness of Vidyās proved by the maxim referring to the topic in another recension, (the Sūtrakāra) speaks of the purpose thereof—

Inclusion definitely on account of the subject-matter being the same, like the subsidiary matter of the injunction, (and the Upāsana) being common ॥ 5 ॥

Thus the worship being the same in all Vedāntas, the inclusion has to be made in another Vedānta passage, of qualities mentioned in other Vedānta passages — Whence ? On account of the identity of the subject-matter (the sense), like the subsidiary matter of the injunction. Just as the quality which is the subsidiary matter to the injunction referring to Vaiśvānara, Dahara etc., mentioned in one Vedānta, is put to use on account of its connection with the Vidyā, and for the sake of effecting the purpose of the form of its obligation; similarly (the guṇa) although mentioned in another Vedānta has got to be included, on account of its having connection with the Vidyā and on account of the non-distinction of its obligation. The word Ca is for emphasis. ॥ 5 ॥

Here ends the Sarvavedāntapratyayādhikaraṇa (1)

If (it be argued), being different on account of the Word,

(we reply) — No, on account of the non-distinction ॥ 6 ॥

(Adhikaraṇa 2, Sūtras 6-9)

[420A] Thus, on account of the sameness of Directive etc., there is oneness of Vidyā, and in the case of oneness, the inclusion of the attributes ha to be effected — this has been stated (so far). Now, further referring to certain Vidyās, a decision is arrived at after having scrutinised — whether, there is non-difference of the directive etc., which are the cause of recognition, or not. There is the Udgīthavidyā of the Vājasaneyins and the Chandogas. In the case of the Vājins, for the matter of that, — beginning with ‘Both indeed, the sons of Prajāpati, — the Devas and the Asuras’ (Br. 1.3.1)

having made a solemn declaration about the destruction of the Asuras by the Udgītha and having mentioned the defeat by the Asuras on account of the superimposing of Vāk etc., up to the mind on the Udgītha, in

‘The Devas, verily, said — Goodness! We shall be superceding the Asuras in the sacrifice by the Udgītha’ (Br. 1.3.1)

—having spoken of the defeat of the Asuras by the superimposition of Prāna on the Udgītha, in

‘Now they said to this Prāna in the mouth’ (Br. 1.3.7) etc., the superimposition upon the Udgītha, of the Prāna is enjoined for securing the fruit, the defeat of the enemies in

‘He becomes powerful himself, and his hating enemy is defeated, who knows this.’ (Br. 1.3.7)

Thus, in the case of the Chandogas also, beginning with

‘Where the Devas and Asuras, indeed, verily, came together (for fight)’ (Chā. 1.2.1)

having solemnly declared that they would defeat the Asuras by the Udgītha, in

‘Then the Devas chanted the Udgītha — by this we will defeat these (Asuras)’ (Chā. 1.2.1)

likewise mentioning the blemish in the superimposition of Vāk etc., — and then having spoken of the defeat of the Asuras, by the superimposition of Prāna on the Udgītha, him, the Udgītha’ (Chā. 1.2.7) etc., in

‘Just as he destroys the solid stone, he destroys him who desires evil in one who knows this.’ (Chā. 1.2.8)

the superimposition of Prāṇa on the Udgītha is enjoined for the defeat of the enemies. Although there is no mention of the injunction-termination referring to knowing, the injunction referring to knowing is presumed owing to the mention in the Sṛuti of its being the means of the fruit. Although the Udgītha-Vidyā has for its fruit something in conformity with the sacrifice as it is meant for the sacrifice, the fruit although mentioned in the glorificatory passages, but not opposed to it, has got to be accepted—this has been propounded in the Devatā topic. (Bra Sū. I-3-25)

[421] There arises a doubt—Is there here the oneness of Vidyā, or not? What proper? Oneness of the Vidyā. Whence? Because the directive is the same in both cases, and Udgītha alone is mentioned as the object of worship with the nature of Prāṇa superimposed upon it. About the connection with the fruit, for the matter of that, viz. the defeat of the enemies, there is no difference. Regarding Rūpa (form) also, there is no distinction, on account of the object of worship being the same, known as Udgītha with the nature of Prāṇa superimposed on it. The injunction also is not different, associated with the sense of the root Vid. The name, Udgītha-Vidyā is also the same.—Here, having put forward the objector's view almost appearing like the final view, the Sūtrakāra refutes the same—‘If (it be argued), being different on account of the Word, (we reply)—No, on account of the non-distinction.

As to what has been said that there is oneness of the Vidyās, (our reply is) that is not proper, on account of the difference in form. The difference in the form is apprehended from the word itself. In the Vajasaneyaka, indeed,

‘Then they said to this Prāna in the mouth—Sing on for us—

All right (Prana said)—This Prāna sang for them’ (Br 1-3-7)

—in this (passage), having spoken of the defeat of the Asuras by the superimposition of Prana upon the agent of singing from (the passage),

‘He who knows thus’ (Br. 1-3-7) is apprehended from the word Evam, the superimposition of Prāna upon the agent alone. In the Chāndogya, having spoken of the defeat of the Asuras by the superimposition of Prāna on the Udgītha, the topic of singing—in (the passage)

‘Now indeed, who, verily, is this chief Prāna, they worshipped him, the Udgītha,’ (Chā 1-2-7)

‘One who desires evil in one who knows thus’ (Chā 1-2-8)

—from the word Evam is enjoined the superimposition of Prāna, upon the Udgītha the subject-matter. Therefore the difference in the form is quite clear on account of the word (of the Sruti) superimposing the Prāna upon the agent in one place, and the word superimposing the Prāna upon the subject-matter in another. —If there is the difference of object of injunction when there is the difference in form, the non-difference regarding the mere directive etc., is of no importance, —and so, there is the difference in the Vidyās —If (it is argued) thus, (we say)—No, on account of the non-distinction, without any distinction is apprehended in the introductory parts in both places, the defeat of the enemies with Udgītha as the means. In the Vājasaneyaka in the introductory part is mentioned

‘ ते ह देवा ऊजुर्हन्तासुरान्वह उद्गीथेनात्ययाम ’

(छा. १।१।१०-१।२।१)

‘ The gods, verily, said — Goodness ! We would put it over the Asuras in the sacrifice by the Udgitha ’

(Br. 1.3.1)

— In the Chāndogya also in ‘ Then indeed the gods sang the Udgitha — we shall destroy these by this ’

(Chā. 1.2.1)

— Therefore, in order that there should be no contradiction with the introductory part, in ‘ This Prāṇa sang for these ’

(Br. 1.3.7)

the Udgitha with the nature of Prāṇa superimposed upon it, although it is the subject of singing itself, is spoken of as the agent, in order to refer to the extreme ease, like the mention of Odana (rice) etc., referring to its cooking etc., (odanah pacyate). Otherwise, the word Udgitha mentioned in the introductory part would just be in a metaphorical sense. Therefore, there is the oneness of the Vidyās ॥ 6 ॥

[422] This (prima-facie view) being reached, we reply —

Not so, on account of the difference of the context, like the qualities, being high and low. ॥ 7 ॥

The expression Na vā turns away the objection. It is not that there is oneness of the Vidyās. Whence ? On account of the difference of the context. In (the passage),

‘ One should worship the Udgitha as the syllable Om ’

(Chā. 1.1.1)

having praised the Praṇava (Om) the matter in hand, which is a part of the Udgitha, there follows an exposition of this same syllable — Beginning with

‘ Where the gods and the Asuras indeed, verily, clashed ’

(Chā. 1.1.10-1.2.1)

इत्यात्म्य

‘अथ ह य एवायं मुख्यः प्राणस्तमुद्गीथमुपासांवाञ्जिते’ (छा. १।२।७)

‘अथ हेममासन्यं प्राणमूचुस्त्वं न उद्गायेति । तथेति तेभ्य एष प्राण उद्गायत्’ (बृ. १।३।७)

the Chandogas read

‘Now indeed, who, verily, is this chief Prāṇa — him the Udgītha, they worshipped’ (Chā. 1-2-7)

about the worship referring to the Pranava, a part of the Udgītha. The Vājins, however, on account of the absence of such an earlier chapter, having praised the entire Udgītha in ‘Goodness! We would put it over the Asuras in the sacrifice by the Udgītha’ (Br. 1-3-1)

read concerning the entire Udgītha topic

‘And then, they said to this Prāṇa in the mouth — Sing you for us’ (Br. 1-3-7)

etc. Thus, on account of the difference in the contexts, there is the difference of one enjoined; and on account of the difference of the one enjoined, there is the difference of form; — and so, there is no oneness of Vidyās.

Furthermore, the Pranava alone which is a part of the Udgītha, the matter in hand before, with the nature of Prāṇa superimposed upon it in (the passage) is the entity to be worshipped for the Chandogas. In the case of the Vājins, however, the singer, the agent of the entire Udgītha is the object of worship with the superimposition of Prāṇa.

‘Now, indeed, who, verily, is this chief Prāṇa — him, the Udgītha, they worshipped’ (Chā. 1-2-7)

Having pointed out the superimposition of Prāṇa upon the singer, in (the passage)

‘Now, verily, they said to this Prāṇa in the mouth — Sing you for us — All right (Prāṇa said) — This Prāṇa sang for them,’ (Br. 1-3-7)

it is enjoined in

‘Who knows thus’

(Br. 1.3.7)

that the singer himself, with the nature of Prāṇa superimposed is the object of worship. Thus, there is the difference of form. Not, indeed, should it be doubted that there is the contradiction with the introductory part of the story in when the singer is prescribed as the object of worship; because, when worshipping the singer, the Udgītha which is the subject of singing has got necessarily to be there, as it also is the cause of the fruit, viz. the defeat of the enemies. Therefore, on account of the difference in form, there is the difference of Vidyā—and so, even when the directive is the same, there is no oneness of Vidyā.

‘We would put it over by the Udgītha’

Parovariyastvādivat—Just as in one and the same recension, even though there is the similarity of injunction about the superimposition of the Paramātmān upon the Prāṇa that is a part of the Udgītha;—on account of the injunction about the superimposition of the Golden Puruṣa, the injunction about the superimposition particularised by the qualities, being the best of the eminent etc., is another matter ॥ 7 ॥

If that is said, on account of the name; that also, however, exists ॥ 8 ॥

If the oneness of the Vidyās is spoken of (by the objector) on account of the name Udgīthavidyā being the same,—(the answer is) that sameness of the name does exist even when there is a difference in the object of injunction. Just as the name Agnihotra refers to the permanent (daily) Agnihotra, and also to the Ayanāgnihotra of the Kuṇḍapāyins, and just as the name Udgīthavidyā applies to many Vidyās mentioned in the first chapter in the Chāndogya. ॥ 8 ॥

And on account of the extention (to it, everything is) all right. ॥ ९ ॥

In the case of the subsequent Vidyās in the Chāndogya in the first chapter, Praṇava, a part of the Udgītha, which is first introduced, being extended as the object of worship, it is quite right that the word Udgītha that comes in the middle in (the passage) should be referring to Praṇava itself. And a word signifying an aggregate is seen to refer to a part in expressions like — Cloth is burnt. And so, because Praṇava alone, that is the part of Udgītha is indicated by the word Udgītha, that same as the object of worship through the superimposition of Praṇa should be understood (as being referred to) in the Chāndogya. In the case of the Vājasaneyaka, however, the word Udgītha refers to the entire Udgītha, and so, the agent of the entire Udgītha, the singer is the object of worship through the superimposition of Praṇa — and so, it is proved that the Vidyās are different ॥ 9 ॥ etc. There, having propounded Prāṇa possessed of the attributes of being the eldest and being the best, as the object of worship; having propounded in the case of the tongue, eye, ear and mind, the attributes known as the utmost glory, stability, merging and being the resort; having propounded the superiority (eminent nature) of the Prāṇa because the tongue etc., and the body have their existence dependent upon Prāṇa, and because their various acts are dependent upon him (Prāṇa), (the passage) propounds the attributes, utmost glory etc., mentioned as being associated with the tongue etc., as being connected with Prāṇa. Thus in the Chāndogya and the Vājasaneyaka is propounded as object of worship, the Prāṇa possessed of the attributes, being the eldest and being the best, and the attributes utmost glory etc. But in the Prāṇavidyā of the *Kauṣītaki*s, in the same way Prāṇa possessing the attributes, being the eldest and being the best, is propounded as the object of worship; but, are not propounded the attributes, utmost glory etc., connected with the tongue etc., as being connected with Prāṇa.

‘Then verily, the gods sang the Udgītha’ (Chā. 1.2.1)

There (arises) a doubt—Is the Vidyā here different or not? What proper? Is different. Whence? On account of the difference in form. Although in both places, Prāṇa himself with the attributes of being the eldest and being the best, is apprehended as the object of worship; still in one place, Prāṇa is apprehended as the object of worship, endowed with the attributes, utmost glory etc., also; but elsewhere as bereft of them,—so, on account of the difference in form of the object of worship, there is the difference of Vidyā.—This (prima facie view) being reached, we reply—*Sarvābhedādanyatre*me, Here is no difference of Vidyā. Anyatra—in the Prāṇavidyā of the *Kauṣītaki*s also; Ime—the attributes, utmost glory etc., are the objects of worship. Whence? Sarvābhedāt—on account of the non-difference there also of everything—the mode of justifying Prāṇa being the eldest and the best, that has been promised (to be proved). To explain the same—In the Prāṇa-vidyā of the students of the Chāndogya and the Bṛhadāranyaka—

—having begun thus, and having propounded that on the departure of each one of them, Vāk etc., the other sense-organs along with the Prāṇa, and the body remained and their various functions remained unimpaired and having mentioned that on the departure of Prāṇa all became shattered (helpless), and incapable of functioning. Prāṇa being the eldest is reasoned out on the strength of all having their existence dependent upon Prāṇa and their functioning dependent upon that (Prāṇa). And the dependence of the functioning of Vāk etc. on Prāṇa, argued out thus is repeated by Vāk etc., in (the passage)—

‘Then indeed Vāk said unto him—In that I am the richest, you are (really) the richest therein.’ (Chā. 5.1.13 ; Br. 6.1.14)

In the Prāṇavidyā of the Kauṣītakin also, the attributes, being the richest etc., have been mentioned in connection with Vāk and others, for the sake of propounding Prāṇa being the eldest and the best. In (the passage)

‘Then, verily, these deities going to Prajāpati, their father, said—who, verily, is the best of us?’

etc., Prāṇa being the eldest is argued out because the attributes belonging to Vāk etc., and the body are dependent upon Prāṇa. Only the repetition of the statement has not been made by Vāk and others, about their own attributes, being the richest etc., dependent upon Prāṇa. Not by so much (is) the difference in form ; because it is established that Prāṇa is the cause of the attributes, being the richest etc., of Vāk etc., by the arguing out itself of Vāk etc., endowed with the attributes, being the richest etc., having their activity depended upon Prāṇa; and that same—what is the cause of Vāk etc., Prāṇa’s be- associated with the attributes, being the richest etc. Therefore, here also, on account of his association with the attributes, being the richest etc., Prāṇa is known as the eldest.—and so, there is no difference of Vidyā. Some other exposition referring to the accessories of the Prāṇavidyā would be made immediately. ॥ 10 ॥

Here ends the Sarvābhedaādhikaraṇa (3)

[424] Just as, because association with (the attributes) being the eldest and being the best, of Prāṇa, could not be accounted for, without the association with being the richest etc, there was the acceptance in the Prāṇavidyā of the Kauṣītakin of (the attributes) being the richest etc., though not (specifically) mentioned; similarly, the attributes without which the continuing association of the nature of Brahman is not possible,—these should be associated with, in all the Brahmanvidyās—this matter is being propounded—

Bliss etc. (on account of not being different) of the Principal ॥ 11 ॥

(Adhikaraṇa 4, Sūtras 11-17)

Here it is being considered—Is there inclusion in all the Paravidyās, of the natural attributes of Brahman, or not? There being no authority for inclusion (of the attributes) not read in the (particular) context, there should be the inclusion only of those mentioned (in the Śruti) in the context—This (prima-facie view) being reached, we say (in reply)—

Ānandādayaḥ pradhānasya—the expression Abhedāt continues (here from the previous Sūtra)—Pradhānasya—of Brahman, the entity possessed of attributes; on account of the non-difference in all the Upāsānās, on account of the attributes not being different from the entity possessing those, everywhere its (Brahman's) attributes, bliss etc., are to be included. ॥ 11 ॥

[425] (The objector says)—Well, in that case, on account of the very fact that they are not separate from the entity possessing the attributes, (the attributes) agreeable, the head etc., like bliss etc., in (the passage)—

‘तस्य प्रियमेव शिरः’

‘For him, what is agreeable itself is the head’ (Tai. 2-5) etc., which are mentioned in the Śruti as the attributes of Brahman, would be perforce encroaching everywhere—No, says (the Sūtrakāra)—

The non-admittance of having agreeable, the head etc., because, increase and decrease, if difference. ॥ 12 ॥

When the admittance of the natural qualities of Brahman is being mentioned, the attributes—agreeable, the head etc., are not admitted, because they are not the attributes of Brahman, on account of (the attributes) agreeable, the head, etc., being included only within the identity-description of Brahman as a human being; otherwise, if there are different limbs such as head, side, tail etc., there would be the undesirable contingency of increase and decrease in the case of Brahman also. And in that case, (the passage),

etc., would be contradicted ॥ 12 ॥

[426] I say (says the objector)—All (attributes) would be perforce encroaching everywhere, if there is the inclusion in this way itself, even of (attributes) though not mentioned in the Śruti, merely by their staying not apart from the entity possessing the attributes—endless attributes, connected with the Brahman itself, such as overlordship, unfathomable nature, generosity, mercy etc. And there is also the incapability of inclusion on account of their being endless.—There says (the Sūtrakāra)—

But others, on account of the similarity to the object.

The word Tu turns away the objection. Itare tu—bliss etc., persist everywhere, Arthasāmānyāt—on account of the similarity to the object—

(का. ३।३)

इत्यादिनोपासकस्य तदुपकरणानां च रथिरथावित्वरूपणमुपसनोपकरणभूतशरीरेन्द्रियादिवशी-

But those that are similar to the object, and are closely concerned with the apprehension of the object, being possessed of the qualification pointing out to the nature of the object, — they persist everywhere, like the nature of the object. And those attributes are, existence, knowledge, bliss, spotlessness etc. The Brahman characterised as being the cause of the world in

(Tal. 3-1)

etc., is indeed described in its nature by the (attributes) — bliss etc., in ‘Existence, Knowledge, Infinite Brahman’

(Tai. 2-1)

‘Bliss, Brahman’

(Tai. 3-6)

Therefore, for the apprehension of the nature of Brahman, the object of worship, the attributes bliss etc., persist in all the Vidyās. But the qualities, mercy etc., that are associated with Brahman whose nature is explained, although they do not exist as separate from their substratum, there is the absence of the continuing apprehension and therefore, wherever these (qualities) are mentioned in the Śruti, they should be included there—This is unobjectionable. ॥ 13 ॥

[427] (Now), if the attributes—agreeable, the head etc., are merely for the sake of describing Brahman as a human being, for fear of increase and decrease being attributed (to Brahman), but are not the attributes of Brahman,—then for what reason is Brahman which is not of that form, described as being that ? For, surely there must be some reason or other in describing something not that, as that. As in (the passage)

etc., is stated that the (metaphorical) description as the warrior in the chariot and the chariot, of the worshipper and the means thereof, is given for the sake of controlling the body, the sense-organs etc., that are the means for the worship. Not again, is seen here some reason like that. Therefore, that the Priyaśirastva etc., are the attributes of Brahman, must compulsorily be admitted—There says (the Sūtrakāra)

For contemplation, on account of the absence of (any other) purpose. ॥ 14 ॥

On account of the absence of any other purpose, this metaphorical description is given for the sake of contemplation. Ādhyāna is said to be contemplation, worship. For, in order to accomplish the knowledge in the form of contemplation, taught here in (the passage)

‘The knower of Brahman secures the Highest’ (Tai. 2.1) Brahman full of bliss is taught after being metaphorically described as head/sides etc., being divided in the form of agreeable, delight etc., for the sake of knowing Brahman to be full of bliss. Just as the Purusa constituted of food; this body, with the head, sides etc. is superimposed upon the Buddhi, in

‘Of him, this same head’ (Tai. 2.1) etc., — and as in

‘Of him Prāna himself, the head’ (Tai. 2.2) etc., those constituted of Prāna, constituted of mind, constituted of Vijñāna, are superimposed upon the Buddhi by the parts of Prāna etc.; exactly in the same manner their inmost Ātman, a different entity from these, the one although constituted of Bliss, is superimposed upon the Buddhi, for the sake of contemplation with agreeable, delight, etc., existing in a portion—being identified with head, etc. Thus, on account of Priyaśirastva etc., ‘being the pointers to the Anandamaya, they do not always persist in the apprehension of the Ānandamaya. ॥ 14 ॥

I say (says the objector)— If in ‘Another inside, Ātman constituted of mind’ (Tai. 2.3)

the word Ātman has been used before in respect of even the non-Ātmans— how can it be ascertained that the word Ātman in (the passage)

If it be objected, on account of the continued association, (the answer is)—it is so, on account of the definite ascertainment. ॥ 17 ॥

[428] If (it be argued) that it is not possible from the next (passage) on account of the word Atman being seen to be associated with the Prāṇamaya etc., the Anātmans, in the previous passages — to conclude (as you have done) — (We reply) Syādavadhāraṇāt — Syāt — There is definitely the conclusion. Whence? Avadhāraṇāt — From the ascertainment. Because previously also in (the passage),

(Tai. 2.1)

the Paramātmā alone is ascertained in the mind; so, first the notion about the Paramātmā came to be associated with the Prāṇamaya inside the Annamaya; then with the Manomaya inside the Prāṇamaya; then with the Vijñānamaya. Thence, the Paramātmā-notion, transferred over to the Anandamaya became stabilised on account of the absence of anything inside it (the Ānandamaya) and from the next passage

‘He desired’

(Tai. 2.6)

— and so, there is the continued association of the word Atman referring to the Paramātmā-notion in respect of the non-Paramātmā even in the introduction, and so (everything is) flawless ॥ 17 ॥

[429] Now is being considered what is the subsidiary (remainder) to the Prāṇavidyā introduced before. In the Chāndogya and the Vājasaneyaka passages, having spoken of Prāṇa, the eldest and the best as the object of worship, waters are mentioned as being the garment of Prāṇa—In the Chāndogya, for the matter of that,

‘He, verily, said—What would be my garment ? They said—waters. Therefore, verily, the persons desirous of eating this, envelope him (Prāṇa) with waters before and after. Thereby he secures a garment, becomes non-naked’.

(Chā. 5.2.2)

In the Vājasaneyaka,

‘Which (is) my garment?’

(Br. 6.1.14)

—asked by Prāṇa thus, Vāk, etc., said

‘Waters, garment.’

(Br. 6.1.14)

‘Brāhmaṇas knowing that, well-versed in the Vedas, desirous of eating, sip water, and having eaten, sip water; thereby they think that they are making this one, Prāṇa himself, not naked’

(Br. 6.1.14)

‘Therefore, one knowing thus, about to eat, should sip water, after eating, should sip water. Thereby, he makes this Prāṇa himself not naked’.

(Śa. Brā. 14.9.2.15)

There (arises) the doubt—Is here sipping of water enjoined or is there a continued idea of waters being the garment of Prāṇa? Because there is the use (mention) of the optative termination in respect of sipping, in ‘अक्षिष्यन्नाचमेदशित्वा चाचमेत्’

‘About to eat, he should sip water (Ācāmet); after eating also, should sip water’

(Ś. B. 14·9·2·15)

and because there is the absence of the optative termination in respect of knowledge in (the passage)

‘Thereby, he makes that Prāṇa himself non-naked’

(Ś. B. 14·9·2·15)

and because the mention about the non-naked state can be justified as being associated with it, being intended for glorification, there is a mention of another sipping of water which forms a part of Prāṇavidyā, on the strength of the optative termination, the sipping of water forming a part of the meal, becomes incumbent on account of the Smṛti and the code of conduct.—

[430] This (prima-facie view) being reached, we say (in reply)—
It is the continued idea itself of the waters to be sipped being the garment of Prāṇa, which is enjoined here, the Apūṛva (a new thing) not secured before. Kāryākhyānāt—on account of the statement about what has not been there; on account of the Śāstra being significant only in mentioning things not secured before—this (is) the sense. This is what is intended to be said—

On account of the apprehension that the passages in the introductory and the concluding portions—

‘Which, my garment? Waters, garment’

(Chā. 5·2·2; Br. 6·1·14)

‘He envelopes by the waters’

(Chā. 5·2·2)

‘Thereby, he makes this Prāṇa himself non-naked’

(Śa·Brā. 14·9·2·15)

as looking upon waters as the garment of Prāṇa, having merely repeated the sipping of water, which is to be practised on account of the Smṛti, and the code of conduct, the continued idea of the waters when being sipped

There (arises) a doubt—Is here the Vidyā different or not?—Although the connection, directive, and name are common, there is difference in Vidyā on account of the difference in form, due to the difference in qualities of the object of worship, being the controller etc.—This (prima-facie view) being reached, it is said (in reply)—Samāna evam—being common thus—As in the Agnirahasya is mentioned the host of qualities—being constituted of mind, having the Prāṇa-body, form of refulgence, having thoughts fulfilled etc.,—thus even in the Bṛhadāranyaka, being constituted of mind etc., being common, and being the controller etc., not being different, from the quality, having the thoughts fulfilled—there is no difference of form. Therefore, there is the oneness of Vidyā. ॥ 19 ॥ and referring to the body, in ‘His secret name Aham’

(Br. 5.5.4)

—these are mentioned as forming part of the worship. Are these fixed up as being confined to the particular places as mentioned, or both of them there in both places without any restriction? —This being the doubt, because Brahman is connected with both the places, (Brahman) which is the object of worship, with the body, the name Satya,—there is the non-difference of form on account of the object of worship being the same, and on account of the identity of the Vidyās due to the non-difference of Samyoga (association) etc., —this (prima facie view) reached is that there is no restriction—

To this it is said (in reply)—On account of the connection, thus, elsewhere also. Just as there is the inclusion of the qualities on account of the oneness of the entity particularised by qualities like being constituted or mind etc., on account of the Vidyā being one, because of the non-difference of form, as the object of worship is one; in the same way elsewhere, because Satya Brahman is one, connected with the eye, the Sun, there is the inclusion of both in both places ॥ 20 ॥

[433] This (prima-facie view) being reached, we say (in reply)—

Not indeed, on account of the distinct form ॥ 21 ॥

Not indeed, it is that there is the inclusion on account of the oneness of of Vidyā. Whence? Viśeṣāt—on account of the distinct form of the object of worship. Though Brahman is one, in one place it is the object of worship as abiding in the orb of the Sun; elsewhere (it is the) object of worship as having the eye as its resort—and so, there is the difference of Vidyā, owing to the difference of form, due to the difference connected with the place. Not in this way, is the place of the object of worship in the Śaṇḍilyavidyā, different on account of the object of worship having the heart as the abode in both cases. So, both (the names) are quite in order. ॥ 21 ॥

The aggregate, pervasion of the heaven, and for this very reason ॥ 23 ॥

(Adhikaraṇa 8, Sūtra 23)

[434] In the Taittirīyaka, and in the Khila sections admitted by the Rāṇāyanīyas—in (the passage)

‘Brahman preeminent powers are brought together; Brahman in the beginning spread out the oldest heaven; and Brahman was born, first among the creatures,—so, who deserves (dares) to compete with Brahman?’ (Tāi. Brā. 2.4.6; Atharva Sam. 19.22.21)

has been mentioned the group of qualities etc.—collection of preeminent powers, and the pervading of the heaven etc.,—in the case of Brahman The (prima-facie view) being reached,—those qualities are to be included in all Vidyās that are studied, not connected with any particular worship—this is stated (in reply)—The aggregate, pervasion of the heaven etc. Sambhrtidyuvyāpt is a Samāhāra dvandva (compound) and hence indicates only one thing. The aggregate etc., although studied without any specific connection, for this very reason, have got to be arranged in accordance with the difference of the place, and are not to be included everywhere,

How can there be the demarcation with respect to a particular place, in the case of things that are studied as unconnected?—On account of the inherent power—so we say The pervasion of the heaven, for the matter of that, is not possible to be included in the case of Vidyās that have for their province, small places like the heart The aggregate (of the qualities) etc, also existing along with them, and belonging to a similar region—so they are not fit to be included in the Vidyās that have for their province small places In the case of the Sāṇḍilyavidyā, Daharavidyā etc, that have for their province small places, (the attributes mentioned) in (the passages) etc There arises the doubt—Is the Vidyā here different or not ? Because there is the sameness of the name, viz Purusavidyā—there is the identity of form on account of the similarity of the imagining of the parts of the sacrifice as the limbs of the Purusa, there is no mention of the fruit in the Taittirīyaka, —but there being the connection with the fruit mentioned in the Chāndogya itself, in (the passage)

‘ He said—He lives for sixteen and one hundred years ’ as the Purusavidyā-fruit, even the connection with the fruit being non-different, there is the oneness of Vidyā—This (prima facie view) being reached, this is said (in reply)—

(Cha 3 16 7)

[436] Though both the Vidyās mentioned in the two places have the nature of the Purusavidyā, the difference in the Vidyās does exist : Whence ?
Itaresāmanāmnānāt—on account of the non-mention elsewhere of the qualities mentioned in one recension : To explain the same—

‘ What is the evening morning and the mudday—those (are) the Savanas ’

(Na. 80)

etc mentioned in the Taittirīyaka are not mentioned in the Chāndogya being Savanas—The life of a man divided into three parts, is mentioned in the Chāndogya as the Savana In the Taittirīyaka there is no imagining of the desire to eat etc, as being Diksā (sacrificial consecration), etc, mentioned in the Chāndogya (3 17 1) and the wife of the sacrificer, etc, are imagined otherwise Therefore, the form is different in both cases Similarly, the connection with the fruit is also different, for, in the previous chapter in the Taittirīyaka, having mentioned the Brahavidyā in and having mentioned, the fruit of that (Brahnavidyā)

‘He secures the greatness of Brahman’

(Nā. 79)

— has been described the Purusavidyā in

(Nā. 80)

etc.,— thus it is understood that the superimposition of the nature of the sacrifice refers to the same knower of Brahman. Therefore, the acquisition of Brahman itself is the fruit here, as it is connected with the Brahnavidyā. And in conformity with the maxim — what is proximate to something having the fruit, that (mentioned) without the fruit is its part — the Purusavidyā mentioned in the Taittirīyaka is understood to be a part of the Brahnavidyā. In the Chāndogya, however, Purusavidyā is mentioned with the securing of a (long) life as the fruit. Therefore, on account of the difference in the form and the association with the fruit, there is the difference of Vidyā, and so, the attributes mentioned in one place are not to be included elsewhere. ॥ 24 ॥

[438] This (prima facie-view) being reached, we say (in reply)—Vedhādyarthabhedāt—on account of the difference in the purpose of the piercing etc.

‘ Having pierced through Sukra, having pierced through the heart; I shall speak the right, I shall speak the truth ’ (Tai. 1.1)

This is what is intended to be said—Just as by virtue of the Mantras—Having pierced through the heart—etc., it is understood that (the Mantras),—Having pierced through Sukra etc., are subsidiary to the Abhicāra (rite); in the same way, it is understood that the Mantras—

etc Thus in some places is mentioned the abandoning of merit and demerit, in some places the acquisition of them by those agreeable and disagreeable and in some places both Both these although mentioned in one Vidyā (section) have got to be taken as part of all the Vidyās because even a person well-versed in all the Brahma-vidyās has got necessarily to abandon merit and sin when he has secured Brahman and because a thing that is given is capable of being abandoned And when contemplation of that is being enjoined that deserves to be the part of all the Vidyās

There this is being considered — Are the consideration of the abandonment, consideration of the accepting, consideration of both — to be treated as alternatives or are they to be taken collectively ? — What (is) proper ?
They should be treated as alternatives Whence ? On the strength of their separate mention, for, if there is the collective state, there would be the association always of both And that is established in the Kausītaki-passage itself, so, the mention elsewhere would be but useless Therefore in the case of the mention in various places the alternative alone is the objective Nor could this be avoided by (banking on) the difference of the students The mention in various places the repeated mention without any change — these can be ignored by referring to the students being different Here, however, the abandonment alone is (mentioned) in the two recensions and acceptance alone in one recension Nor is this possible to be established by the difference of the Vidyās, because it has been stated that this continued association is subsidiary to all —

[440] Here this is said (in reply) — Hānau tūpāyanaśabdaścaśarvāt—

The word Tu turns away the (above) view The expression Hānau is merely indicative By the mention of the abandonment only and the mention of the acceptance only, their mutual grouping is bound to be there

Whence ? Upāyanaśabdaśeṣatvāt—because the word Upāyana is subsidiary (supplementary) to the abandonment-passage, for, it is proper that the Upāyana-passage should be a supplement to the abandonment-passage, because the acceptance-passage denotes a place for entrance of the merit and the demerit abandoned by the wise one. Illustrations are set forth, referring to a passage mentioned in one place as being a supplement to the one mentioned in another place,—Kuśācchandastutyupagānavat. The student of the Kausītaki read Kuśas as belonging to the trees. But the passage (read by) the followers of Śātyāyana particularising the Kuśas mentioned in a general way as associated with trees, as of the Udumbara tree, attains to the status of being a supplement to that passage. Similarly, in (the passage) —By the metres of the gods and Asuras, etc., there being the undesirable contingency of the metres of gods and Asuras being non-different, the statement —the metres of the gods first—propounding the particular order, attains to the status of a supplement to that passage. Similarly, when it is stated in a general way—He helps the stotra for the Ṣoḍaśin (sacrifice) by gold —the passage referring to some particular feature as in

‘He helps the stotra for the Ṣoḍaśin (sacrifice) to the Sun spread all around’

(Tai. Sam. 6.6.11)

attains to the status of a supplement to that passage; similarly, when the general statement—The priests sing — is there in the field, the passage

‘The Adhvaryu priest should not sing on’

(Tai. Sam. 6.3.1)

pointing out to Adhvaryu as not being referred to there, attains to the status of being a supplement to that passage. Thus, in the case of a passage, competent to arrange in a particular manner, a thing known in a general way, an alternative could be resorted to in the case of both the things, by those who do not admit (the Viśaṣavākya) as being a supplement to that. And that (Vikalpa) is not proper, if (some other) course is available. It has been stated in the first part (Pūrvamimāṃsā)

‘But there would even be a supplement to the Vākya (sentence) as an alternative would be unjustifiable; and it would be a part of the injunctions.’

(Jai. Sū. 108-4)

Therefore, in this way, the two passages dealing with abandonment and acceptance only forming one passage, only abandonment and only acceptance not being there, there the alternative is ruled out. The mention of both by the Kauṣītakins is not contradictory, on account of the pupils being different, owing to the same thing being repeated without any difference. ॥ 26 ॥

Here ends the Hānyadhikaraṇa (11)

On the departure, on account of the absence of some-

(Adhikaraṇa 12, Sūtras 27-31)

[441] It has been stated that the abandonment and acceptance of the good deeds and the evil deeds is to be considered in the case of all Vidyās. Now when there is a doubt—Is that abandonment at the time of the disconnection from the body, on the way after one has departed from the body, or only at the time of the disconnection from the body?—It is proper (to decide that abandonment is) at both (times), on account of the mention in the Śruti, in both ways. Thus indeed do the Kauṣītakins beginning with,

‘He, having reached this Deṣayāna path, goes to the world of read —

‘He comes to the Virajā river; he crosses it by the mind;
then he shakes off the good deeds and the evil deeds’ (Kau. 1.4)

—in this passage, the abandonment of good and evil deeds is apprehended as taking place on the way. The Tāṇḍins on the other hand (say) —

‘Having shaken off sin, like a horse the mane-hair, getting out, like the Moon from the mouth of Rāhu, shaking off the body not cleansed, with the Ātman cleansed, I pass on to the Brahmaloка’
(Chā. 8.13.1)

Here again is apprehended that the abandonment takes place only at the time of the disconnection from the body. In the Śātyāyanaka also, in (the passage)

‘His sons inherit his property; (his) friends, the good deeds; the enemies, the evil deeds’

the transfer of the good deeds and evil deeds simultaneously with the transfer of the heritage to the sons, which is mentioned, is apprehended at the time of the disconnection from the body. Therefore, one portion of the good deeds and the evil deeds is abandoned at the time of the disconnection from the body; and the remainder, on the way—This (prima facie view) being reached, it is stated (in reply)—Sāmparāye—Sāmparāye, at the time of getting out from the body itself—The good deeds and the evil deeds of the wise one are abandoned, without any remainder. Whence ? Tartavyābhāvāt—because in the case of the wise one, after the separation from the body, there is the absence of enjoyments which are to be gone through by the good deeds and the evil deeds; for, happiness and misery that are to be experienced due to the good deeds and the evil deeds do not exist over and above the acquisition of Brahman, which is the fruit of the Vidyā. To the same effect others read about the absence of the experience of happiness and misery, over and above the acquisition of Brahman, after the separation from the body in—

‘अशरीरं वायुं सन्तं न भियामिषे स्पृशतः’ (छा. ८.१.२.१)

‘एष संप्रसादोऽयमाच्छरीरात्समुत्थाय परं ज्योतिरुपसंगम्य स्वेन रूपेणाभि-

Thus, owing to the nature of things, when the time for the dhen—there being the non-contradiction between the Sruti and the things as they are—Chandatah—at will—the words should be construed (thus)—The remainder — it is only when there is the destruction of Karman in both ways, there is the Gaterarthavattvam — that is to say, the Śruti describing the movement by the Devayāna path is significant; otherwise, indeed, contradiction. —If there were to be the destruction of all Karman at the time of the separation from the body itself, there would be the destruction even of the subtle body. And in that case the movement of the pure Ātman (without Upādhis) does not stand to reason. Therefore, in the case of the wise one, the destruction of Karman without any remainder at the time of the departure (from the body), is not appropriate. ॥ 29 ॥

Here (is) the answer—

Appropriate, on account of the perception of things characterised by that (connection with the body), as in the world. ॥ 30 ॥

The destruction of the entire Karman is quite proper at the time of the departure. Whence? Talakṣaṇārthopalabdheh —On account of the perception of things characterised by the connection with the body in the case of one whose own form is manifest, although with the Karman destroyed—

‘Having gone unto the highest Light, he is manifested in his own form’ (Chā. 8.3.4)

‘He moves about there, eating, sporting, enjoying’ (Chā. 8.12.3)

‘He becomes self-ruler; his is movement at will in all the worlds’ (Chā. 7.25.2)

‘He becomes of one form, becomes three-fold’ (Chā. 7.26.2)

—in these passages etc., the matter, namely, the connection with the body is indeed perceived. Therefore, the movement by the Devayāna is feasible in the case of one endowed with a subtle body, even when (all) his Karman is destroyed.

If (it be argued)—How can even the subtle body survive on the destruction of the producing Karman?—We say (in reply)—On account of the greatness of the Vidyā; for, the Vidyā although of its own accord not producing the subtle body, brings upon the scene the subtle body, in order to enable him to go by the Devayāna path, for bestowing the acquisition of Brahman, which is its fruit, even though there is the destruction without any remainder of the gross body which is the means of enjoyment of the mundane happiness and misery, and of all the Karmans.

Lokavat—as in the world—Just as in the world, in the case of the tank etc., dug up for the purpose of securing a rich harvest of corn etc.,—although the desire etc., of the same, the causes of that (digging up), are extinct, people keeping the same, the tank etc., in tact get out of that, water for drinking etc.,—like that. ॥ 30 ॥

[443] Now as to what has been said—It may be in the case of the wise ones that have directly realised the highest Reality, on account of the destruction of Karman without any remainder, at the time of the falling of the body, only the subtle body continues after the fall of the body, for the sake of movement, (but) the experience of happiness and misery exists not—that is not proper. In the case of Vasiṣṭha and Apāntaratamas, etc., who have directly realised the highest Reality, there is seen the connection with another body, after the fall of the (first) body and the experience of happiness and misery due to the birth and death of a son etc.—

Therefore, (the Sūtrakāra) recites (the answer)—

As long as the qualification, so long the stay of the qualified. ॥ 31 ॥

Not by us has been mentioned the destruction of the good deeds and the evil deeds at the time of the fall of the body, in the case of all wise men; but only in the case of those knowers, has been stated the abandonment of the good deeds and the evil deeds at the time of the fall of the body, for whom—the wise men—is meant the course, Arcis etc., after the fall of the body. In the case of Vasistha and others, however, who were (specially) qualified, there is no going by the course, Arcis etc., after the fall of the body, on account of the jurisdiction of the Karman begun, not having come to an end. In the case of them who have secured a special qualification owing to some special Karman, that functioning Karman is not destroyed, till the qualification is over; for, the destruction of Karman that has started functioning (comes about) only by experiencing (the fruits of) it. Thus, that producing Karman of those qualified remains as long as the qualification exists. Therefore, in their case there is no taking to movement by the Arcirādi (path) after the fall of the body. ॥ 31 ॥

— This (prima facie view) being reached, it is stated (in reply) — Aniyamah — there is no rule that (the Brahmaprāpti is) for those well-versed in them alone, because all those who are well-versed in all the Upāsanas, have to go by that (path); for, only when all go by that, Śabdānumānābhyām — with the Śruti and the Smṛti, — Aviredhaḥ — non-contradiction. Otherwise, there would be definitely a contradiction — this (is) the sense —

The Śruti for the matter of that, in connection with the Pañcāgnividya in the Chāndogya and the Vājasaneyaka speaks of the movement by the Arcirādi path of all those devoted to the Upāsana of Brahman — In the Vājasaneyaka, is taught the going by the Arcirādi path, referring to those that are devoted to the Pañcāgnividya, and who are devoted to Brahman, imbued with faith, in conformity with (respectively) — who know in this way — (and) — and who these in the forest etc., — on account of the word Satya being well-known in the sense of Brahman, in

‘Satya, Knowledge, Infinite Brahman’ (Tai. 2·1)

—There (arises) a doubt—Are these (attributes) not being gross etc., that are mentioned as associated with Brahman pointed out by the word Aksara, which have their nature opposed to worldly existence, to be incorporated in all the Brahmavidyās, or, only where they are mentioned by the Sruti ? What proper ?
Where they are mentioned, only there Whence ? Because the attributes that constitute the form of another Vidyā cannot be authoritative for the form of another Vidyā, and because these attributes of negative nature cannot be the means for the apprehension of the nature of the attributes, like bliss etc., For, in the case of Brahman whose nature is known by the attributes, bliss etc., the attributes belonging to the worldly existence, like being gross etc., are repudiated, on account of the impossibility of repudiation without any base—of the imperishable Brahman, the object of worship, being the same in all the worships, and on account of not being gross etc., being there, on the apprehension of its nature. This is what is intended to be said —

The apprehension of a thing is indeed its apprehension as having some peculiar form. Not again, can mere bliss etc., establish the peculiar form of Brahman, on account of bliss etc., existing even in the inmost Ātman. For, bliss etc., the opposite of everything fit to be abandoned, are the peculiar nature of Brahman. In the case of the inmost Self, however, although he is bereft of what is fit to be abandoned, there is the capability of his association with what is fit to be abandoned. And, being the opposite of what is fit to be abandoned means a form opposite to grossness etc., which are the attributes of the worldly existence constituted of the sentient and the non-sentient. Therefore, while apprehending Brahman characterised by a peculiar form, Brahman is to be apprehended as having the form of knowledge, bliss etc., characterised by not being gross etc., and so (the attributes) not being gross etc., like bliss etc., are included in the apprehension of Brahman; in the same way Brahman is to be incorporated in all Brahma-vidyās. Aupasada-vat—Like the Aupasada — (The Sūtrakāra) gives the illustration to show that the attributes follow the Principal (substratum). Just as the Mantra

‘Let Agni go to the sacrifice’

(Tā. Brā. 21-10-11)

etc., read in the Sāmaveda, being subordinate to the Upasada (rite) such as Jāmadagnya, Caturātra, Puroḍāśa etc., is employed by the student of the Yajurveda, who recites it in the mind (silently), because it goes along with the Principal. That has been said in the first Kāṇḍa (Pūrvamīmāṃsā)

‘In the contradiction of the subsidiary and the Principal, there is the association of the Veda with the Principal, as it is for the Principal.’

inmost Atman of all; in the latter case, as bereft of hunger, thirst etc. Therefore, in the former case, the vivifying agent is called the inmost Self apart from body, sense-organ, intellect, mind, Prāṇa etc., In the latter case, however, (it is) the Paramātmā, apart from that, bereft of hunger and thirst etc., Therefore, the form is different. In the case of the inmost Ātman possessing the host of beings, being the inmost of all is quite in order on account of his being the inmost Ātman of that whole host of beings. Although being the inmost of all in the case of the inmost Ātman is relative owing to its dependence solely upon the host of beings, still that alone is to be understood (here). Otherwise, if through the greed for understanding the chief inmost Ātman, it is admitted that the Paramātmā is meant (here), the difference in the answers cannot be accounted for. For, the answer in the former case refers to the inmost Ātman, because being the vivifier or being the force to make things go down etc., is impossible in the case of the Paramātmā. And the latter refers to the Paramātmā, on account of his being beyond hunger etc.

So, this doubt arises — Antarā bhūtagrāmavatsvātmanonythā bhedānu-papattiriti cet.. Antarā—being inside all; the first answer Bhūtagrāmavatsvātmanah—possessed of the host of beings, himself inside that, the inmost Ātman is spoken of as being inside all—this (is) the sense. Otherwise,

‘Who lives by Prāṇa’

(Br. 3-4-1)

‘Who is beyond hunger, thirst etc.,’

—this difference in the answers cannot be accounted for—if such (is the objection) — Here the answer—No. No difference in the Vidyās,—this (is) the sense. Because in both the cases the question and the answer refer to the Highest. To explain the same —

‘What is the direct supersensuous Brahman,—what Ātman inside of all’ (Br. 3-4-1.)

—this question, for the matter of that, refers to the Paramātmān alone. Although the word Brahman is peculiar to the Paramātmān, its metaphorical use is sometimes seen in the case of the inmost Self—and therefore, the qualifying (particularising) expression,—Yatsākṣāṭbrahma is put in for the apprehension of the Paramātmān by excluding that (Pratyagātman). Being supersensuous also, is appropriate in the case of the Paramātmān alone as he is apprehended as endless (infinite),—being connected with all times and all places as in

Being inside all is possible in the case of the Paramātmān alone, who is the inner Controller of all (in accordance with the passage) beginning with

‘Who, abiding in Pṛthivī is within Pṛthivī’

(Śa. Brā. 14-6-7-7)

and ending with,

‘Who, abiding in the Ātman, within the Ātman’

(Śa. Brā. 14-6-7-30)

and the answer also in the same way refers to the Paramātmān as in

‘Who lives by Prāṇa.’ (Br. 3-4-1)

Being the unconditional vivifying agent belongs to the Paramātmān alone, because the inmost Ātman in deep sleep does not possess the nature of an agent in respect of Prāṇana (breathing forth).

Asked again by Uśasta not knowing this, and thinking that being the agent for the Prāṇana (operation) alone was mentioned, being dissatisfied with the answer, thinking that it (the characteristic) is common to the inmost Ātman also, (Yājñavalkya) described to him the Paramātmān as —that the Paramātmā alone is the cause of the breathing forth of all creatures. Therefore, the first (two)—question and answer—refer to the Paramātmā. In the same way the latter two also, because, being beyond hunger etc., is peculiar to the Paramātmā. In both cases the conclusion is of the same form as

‘Anything else than this (is) distressing.’ (Br. 3.4.2; 3.5.1)

The repetition of the question and the answer, however, is for the sake of propounding that the Highest Brahman which is the cause of the breathing forth of the entire living creation, is beyond hunger etc. There (the Sūtrakāra) cites an illustration, Upadeśavat—Just as in the Sadvidyā (Vidyā dealing with Sat), the teaching about the Sat being started in

are seen for the propounding of that peculiar greatness of the Sat Brahman—like that. Therefore, because in the case of the same Brahman which is the inmost of all (beings) there is the exposition of its being the cause of the breathing forth of the entire living creation and being beyond hunger etc., and so, on account of the oneness of form, there is the oneness of Vidyā. ॥ 35 ॥

[488] It may be argued—Although both the question and the answer refer to the Highest Brahman, still the difference in the Vidyās is unavoidable. In one place, (Brahman) is the object of worship owing to its being the cause of the breathing forth of the entire living creation; elsewhere, owing to its being beyond hunger,—thus there is the difference of form on account of the difference in the attributes of the object of worship, and on account of the difference in the questioners; for, Uṣasta (is) the first questioner and Kahola the next. —

There says (the Sūtrakāra) —

Interchange, because they characterise, as in other cases.

॥ 36 ॥

There is no difference of Vidyās, here, because the question and the answer refer to a matter having the same form; and on account of one injunctive expression, there is the apprehension of there being one sentence. The two questions, for the matter of that, refer to the Brahman characterised by being the inmost Self of all. And in the second question, the use of Eva (indeed) in —

‘ What indeed, the direct supersensuous Brahman, what Ātman inside all ’ concludes that the question of Kahola refers to Brahman characterised by the attributes, asked about by Uṣasta previously. And the answer in both the places —

(Br. 3.5.1)

‘एष त आत्मा सर्वान्तरः’

(बृ. ३।४।१, ३।५।१)

इति सर्वान्तरात्मत्वविशिष्टब्रह्मविषयमेकरूपमेव । विधिप्रत्ययश्चोत्तरत्रैव दृश्यते

तनूपास्यगुणः सर्वान्तरात्मत्वमेव चेत्, प्राणनहेतुत्वस्याशनायाद्यतीतत्वस्य च प्रद्वौ- र्घ्यतिहत्यानुसंधानं किमर्थम् ?

‘Thus, your Ātman, inside all’

(Br. 3-4-1 ; 3-5-1)

is definitely of the same form, referring as it does to the Brahman particularised by being the inmost Ātman of all. And the injunctive termination is seen in the latter only as in

‘Therefore, a Brāhmana, getting disgusted with learning, should stay on, as a child.’

(Br. 3-5-1)

Thus, when it has been ascertained that in both (places) there is the reference to the same Brahman, particularised by being the inmost Ātman of all, the object of worship, that Brahman is particularised by being the inmost Ātman of all, the interchange of notions has to be allowed in the case of Uṣasta and Kahola,—What notion referring to Brahman, the inmost Self of all, being the cause of the breathing forth of all the living creatures, this Uṣasta had,—that has to be taken as entertained by the questioner, Kahola also. And what notion Kahola had, referring to that same Brahman being beyond hunger etc.,—that has got to be entertained by Uṣasta also. When the interchange has been effected thus, the distinct nature of Jīva from Brahman, the inmost of all, would be understood by both. Thus, indeed, the answers of Yājñavalkya particularise the inmost Ātman of all, by propounding his being the cause of the breathing forth of all creatures and his being beyond hunger etc., in order to make one understand his being distinct from the Pratyagātman (Jīva). Therefore, in the case of Brahman, being the inmost Ātman of all is itself the attribute to be meditated upon. Being the cause of the breathing forth etc., are but the justifying causes of that, and not the objects of worship.

I say (says the objector) — If the attribute of the object of worship is, being the inmost Ātman of all alone, for what purpose is the comprehension by mutual exchange, in the case of the (two) questioners, of being the cause of the breathing forth, and being beyond hunger etc. ? —

To that it is stated (in reply) — When Brahman, the inmost Ātman of all, is definitely understood by Uṣasta to be distinct from Jīva, on account of its being the cause of the breathing forth of all living creatures, a question was put again by Kahola thinking that the inmost Ātman of all should be understood as being distinct on account of some particular natural attribute of the Jīva, as it is not possible for Jīva to be the Ātman of all. Yājñavalkya also, understanding his intention, spoke of being the opposite of hunger etc., as impossible in the inmost Ātman (Jīva). Therefore, for the purpose of establishing the apprehension about the object of worship being distinct, there has to be effected mutual interchange of notions by the two. — Itaravat — as elsewhere, in the (section describing the) Sadvidyā, the same Sat Brahman is made distinct again and again by questions and answers, and not the object of worship particularised by other attributes different from the attribute put forward before, is propounded — like that: ॥ 36 ॥

[449] There also, when there is the difference in the question and the answer, how can identity be understood ? — If this (is the objection) — There says (the Sūtrakāra) —

That same (Parā devatā) indeed, (the attributes) Satya etc. ॥ 37 ॥

For, that same highest Deity alone, that is the original cause, denoted by the word Sat introduced in

‘That this Deity reflected’

(Chā. 6-3-2)

‘The Tejas in the highest Deity’

(Chā. 6-8-6)

उत्तरेण च सूत्रेण

‘As all this has this as the Ātman, that (is) Satya, he, the Ātman’ (Chā. 6-8-7)

Satya and others mentioned in the first passage, are propounded in all the alternatives and are grouped together.

But some describe the two Sūtras—Vyatīhāro viśiṃṣanti hītaravat, Saiva hi Satyādayaḥ—as two topics. There, they say that by the first Sūtra—

‘You, verily—I am, (O) divine Derv, I, verily,—You are, (O) divine Deity’ (Jābā.)

‘That what I, that he; what he, that I’ (At. Ā. 2-2-4-6)

—In these passages, is propounded the continued interchange of the Jīva and the Paramātmān. But this does not deserve to be treated with respect as there is nothing unknown to be propounded here in this passage dealing as it does with the nature of being the Ātman of all, known (already) from ‘All that, indeed, this Brahman’ (Chā. 3-14-1)

‘All this has this as the Ātman—That thou art’ (Chā. 6-8-7)

And that (the Sūtrakāra) would state (in the Sūtra)

‘They approach, as the Ātman, and grasp it.’

(Bṛa Sū. 1V-1-3)

Not, indeed, can the association of the nature of Jīva in the Highest Brahman and the association of the nature of the Highest Brahman in the Jīva as distinct from the association with being the Ātman of all, be possibly real.

What has been said—And by the next Sūtra, oneness of the worship of Satya propounded in or not ? What (is) proper ? Difference. Whence ? On account of the difference of form. In the Chāndogya, Ākāśa is apprehended as the object of worship, particularised by the eight attributes, being with sins destroyed etc.,—in the Vājasaneyaka, however, is apprehended the object of worship, the one sleeping in the Ākāśa, particularised by the attributes, being the controller etc.,

There is no elision of these, on account of the respectful teaching (thereof) as being the qualities of Brahman the object of worship, in the Upāsanas meant for salvation as mentioned in these two Sruti (passages) and other Sruti (passages),

‘What is within there, that should be searched for’
(Chā. 8 1 1)

‘This Ātman, having the sins destroyed ageless, deathless, bereft of grief, bereft of hunger, bereft of thirst, with desires fulfilled, with thoughts fulfilled’ (Chā. 8 1 5)

‘Controller of all, ruler of all, this Lord of all, this supreme master of beings, this protector of beings, this bridge, the support of these worlds, in order they may not break’ (Br 4 4 22) etc., — in the case of these qualities having the desires fulfilled etc., that are not apprehended by other means of proof as being the qualities of Brahman, their inclusion has got to be effected. In the Chāndogya for the matter of that, having enjoined the meditation (Vedana) of Brahman particularised by qualities, having desires fulfilled etc., in ‘Then who, having known the Ātman, and having these desires fulfilled, go out — of them, there is movement at will, in all the worlds’ (Chā 8 1 6)

— and the censure of non-meditation which is being made in ‘Then who, having not known the Ātman here, and not having these desires fulfilled, go out — of them there is no movement at will in all the worlds’ (Chā 8 1 6) point out to the respect for meditation (of Brahman) particularised by the qualities. Similarly, in the Vājasaneyaka on account of the repeated instruction about the overlordship, in ‘सर्वस्य पशूः सर्वस्येक्षानः । ... एष सर्वेश्वर एष भूताधिपतिरस्य भूतपालः’

Not again is the Sāstra that is more affectionate than thousands of mothers and fathers, like a misleading fellow, having respectfully mentioned the qualities that are unreal and that are fit to be discarded, that are not known from other means of proof, stupid enough to be competent to make those desirous of salvation who are already revolving about by the whirling of the wheel of worldly existence, revolve again and again ! (The Śruti) again in

‘Not here is anything whatsoever many’ (Br. 4.4.19)

‘Only in one form, this should be realised’ (Br. 4.4.20)

— having enjoined the meditation in only one way on account of everything having that (Brahman) as the Ātman, being the product of Brahman, repudiates the apprehension of manifoldness arrived at before, on account of its not having Brahman as its Ātman—this matter has already been expounded. And having referred to the form of worldly existence known from other means of proof, by the word Iti, here in

‘He, this one; Ātman, not thus, not thus’ (Br. 4.4.22)

it is propounded that Brahman which is the Ātman of all, is different from the worldly existence, because Brahman is not of such a nature. And that same (the Śruti) sets forth later in ‘Not fit to be grasped, not indeed is he grasped ; not fit to be shattered, not indeed is he shattered ; not clinging, not indeed does he cling on ; not pained, he is not pained, does not come to harm’

—(Ātman) cannot be grasped by other means of proof, because he is not homogeneous with what is to be grasped by other means of proof. He is not shattered, because he is not homogeneous with what is fit to be shattered. In this way the thing is to be understood in the succeeding (passages). In the Chāndogya also in (the passage) —

‘Not by the old age of him, this one becomes old; nor by his murder, (this one) is killed; this is the Satya (real) Brahma-city; here (all) desires are placed together’

(Chā 8.1.5)

—having referred to Brahman ■ quite distinct from everything, the attributes having the desires fulfilled etc , are mentioned in respect of that. ॥ 39 ॥

[452] I say (says the objector) — Even thus in

‘Then, those who having realised the Ātman here, and these desires fulfilled, go out — of them there is movement at will in all the worlds; if he is desirous of the world of Pitr’s’

(Chā. 8.1.6)

etc., the contemplation on one particularised by the qualities, having desires fulfilled etc. is mentioned as being connected with the fruit associated with worldly existence , — for one desirous of release, wishing to reach Brahman, Brahman with attributes is not the object of worship And the fruit of the highest Vidyā is just what (is given) in ‘Having gone unto the highest Light, he ■ manifested in his own form’

(Chā 8.3.4)

Therefore, having desires fulfilled etc , are not to be included, in the case of one desirous of reaching Brahman — Here (the Sūtrakāra) recites the answer—

After reaching (Brahman), for this very reason, on account of mention about that. ॥ 40 ॥

Upasthitiḥ—reaching, reaching Brahman; In respect of the inmost Ātman that has reached, that has reached Brahman,—freed from all bondage, manifested in his own form. Atah eva—for this very reason, viz. reaching itself (merging in) Brahman, (free) movement at will, in all the worlds is mentioned in ‘Having gone unto the highest Light, he is manifested in his own form,—he, the best Purusa; he moves all round there, eating, sporting, enjoying, in the company of women, or in cars, or with the kinsmen;—not remembering his birth (or) this body’

(Chā. 8.12.3)

‘He becomes self-ruler; in all the worlds there is movement at will, for him’

(Chā. 7.25.2)

—All this would be set forth in a very convincing manner in the fourth (Adhyāya). Therefore, in the case of one desirous of salvation, qualities, having the desires fulfilled etc., have to be included, owing to free movement in all the worlds being the fruit fit to be enjoyed by the liberated. ॥ 40 ॥

Here ends the Kāmādyadhikarana (16)

Non-rule about meditation on them, on account of that being seen; for separate, non-obstruction indeed the fruit. ॥ 41 ॥

‘One should worship the imperishable Udgītha as Om’

(Chā. 1.1.1)

etc., because they have their performance established through the Udgītha, etc., being the part of the rite, like being made of leaves, through the Juhu (ladle) etc., and there being in ‘Whatever he does by Vidyā, by faith, by Upāṣad, he makes that itself more powerful’

(Chā. 1.1.10)

something connected with the worship of Udgītha etc., referred to in the present tense, (and) there being no possibility of imagining a separate fruit for the same, like the hearing of non-sinful verses connected with the ladle being made of leaves etc.,—(these Upāsanās) are as a rule to be included in the sacrifices—

This (prima facie view) being reached, we say—Tannirdhāranā-niyamah. Nirdhāranam—resolutely stabilising the mind, meditation—this (is) the sense. Tannirdhāranāniyamah—no rule regarding the worship, Udgītha etc. in the Karmans.

Whence ? Taddr̥ṣṭeh—for, no rule about the performance of Upāsanās is found, on account of the mention of the performance by even an unlearned person, in

‘Therefore, both of them perform; he who again knows this thus and he who knows not’

(Chā. 1.1.10)

Not again (should one say that) no rule about the performance of the worship is appropriate if Upāsanā be a part (of the Karman). Thus, when the worship is ascertained to be not a part, there being the expectancy for the fruit of the worship-rite, it is known that the fruit, being more powerful, is, indeed, separate from the fruit of the Karman, after the maxim of the Rātrisatra.

What is this, being more powerful ? It is nothing but non-obstruction of the fruit of the Karman itself; for, the fruit of the Karman is obstructed by the fruit of another powerful Karman. The absence of that during that period of time (is) non-obstruction. And that non-obstruction indeed, is the fruit which is absolutely different from the fruit of the Karman, pointing to heaven etc. This has been stated (by the Sūtra portion)—pṛthagghya-pratibandhaḥ phalam.

qualities, bliss etc., particularised by being not gross, etc.—Here the word Linga has the meaning of a token. The meaning is that there is many an indicatory passage; and that is more powerful than the context. It also has been stated (by Jaimini) in the First Part.

‘In the group of Śruti, indicatory mark, sentence, context, place, name,—each succeeding one is weaker owing to the distance from the meaning’

(Jai. Sū. 3.3.14)

As to what has been said, that the expression

‘Shimng like the lotus-bud’

(Nā. 13.2)

etc., corroborates this (Nārāyaṇa-section) being subsidiary to the Daharavidyā —(we reply)—That (is) not (so), because when by a more powerful Pramāṇa (means of proof) it is ascertained about the particular object of worship in all the Vidyās, that passage (authority) is appropriate as pointing out to the same Nārāyaṇa being the object of worship even in the Daharavidyā. Nor again should it be doubted that here is a connection with (the root) Upās mentioned in the previous section by the use of the accusative in ‘Sahasraśīrṣam’

(Nā. 13.1)

because the object of worship is denoted as the object by the Kṛt termination associated with the root Upās in the passage

‘What is within that, that is to be worshipped’

(Nā. 12.3)

the accusative case is inappropriate as referring to the object of worship by that. And, on account of the reference in the nominative case in ‘All this universe, verily, (is) Puruṣa’

—There (arises) a doubt—Are these mind-piled etc., metaphorically of the nature of Vidyā, having the form of action owing to the entrance into the sacrifice constituted of action,—or, of the nature of Vidyā alone, entering into the sacrifice constituted of Vidyā?—this being the doubt, (the Sūtrakāra) speaks first of their having the nature of action by (the Sūtra)—Pūrvavikalpaḥ etc.—Because these (fires) mind-piled etc., metaphorically understood as piled fires which have the expectancy of entering into a sacrifice, have no injunction in a sacrifice in their own place; as previously in (accordance with the passage)

'Non-existent, verily, was this in the beginning'

(Sa. Brā. 10-5-3-1)

etc., the Agni piled up with bricks is the matter in hand, and that being always invariably associated with sacrifice abounding in sacrificial action, is proximate to the sacrifice, the mind-piled etc., understood in the various contexts being alternated with the brick-piled-fire, would have the form of action alone. Having the form of action even in the case of those constituted of Vidyā, by entrance into a sacrifice involving action is appropriate, like the mental cup. Just as in the Avivākya in the Dvādaśāha (sacrifice), on the tenth day, the mental cup although of the nature of Vidyā, has the nature of action, by being a part of the sacrifice full of action, on account of the taking up, attaining to, praise, glorification, bringing and eating — that are to be effected by the mind; so, (the same case) here also. ॥ 44 ॥

And on account of the extended application. ॥ 45 ॥

For this reason also, it is understood that the mind-piled etc., are alternated with the brick-piled fire and have the nature of action. The strength of the previous brick-piled fire is seen to be extended to the mind-piled etc., in

'Of those, each one of them is that much, so much as the previous one'

(Sa. Brā. 10-5-3-11)

Thus, on account of the similarity of action, the alternative exists. And therefore, like the brick-piled (fire), the mind-piled etc., that are subsidiary to that sacrifice, by contributing to its completion are definitely constituted of action by the entrance into the sacrifice full of action. ॥ 45 ॥

(श. मा. १०।५।३।३)

But Vidyā itself, on account of the ascertainment, and on account of the mention in the Śruti. ॥ 46 ॥

The word Tu turns away the (above) view. As to what has been stated that the mind-piled etc., are definitely constituted of action, by the entrance into the sacrifice full of action — It is not so; these have the nature of Vidyā alone, that is to say, they are associated with the sacrifice of the form of Vidyā. Whence? Nirdhāraṇāddarśanācca—Nirdhāraṇam, ascertainment, for the matter of that in —

‘Thas, verily, are Vidyā-piled alone. By Vidyā, indeed, verily, these become piled up for him who knows thus.’

(Śa. Brā. 10-5-3-12)

On account of the impossibility of the piling up etc., of operations of speech, mind, eye etc., as in the case of bricks etc., these are definitely Vidyā-piled, although their having the form of Vidyā owing to their metaphorical nature of fire imagined by the mind, is established; the emphatic statement in

‘By Vidyā, indeed, verily, these’

(Śa. Brā. 10-5-3-12)

is ascertained to be for the purpose of making known their form of Vidyā, on account of their association with the sacrifice constituted of Vidyā.

And here itself is seen their principal entity, the sacrifice of the form of Vidyā in

‘They study by the mind itself,—they are piled by the mind itself, the cups are taken up by the mind in their case; they praising in the mind, extolled in the mind—whatever is the Karman performed in the sacrifice, whatever is the sacrificial action—that is performed mentally by the mind alone, in the case of those constituted of mind, piled of mind.’ (Śa. Whatever sacrificial rite constituted of action is performed in the case of the brick-piled fires—that is made mentally itself in the case of the mind-piled fires, etc., to be gone through in the mind—on account of such mention, the sacrifice is also understood as constituted of Vidyā here. ॥ 46 ॥

[458] I say (says the objector) — There being no mention of an injunctive word here, there is no apprehension of the connection with the fruit,—having the form of Vidyā itself, on account of the association with the sacrifice constituted of Vidyā, in the case of these would be stultified because the context is about the sacrifice constituted of action established by the brick-piled fire. (The Sūtrakāra) says — No (in the Sūtra) —

And on account of Śruti etc., being more powerful, no stultification ॥ 47 ॥

Because the Śruti, indicatory mark, (and) sentence are more powerful than the context, the sacrifice known from the Śruti etc., and the connection of these with it, cannot be stultified by the weaker context. The Śruti, for the matter of that (says)

‘These, verily, are Vidyā-piled’

(Śa. Brā. 10-5-3-12)

(and) expounds them—

‘By Vidyā, verily, are these piled, for one who knows

—Linga (indicatory mark), for the matter of that,—And the Vākya (sentence is) —

‘They pile up for one who knows thus’

(Śa. Brā. 10·5·3·12)

A Vākya is the collective mention; that is to say, for one who knows thus, (and so) who is possessed of a sacrifice constituted of Vidyā, all the beings always pile up. The piling up made by all beings, pervading for all times, imagined by the mind—not possibly securing entrance into the sacrifice through the function of the brick-piled (fire) constituted of action, a limited agency, time, and function—becomes the indicatory mark for its entrance into the sacrifice constituted of Vidyā. ॥ 47 ॥

[459] As to what has again been stated that on account of the non-mention of the injunctive termination, and on account of the non-apprehension of the connection with the fruit—no other sacrifice constituted of Vidyā than the sacrifice constituted of action is possible here—There says (the Sūtrakāra) —

From the connection etc., like the separateness of another meditation, and this is seen,—that has been said. ॥ 48 ॥

This sacrifice constituted of Vidyā is known as being different from the sacrifice constituted of action, connected with the brick-piled (fire) from the connection etc., that are the causes of separateness. Anubandhāḥ—cup, praise, eulogy etc., connected with the sacrifice have been propounded in

‘By the mind are the cups taken in these, praising by the mind, they eulogised by the mind’ (Śa. Brā. 10·5·3·3)

etc. —By the word Adi, Sruti and others mentioned before are understood—That is to say, the sacrifice constituted of Vidyā is known as different on account of Sruti etc., along with the connection.

Prajñāntarapṛthaktvavat — as another meditation is known as separate from the sacrifice constituted of action, the Daharavidyā etc., from the Śruti etc.,—in the same manner, this one also. When the sacrifice constituted of Vidyā is known thus as separate by the connection etc., the injunction is postulated. Such an imagined injunction is seen in the case of passages which are of the form of repetitions. It is said in

‘But the passages on account of their being not cited before’

(Jal. Sū. 10·4·20)

and the fruit on account of the extended application in

‘Of those, each one alone so long as the previous one’

(Śa. Brā. 10·5·3·11)

—what fruit is there of the brick-piled fire through its own sacrifice,—it is understood that same is the fruit of the mind-piled etc., also, through their own sacrifice. ॥ 48 ॥

[460] As to what has again been said viz. the entrance into the sacrifice constituted of action, is known from the apprehension of its being equally powerful on account of the extended application—There says (the Sūtrakāra)—

No, even from (some) common (property), the apprehension ; no attaining to the place, like death. ॥ 49 ॥

Not necessarily through extended application even some other (unrelated) operation has to be equal, so that there would be the entrance of these into the sacrifice constituted of action ; because an extended application is available from any common point whatsoever ; for, that extended application is found in etc., merely on account of the common property viz. the nature of withdrawing into. Not indeed, there in the case of the Orb-person, there is, like death, the attaining to that world — the attaining to that place — also. Thus, here also, the mind-piled etc., like the brick-piled fires cannot be also associated with the sacrifice constituted of place, form, action of the brick-piled fire, merely by virtue of extended application of the nature. Therefore, it is known from the extended application that whatever fruit accrues for the brick-piled fire through its own sacrifice — that same belongs to the mind-piled also, through the sacrifice constituted of Vidyā. ॥ 49 ॥

And by the subsequent (passage), the word ■ of that nature, and the inclusion here on account of (Agnyahgas) being many. ॥ 50 ॥

Paraṇa Ca — And by the Brāhmana passage this word (Śruti) also denoting the mind-piled etc. Tādvidhyam — being of the same nature, — it and (ending with)

‘ Thus he who, verily, knows this, attains to this gratifying world, this being, all this ’

(Śa. Brā. 10-5-4-1)

— Vidyā alone with a separate fruit is enjoined. Similarly, in the Vaiśvānara-Vidyā etc., also, Vidyā alone ■ enjoined. Therefore, Agnirahasya cannot have connection only with action. (The objector retorts) — Well, in that case, the mind-piled etc., constituted of Vidyā should be taken up in the state of experiencing the fruits as distinct from being the knower, that same form can be associated in the state of the performance of the required means; because there is no purpose (point) in associating something over and above (that) when there is the accomplishment of the performance of the required means and the fruit thereof by that much alone. The same thing obtains here also, there being no difference (between the two cases)—

I say (says the objector) — But here, in

‘What will (sacrifice) a person has in this world, like that he becomes, having departed from here’ (Chā. 3.14.1)

—on account of the special mention, it is known that (the Ātman) having the form of one with sins destroyed, etc., alone has to be associated — (We reply) — Not so, because that refers to the object of worship as in

—It is, however, not so, that the one having the form of being the knower etc., alone, is to be associated. What difference there is in the Ātman in the state of salvation and in the state of worldly existence, that—having the sins destroyed etc., has to be associated. Whatever his form in the state of salvation, Ātman having that form alone is to be associated at the time of worship,—this (is) the sense. Whence? शरीरे भावाधिकरणं समाह्वम् (११)

‘Him as he worships, he becomes, verily, like that’

(Mudga. Kha. 3)

is indeed mentioned attainment, verily, in conformity with the worship. Nor again is it possible to say that this is just referring to the nature of the Highest; for, even the inmost Ātman also can be included in the category of the object of worship, as he is the body of the Highest Brahman which is the object of worship. Therefore, in the case of the worship of the Paramātmā having the inmost Ātman as his body, possessing the qualities, having the sins destroyed etc., mentioned in the words of Prajāpati — that same form is to be reached—this is as good as said. For this very reason, it is said —

‘Having thus the will (sacrifice), I would be attaining to that world after departure (from this world)’.

(Chā 3-14-4)

Therefore, the inmost Ātman, having the form to be reached is to be associated. Upalabdhivat — like the attainment to Brahman. Just as the attainment to Brahman referring to the nature of Brahman as properly established is enjoined, similarly the attainment to the Ātman, referring to the nature of the Ātman, properly established — this (is) the sense. The association of the nature of the Ātman in the Karmans is not subsidiary to Karman. By (the passage) — one desirous of heaven should sacrifice — is indeed vigorously urged the performance of the Karman itself for the sake of the fruit. The apprehension of the Ātman having the form of being the knower etc., as distinct from the body, is for the purpose of being qualified to perform the Karman which is the means for securing the fruit accruing (later) in due course of time, — and so, that much alone is expected there and hence nothing falls short (in our explanation). ॥ 52 ॥

Angāvabaddhāstu—The word Tu turns away the (above) view, Not, indeed, should the Upāsānās connected with the portions, Udgītha etc., be confined to those recensions alone, but they should be connected with each Veda, that is to say, with all the recensions.

The word Hi gives the reason, — because, they have been connected by the Śruti itself with the limited parts of the Udgītha etc., therefore, where there are Udgītha etc., they are to be connected there everywhere. Although the Udgīthas individually are different on account of the difference in accent, still all the individual (Upāsānās) are relevant, being referred to in the Udgītha-śruti in a general way, — and so, there is no proof for any (special) arrangement anywhere (like the one proposed). And in accordance with the maxim of Sarvaśīkhāpratyaya, the sacrifice is one in all the recensions. Therefore, there being one sacrifice pertinent in all recensions, Udgītha etc, that are subsidiary to the sacrifice are also pertinent, — and so, there is no special kind of proximity of any one — thus no confinement (to any particular recension), ॥ 53 ॥

And no contradiction, like the Mantra etc. ॥ 54 ॥

the Vaiśvānara-Vidyā is mentioned. There, Vaiśvānara, the Paramātman with the three worlds as his body, with the heavenly world, the Sun, the Wind, the Ākāśa, the water and Pṛthivī as his limbs, is mentioned as the object of worship. And there the heavenly world—the head; the Sun—the eye; the Wind—Prāṇa; Ākāśa—Sandeha (the middle of the body, the trunk)—that (is) the sense—Waters,—the bladder; the earth—the feet—(these are) the particular limbs.

There (arises the) doubt—Is the worship to be carried on of this (Paramātman) with the three worlds as his body, divided into parts; or, divided into parts and undivided whole, or as a whole alone ? What proper ? Of him divided into parts. Whence ? In the introduction there is the teaching of the divided individual worship. To the same effect is taught—Having approached (as pupils) Āśvapati of the Kekaya country, Aupamanyava and others with Uddālaka as the sixth, it is reported, asked him—

‘You are now studying this Vaiśvānara as Ātman himself;
speak unto us, verily, of him’. (Chā. 5.11.6) and he told each one of them who had told him of their own objects of worship, the heavenly world etc., worship individually, of the head, etc., separately and the fruit likewise in the different cases, in

‘He eats the fruit (Anna); sees agreeable things; there is the Brahmanical lustre in his family, who worships this same Vaiśvānara Ātman, this one, the head of the Ātman’.

And in

‘This is indeed the very lustrous Ātman Vaiśvānara’

(Chā. 5.12.1),

etc., he spoke of the object of worship in the various Upāsana's as being Vaiśvānara. Therefore, the divided individual worship has to be gone through.
Elsewhere in

‘But he who worships thus this same Ātman Vaiśvānara of the limited measure of a span’

(Chā. 5.18.1)

it should be understood that there is inclusion in brief, of the worship of the head etc., mentioned in connection with the Vaiśvānam, only limited, by the places, heavenly world etc.

[465] Another (objector) says—In this very way, the undivided worship of the whole also should be gone through, owing to the reference to a separate fruit, as in

‘But he who worships thus this same Ātman Vaiśvānara, of, the limited measure of a span, he eats food amongst all the worlds, amongst all beings, amongst all Ātmans’

(Chā. 5.18.1)

—Not by this much is (produced the blemish,) the splitting of the sentence.
Just as in the introduction to the Bhūmavidyā, having mentioned the worship of name etc., and its fruit; having taught the Bhūmavidyā in.

‘This one talks over-boldly, who talks over-boldly of Satya’

(Chā. 7.16.1)

etc. (the Sruti) also refers to the fruit in

‘He becomes self-ruler; in all the worlds, there is free movement at will for him’

(Chā. 7.25.2)

—There though the sentence aims at the Bhūmavidyā, the subsidiary worship of name etc., and its fruit are accepted. Similarly here also—

This (prima facie view) being reached, it is stated—

¹Bhūmnaḥ Kratuvajjyāstvam— Bhūmnaḥ—of the extensive, of the whole alone, undivided; Jyāstvam—authoritative nature—that (is) the sense, on account of there being the comprehension of one sentence. To explain the same—

Having introduced (the matter) in ‘Prācināśāla, the descendant of Upamanyu’ (Chā. 5-11-1)

five great sages, Aupamanyava and others, with a desire to know the Ātman Vaisvānara—

‘Uddālaka, verily, Your Reverences, this son of Aruṇa, is studying now this Ātman Vaisvānara—let us, by Jove, go to him.’

(Chā. 5-11-2)

—having approached that Uddālaka, (but) not securing the knowledge of the Vaisvānara Ātman there; having approached, along with him, Aśvapati Kekaya who knew the Vaisvānara Ātman; having asked him

‘You are now studying this same Ātman Vaisvānara,— speak unto us of the same’

(Chā. 5-11-5)

—having understood from him, the highest Ātman Vaisvānara as the object of worship with his body, beginning with heaven and ending with the earth, secured the fruit, the realisation of Brahman, the food of all the worlds, of all beings, and of all the Ātmans— with this winding up, it is known that the sentence is one. Thus, when the whole thing is known as one sentence, it can be ascertained that the passage referring to the worship of the particular limbs and the reference to the fruit are merely the repetition of the statement about a part of the worship of the whole.

भूमज्यायत्त्वाधिकरण समाप्तम् (२३)

‘One should offer (the offering) to Vaisvānara, on twelve potsherds when the son is born’

(Tai. Sam. 2.2.5)

the parts thereof are repeated

‘What is (offered) on the eight potsherds’

(Tai. Sam. 2.2.5)

etc., similarly the worship of the whole alone is just reasonable, not the worship of the parts severally. To the same effect points out this Śruti (passage), referring to diaster in the worship of the parts severally —

‘Your head would have fallen if you had not come to me’

(Chā. 5.12.2)

‘You would have been blind, if you had not come to me’

(Chā. 5.13.2)

etc. So, thus also has been brushed aside (the statement about) similarity of the worship, of name etc., spoken of before, for, there no diaster is mentioned by the Śruti from the worships of name etc., (only) that the worship of Bhūman has a fruit far surpassing that from the worships of name etc., is heard in

‘But he indeed speaks over-boldly who speaks over-boldly by Satya’

(Chā. 7.16.1)

—For that same reason, though the sentence aims at the Bhūmavidyā, the worships of name etc., together with their fruits are intended to be stated; otherwise, the praise of the Bhūmavidyā by (the mention of) talking over-boldly due to the surpassing fruit, would not be in order. Therefore, the worship of the whole undivided (group) alone is reasonable. ॥ 55 ॥

Daharavidyā, Upakosalavidyā, Śāṇḍīlyavidyā, Vaiśvānaravidyā, Ānandamaya-Vidyā, Akṣaravidyā etc., belonging to one recension and belonging to other recensions are taken for illustration. There are others having the fruit referring to one subject-matter, Prāṇa etc. It is doubted—Are the Vidyās here one, or are they different ?

Here also, when mutual difference in their case is justified, it is reasonable to speak of the reliability of all Vedāntas in the case of Daharavidyā etc. What proper ? Vidyās are one. Whence ? On account of Brahman, the entity fit to be known, being one The entity fit to be known is the form of the Vidyā. Thus on account of the oneness of form, there is the oneness of the Vidyās—

having all sins destroyed etc., that are mentioned in various contexts, and which are of the nature of meditation repeated And it is ascertained that the passages not depending upon anything else denoting particular Upāsanas, connected with the fruit of the form of acquisition of Brahman.—(the passages) mention in every context different Vidyās Although this meaning is established by the Sūtras cited in the First Kānda —

‘In difference of words, difference of Karman’

[467] It has been stated that Sadvidyā Daharavidyā etc, having the acquisition of Brahman as the fruit, are different Now, when there is a doubt in the case of these Vidyās—Is there a combination also, in one and the same person possible on account of some purpose in his case, or option (alternative) on account of the absence of purpose?—What proper? Combination also is possible ? Whence? Because a combination is seen even of different passages having one and the same fruit although having different senses according to the Sāstra for, a combination together is seen in a person, of Agnihotra, Darśapūrnāmāsa etc which are the means of securing one and the same heaven etc, in consideration of that same heaven being extensive; similarly here too, a combination also is possible on account of the consideration of the abundance of the realisation of Brahman —

This (prima facie view) being reached, we say (in reply) —

Option alone, not combination, is possible—Whence ? Avidīṣṭaphalatvāt—
On account of having the unqualified fruit—for, in the case of all the Brahmavidyās is mentioned the unqualified fruit—viz, the realisation of Brahman having unlimited excessive joy in the Sruti

‘The Brahman-knower secures the Highest’ (Tal. 2.1)

‘That alone is Brahman’s joy, of the learned Brāhmaṇa, not run down by desire’ (Tal. 2.8)

‘When the seer sees the Puruṣa, golden-coloured, doer, controller, risen from Brahman, then the knowing one, shaking off merit and demerit, stainless, attains to the maximum similarity’ (Mu. 3.1.3) etc., for, Brahman becomes unlimited excessive Ānanda, being realised by oneself, for itself as well as for another. And if that kind of realisation of Brahman is secured by one Vidyā, what (is the use) of another (Vidyā) ?— and so, no possibility of combination; for, heaven etc., being limited from the point of space, time, and nature, there is the possibility of abundance from the consideration of space etc., and so combination is possible for one longing for that. But here that is not possible in the case of Brahman whose nature is opposed to that. And all the Vidyās have for their fruit the acquisition of Brahman through eradicating the beginningless Karman and Avidyā opposed to Brahman-realisation; and so there is option itself in the case of all these, owing to their fruit being an unqualified one. But the Vidyās having the fruit other than the acquisition of Brahman, like the sacrificial rites having for their fruit heaven etc., may be taken optionally or combined in accordance with one’s will; because they have a limited fruit, there cannot be the expectation of abundance. ॥ 57 ॥

In the case of the parts, their presence in what is their resort ॥ 59 ॥

(Adhikaraṇa 26, Sūtras 59-64)

When the doubt is — whether the Vidyās resorting to the parts of the sacrifice, Udgītha etc., in ‘One should worship the Aksara Udgītha as Om’ (Chā. 1.1.1) etc., are to be made use of as a rule in the sacrifices, because they are for the purpose of the sacrifice like the Udgītha etc., or as desired, being for some (specific) human purpose like the Godohana etc. — (it is) proper (to say) that they should be made use of, as a rule —

I say (says the objector) — In their case it is propounded that there should be no rule as they serve some human purpose as in (the Sūtra) here,

‘Non-rule about meditation on them, on account of, that being seen, for separate, non-obstruction indeed the fruit’

(Bra. Sū. III. 3.41)

—True ! In order to make firm that same, it is being taken exception to by pointing out to some indicatory marks, and by reasoning. There indeed, it has been stated that they have a separate fruit owing to no restriction being seen —

Many points are found to regulate their being also accepted as parts of the Upāsana, like the Udgītha etc., that are the resort of the Upāsana. Not indeed, here, as in—For one desirous of cattle should he convey (fire) in the Godohana,— etc. is mentioned the connection with the fruit in the passage giving the injunction about the Upāsana. In

‘One should worship the Udgītha’

(Chā. 1.1.1)

is apprehended worship as being connected only with the Udgītha etc. For,
from the other passage—

‘Whatever alone one does by Vidyā, by faith, by Upaniṣad, that alone becomes more powerful.’

(Chā. 1.1.10)

mentioning the existing position, is known the connection with the fruit.
In the case, where being the part of a sacrifice is definitely known in so many words by the connection with the Udgītha etc., invariably connected with the sacrifice, the reference to the connection with the present fruit in another passage, would merely be a glorificatory passage, like the bearing of the Non-sinful verse. Therefore, just as the Udgītha etc., that are the resort of Upāsana, being a part of the sacrifice, are made use of as a rule in the performance-procedure (of a sacrificial rite), similarly, the Upāsana connected with them also are the parts of the sacrifice through them, — and so, they should, verily, be made use of as a rule ॥ 59 ॥

‘ From the seat of the Hotṛ, verily, indeed, he puts in proper order the wrong Udgītha ’

(Chā. 1-5-5)

—Here is to be seen the rule about putting the Upāsana in order. Durudgītha — Udgītha with the sense not understood. While speaking of the correction by another (the Hotṛ) when there is the lapse of the Vedana (of the Udgītha), (the Rsi) points out to its acceptance as a rule. ॥ 61 ॥

And on account of the Śruti pointing out to the common nature of the subsidiary ॥ 62 ॥

There being the Śruti passage speaking of a common nature —

‘ By that (is) this threefold Vidyā, — Om ; he makes one hear Om, he praises Om (and) he sings Om. ’

(Chā. 1-1-9)

common to Pranava, the attribute (subsidiary) of the Upāsana and the resort of the Upāsana, along with the Upāsana, it is apprehended that there is the inclusion (grouping) of the worship. By the reference to the matter in hand by (the word) Tena, the Pranava has access everywhere along with the Upāsana. And therefore, because the Upāsana is seen as invariably associated with the Pranava, there is the acceptance as a rule of the Upāsana of the Udgītha etc., like the Udgītha etc. ॥ 62 ॥

[469] This (prima facie view) being reached, it is stated (in reply) —

But not, on account of the non-mention in the Śruti of their association ॥ 63 ॥

But it is not that in the case of the Upāsana, of the Udgītha etc., they should be included as a rule in the sacrifices, like the Udgītha etc. Whence? Tatsababhāvāśruteh — On account of the non-mention in the Śruti of their association—that is to say, the non-mention in the Śruti of their being parts of the Udgītha. It is only when there is the state of a subsidiary, there is the rule about mutual association. For, even though some other qualification is not apprehended in this group of words

‘One should worship the Udgītha’

(Chā. 1.1.1)

still immediately after, in ‘Whatever one does by Vidyā, by faith, by the Upanisad, that same becomes more powerful’

(Chā. 1.1.10)

it is propounded that Vidyā is the means for making the sacrifice more powerful. Therefore, the Vidyā which is the means for a separate fruit from that of the sacrifice is enjoined for being performed in

‘One should worship the Udgītha’

(Chā. 1.1.1)

In the case of the worship known as being the means of a different fruit from the fruit of the sacrifice, the practical application as a part of the Udgītha which is a part of the sacrifice is not proper. Therefore, when there is the expectancy for the resort of Upāsana, the Udgītha which is proximate becomes merely the resort. Because Udgītha is a part of the sacrifice, the Upāsana has Udgītha etc., as the resort made use of in the sacrifice; this another qualification caused by a desire to make the sacrifice more powerful, belongs to him alone who is qualified for the sacrifice and so, there is no acceptance of it as a rule in the sacrifices. It has (already) been said that being more powerful in the case of the fruit of a sacrifice means non-obstruction by the fruit of another powerful Karman, — that is to say, the fruit without delay from the sacrifice.

In the case of Parnatā (of the ladle) etc., there is not mentioned in the Śruti, their being the direct means in respect of the fruit viz., the hearing of the non-sinful verse, as in the case of Vidyā being the means of the fruit in ‘Whatever one does by Vidyā — that alone becomes more powerful’

(Chā. 1-1-10)

— and so, on account of the non-contradiction of their practical application, as being part of Juhu etc., that are accessory to the sacrifice, and on account of the impropriety of the idea of the subsidiaries being the means of another fruit there, the mention in the Śruti about the fruit is just mere glorification ॥ 63 ॥

And on account of the Śruti. ॥ 64 ॥

And the Sruti points out that there is, verily, no rule about the Upāsana being taken up —

‘Brahmā, verily, indeed, knowing thus, protects all round the sacrifice, the sacrificer and all the priests (Rtviks)’ (Chā. 4-17-10) while talking about the protection of all by the knowledge of Brahman.
This is in order when the knowledge of Udgātṛ etc., is not there as a rule.
By this indicative mark is known that the indicative marks, the inclusion etc., mentioned before are (to be understood) in a general way. Therefore, it stands that there is just no hard and fast rule. ॥ 64 ॥

Fourth Quarter of the Third Chapter

Salvation, from this, from Word, thus Bādarāyaṇa ॥ 1 ॥

(Adhikarana 1, Sūtras 1-20)

[470] The consideration about the oneness or manifoldness of Vidyās, involving the inclusion and exclusion of the qualities, has been made. Now is considered—Is salvation from Vidyā or from Karman with Vidyā as subsidiary ? What proper ? Atah—from Vidyā, there is salvation—thus opines His Holiness Bādarāyaṇa. Whence ? Sabdāt—there is indeed seen the word in the Upamsads speaking of salvation from Vidyā—

‘The Brahman-knower secures the Highest’ (Tai 21)

‘I know this Purusa, great, of the colour of the Sun, beyond Tamas, one knowing him thus, becomes immortal here, no other path exists for salvation’ (Śve 38)

‘As the rivers, flowing on, disappear in the sea, abandoning name and form, so, the wise one, freed from name and form, attains to the shining Purusa beyond what is beyond (higher than the high).’ (Mu 3 2 8)

etc. ॥ 1 ॥

[471] There the advocate of the prima facie view stands up—

On account of being subsidiary, the statement about salvation, as in the case of others,—so Jaumini (opines) ॥ 2 ॥

It (is) not that the acquisition of salvation from the Vidyā is understood from the Word. Not, indeed, this word (passage) etc., points out to the acquisition of salvation from knowledge, on account of its aiming at the propounding of the knowledge of the Ātman as he is, the agent in the case of the sacrificial rites. Therefore, because Vidyā is a subsidiary factor to the sacrifice, through the purification of the agent, the statement in the Sṛuti about the fruit there, is merely a glorificatory statement as in the case of other substances—so thinks the preceptor Jaimini. It is said

‘In the case of substances (materials) purificatory rites and Karmans, as they are for the sake of another, the Sṛuti about the fruit would be (only) a glorificatory statement’

(Jai Sū 4.3.1)

But I say (says the objector)—In the Vedāntas is taught (described) the one to be known as fit to be reached by persons desirous of salvation, who is different from the Jiva who is the agent in the sacrificial Karmans—this has already been propounded by the Sūtras

‘All this, verily, Brahman’

(Chā. 3-14-1)

common to the sentient and the non-sentient, and which is dependent upon the condition of being the Ātman of the various entities known from

‘Who, abiding in Pṛithivī’

(Br. 3-7-3)

‘Who, abiding in Ātman’

(Śa. Brā. 14-6-7-30)

etc.—this has been reasoned out by (the Sūtras)—

‘On account of the abiding, so Kāśakṛtsna’

(Bra. Sū. I. 4-22)

etc.—So, how could Vidyā be propounded as a subsidiary factor to Karman because the Vedānta passages aim at teaching the Ātman as he is, viz, agent in the case of the sacrificial Karmans?—It is stated (in reply)—The view of the Pūrvaṇvaksin is that it must be admitted as a matter of necessity, that the Vedānta passages aim at instructing the nature of Jīva as he is, distinct from the body on account of the indicatory marks in the Vedānta passages themselves, indicating that the Karman is the principal with reference to Vidyā, and by the reference to the case-co-ordination fortified by them.

I say (says the objector)—It is not possible to speak of Vidyā as associated with the sacrifice through the purification of the agent, on account of the absence in the case of the agent, of being invariably connected with the sacrifice owing to his being common to (both) popular and Vedic Karmans.—

(The answer is)—Not so, because the popular Karman is possible in the case of the agent although not different from the body, and because the nature of the eternal Ātman distinct from the body is useful only in the sacrifice, its entrance in the sacrifice through the propounding of his nature, is not contradictory. Therefore, Vidyā being subsidiary to the sacrifice, no salvation from it ॥ 2 ॥

[472] What again are those indicatory marks, by reference to the case-co-ordination fortified by which, the Vedānta passages are ascertained to be concerned with the nature of Jīva ?—There says (the Sūtrakāra)

On account of the practical conduct being seen ॥ 3 ॥

In the case of the Brahman-knowers, is seen in a large measure their being busy with the Karmans themselves—Aśvapati of the Kekaya country, indeed, the best of those that know Ātman, said to those sages who had approached him for that knowledge

‘I am, indeed, Your Reverences, about to perform a sacrifice’

(Chā. 5.11.5)

Similarly also, Janaka and others, the foremost of Brahman-knowers are known in the Smṛti to be devoted to Karman—

‘Janaka and others secured all-round perfection by Karman alone’

(Gītā 3.20)

‘He also performed many sacrifices, the depository of knowledge’

(V. P. 6.6.12)

—Therefore, because Brahman-knowers are known to regard Karman as the principal, Vidyā is definitely a subsidiary factor of the Karman by aiming at the knowledge of the nature of the agent—and so, from Vidyā, no salvation

This is (but) an indicative mark—tell (us) what is arrived at.—
Here (the Śūtrakāra) says—

That, from the Śruti ॥ 4 ॥

The Śruti itself says that Vidyā is subsidiary to Karman, ‘Whatever one does by Vidyā, by faith, by the Upaniṣad—that alone becomes more powerful’

(Chā. 1-1-10)

thus. It is not possible for this Śruti being construed with merely the Udgītha on account of the context; for, the Śruti is more powerful than the context.
This Śruti

‘Whatever one does by Vidyā’

(Chā. 1-1-10)

indeed, refers only to the Vidyā. ॥ 4 ॥

On account of the accompaniment ॥ 5 ॥

‘Him Vidyā and Karman accompany’

(Bṛ. 4-4-2)

—in this is seen the combination of Vidyā and Karman, and the combination can exist only if Vidyā is a subsidiary factor in the manner mentioned. ॥ 5 ॥

On account of the injunction for one possessed of that (Vidyā) ॥ 6 ॥

[473] Vidyā is known to be subsidiary to Karman, owing to Karman being enjoined upon one possessed of Vidyā. In ‘Having returned from the household of the preceptor, having studied the Vedas as prescribed in the spare time after having performed service to the preceptor, to the family, in a clean region’

(Chā. 8-15-1)

etc., the Sruti enjoining Karmans on one who has studied as known from —Having studied the Vedas—enjoins this upon him alone who has studied right up to the comprehension of the sense. For, it has been established that the study (is to be carried on) till the comprehension of the sense, Therefore, because the Brahmayidyā is also employed in the Karmans, it is not meant for a separate fruit ॥ 6 ॥

On account of the rule ॥ 7 ॥

For this reason also, no salvation from the Vidyā—On account of the whole life of a person knowing Ātman, being employed as a rule in (the sacrificial) Karmans as in ‘(Engaged in) verily, performing Karmans, one should desire to live as hundred years’

(I. 2)

—it is known that the fruit belongs to Karman alone; Vidyā again, is subsidiary to Karman ॥ 7 ॥

[474] This (prima facie view) being reached, we say (in reply)—

But on account of the instruction about the additional (entity), this (view) of Bādarāyaṇa, on account of that being seen ॥ 8 ॥

By the word Tu the (above) view is turned away—Salvation comes from Vidyā alone. Whence? Adhikopadeśāt—on account of the instruction about the Highest Brahman, as fit to be known, which is an additional different entity from the Jīva, the agent in the Karmans, owing to its being the mine of innumerable, surpassing and unlimited qualities that are opposed to every thing fit to be abandoned.—So, the view of His Holiness Bādarāyaṇa is that the fruit (is) definitely from Vidyā.

‘एष सर्वेश्वर एव भूताधिपतिरेव भूतपाल एव तेनुर्विधरणः’ (बृ. ४।४।२२)

Let the indicatory marks stand over. As regards the instruction about something fit to be known, it however refers only to one additional to the inmost Ātman, the agent, for the matter of that. How? Taddarśanāt—on account of that being seen—on account of it being seen in the passages instructing about the knowledge of the Highest Brahman, the mine of infinite qualities impossible to be thought of in the case of the inmost Ātman even pure or impure, which is fit to be known, from which even the taint of what is fit to be abandoned is driven away, whose sport consists in creation, sustenance (glory), and dissolution of the world, created out of its own thought, omniscient, omnipotent, the bliss of which is immeasurable by speech and mind, the over-lord of Jivas, the Supreman Ruler of everything, in ‘Having the sins destroyed, ageless, deathless, bereft of grief, without hunger, without thirst, having the desires fulfilled, having the thoughts fulfilled’ (Chā. 8.1.5)

(Br. 3.8.9)

‘Through fear from him, the wind blows on; through fear rises the Sun, through fear from him, Āgni and Indra also—Death runs on as the fifth’

(Tai 2.8)

etc. Therefore, in the instruction-passages about the knowledge, there is not even the trace of the inmost Ātman who is the agent, almost like a glow-worm, who is associated with things fit to be abandoned like Avidyā etc., and so, the fruit of the Vidyā referring to the highest Purusa, is immortality, of the nature of the attainment to him, which is mentioned in the Śruti in various places. And thus it is well stated that salvation (the human purpose in life, is) from Vidyā, ॥ 8 ॥

[475] The Indicatory marks are also refuted—

But equal is the mention in the Śruti ॥ 9 ॥

As to what has been said that Vidyā is a subsidiary factor of Karman, as the performance of the sacrificial rites is seen in the case of the Brahman-knowers.—That (is) not (so). There is the equal mention in the Śruti of Vidyā not being subsidiary also.—That is to say, the mention of the performance of sacrificial rites in the case of the Brahman-knowers is not exclusive, on account of the non-performance also being mentioned. For, the abandonment of Karman in the case of the Brahman-knowers is seen in

‘The sages, descendants of Kavasa (said)—Why should we study? Why should we perform sacrifices?’

(Kau. 2.5)

इत्यादीः। अतो ब्रह्मविदां कर्मत्यागदर्शनाच्च विद्या कर्माङ्गम् ।

etc. Therefore, because the Brahman-knowers are seen to be abandoning Karman, Vidyā is not a subsidiary factor of Karman.—

How can it be reasoned out that there is the performance of Karman as also the non-performance in the case of the Brahman-knowers?—(The answer is)—Karman, the sacrifice etc., bereft of any consideration of the fruit, being a subsidiary factor of Brahmanvidyā, it is appropriate that the performance of that kind of Karman is seen. And (the Sūtrakāra) would state—(the following Sūtra)—

‘Expectancy of every thing, from the Śruti about the sacrifice etc., like the horse’ (Bra. Sū. III. 4.26)

And as the Karman, the same sacrifice etc., being for the sake of some fruit, is opposed to Brahmanvidyā with salvation as the only fruit, it is far more appropriate that the non-performance of just that should be seen. If Vidyā were to be a subsidiary factor of Karman, abandonment of Karman would not be appropriate on any account. ॥ 9 ॥

[476] As to what has been said—that by the Śruti itself is known that the Vidyā is subsidiary to Karman—(the Sūtrakāra) says in that connection—

Not prevailing everywhere ॥ 10 ॥

This Śruti does not pertain to all Vidyās, but pertains to Udgīthavidyā alone. The word Yat the particularity of which is not ascertained in ‘Whatever he does by Vidyā’

(Chā. 1.1.10)

refers to the particular Udgītha, the matter in hand in

‘One should worship the Udgītha’

(Chā. 1.1.1)

‘Whatever he does by Vidyā...that same is more powerful’.

(Chā. 1-1-10)

॥ 10 ॥

[477] And as to what is said that the combination of Vidyā and Karman is seen in

‘Vidyā and Karman accompany him’ (Br. 4-4-2)

and so, Vidyā is subsidiary to Karman—There says (the Sūtrakāra)

Division as in the case of a hundred ॥ 11 ॥

On account of the way of reasoning mentioned in

‘Vidyā and Karman accompany him’ (Br. 4-4-2)

Vidyā and Karman have different fruits; and so, a division should be seen here,—Vidyā accompanies for its own fruit, and Karman accompanies for its own fruit—Śatavat—Just as when it is said that a couple of hundred (cows or coins) goes to the seller of the field and the jewel, it is apprehended that there is this division viz.,—a hundred for the field, and a hundred for the jewel; similarly, here also ॥ 11 ॥

Of one who merely studies ॥ 12 ॥

[478] As to what has been said—because Karman is enjoined in the case of one knowing the Vidyā, Vidyā is subsidiary to Karman—This (is) not right—In

‘Having studied the Veda’ (Chā. 8-15-1)

there is the injunction for one who has merely study (to his credit). Not indeed, does the injunction in respect of study alone make a man turn to the apprehension of the purport, because the study (of the Veda) like the keeping (of the fire), culminates merely in the grasping (understanding) of the mass of syllables. And in the case of a person who has grasped his own Veda-section, as it is seen that he comprehends the Karman leading and some fruit, he of his own accord proceeds in respect of the fruit ascertained, to the consideration of its meaning. Thereupon, one hankering after Karman proceeds to know Karman, and one hankering after salvation, to know Brahman—and so, Vidyā is not subsidiary to Karman. Although the study-injunction itself directs one towards the apprehension of the purport, still Vidyā is not subsidiary to Karman, because Vidyā is a different thing from the knowledge of the purport. Just as, from the knowledge of the nature of the sacrificial rite, Jyotistoma etc., is a different thing,—the performance of that sacrificial Karman, which is the means of the fruit; in the same way, Vidyā which is the means of salvation, denoted by the words Dhyāna, Upāsana etc., is definitely a different thing from the knowledge of the nature of Brahman having the form of the knowledge of the purport; and so, even the tinge of the association with Karman exists not in that (Vidyā) ॥ 12 ॥

No, on account of non-distinction ॥ 13 ॥

[479] As to what has been said that

(i. 2)

having turned away the Atman-knower from knowledge, restricts a person to the performance of Karman as long as he lives—that is not appropriate. Whence? Avīśeṣāt—Not, indeed, is this rule the cause of some special statement, because it refers to an independent sacrificial Karman, which is the cause of the fruit, as the passage could also be regarded as proper, referring to Karman which is subsidiary to Vidyā, as in ‘Janaka and others attained indeed to all-round perfection

by Karman alone’

(Gītā 3-20)

the worship persists also in the case of the wise one right up to his departure (from the body). ॥ 13 ॥

Thus having removed the objection by the natural interpretation, (the Sūtrakāra) gives the meaning of this passage

'Performing Karmans alone here'

(Ī. 2)

Permission, definitely for praise. ॥ 14 ॥

The word Vā means emphasis.

'All this is enveloped by Īśa'

(Ī. 1)

—this being a Vidyā-chapter, this is just permission to perform Karman for all times, for the praise of the Vidyā. On account of the greatness of Vidyā, one although performing Karman always, is not contaminated by the Karmans—thus indeed Vidyā comes to be praised. The remaining part of the passage

'Thus in you, not otherwise from this exists; Karman sticks not to a person'

(Ī. 2)

points out to the same—Therefore, Vidyā is not subsidiary to Karman ॥ 14 ॥

And at will, some ॥ 15 ॥

[480] Furthermore, some students of some recension read about a person devoted to Brahma-vidyā, abandoning at will the householder's stage of life, in 'What would we do with progeny, for whom there is this Ātman, this world?'

(Br. 4.4.22)

—This statement speaking of the abandonment at will of the householder's life by a wise one who has become free from attachment, points out to Brahma-vidyā not being subsidiary to Karman. For, if Vidyā were to be subsidiary to Karman, sacrifice etc., the abandonment of the householder's life at will is not possible for one devoted to Vidyā. Therefore, Vidyā, (is) not subsidiary to Karman. ॥ 15 ॥

And the destruction ॥ 16 ॥

And in every Vedānta work, students read about the destruction by Brahmayidyā, of Karman constituted of merit and demerit, the root of all misery pertaining to the worldly existence—

‘ The knot of the heart is broken, all doubts are smashed, and his Karmans are destroyed when is seen that High and Low ’

(Mu. 2.2.8)

etc. That would not go well, if Vidyā were to be subsidiary to Karman ॥ 16 ॥

And in the case of the celibates; for, in the (Vedic)

Word ॥ 17 ॥

[481] Vidyā is not subsidiary to Karman, on account of the presence of Brahmayidyā in the celibate stages of life, and on account of the absence of sacrificial rites like Agnihotra, Darsapūrnāmāsa etc., therein.

I say (says the objector)—There are, verily, no stages of life pertaining to the celibate on account of the Śruti referring to the qualification right up to one's life, for the performance of the Agnihotra, New-moon—Full-moon sacrifices etc., as in

‘ He performs the Agnihotra, as long as he lives ’

(Āpa. Śrau. 3-14-8)

—and on account of the unauthoritative nature of the Smrtis as opposed to the Śruti. Therefore (the Sūtrakāra) says Śabde hi—For indeed, in the Vedic passages themselves they (the stages of life) are seen, in etc. The Śruti—As long as life lasts—refers to one not freed from attachment.

‘ The three pillars of Dharma ’

॥ 17 ॥

Reference (says) Jaimini, on account of the absence of injunction; (the Śruti) indeed condemns ॥ 18 ॥

[482] As to this (statement) that in the Vedic passage—

‘The three pillars of Dharma’

(Chā. 2.23.1)

etc., the stages of life pertaining to the celibate are seen, and so, they do exist—this is not proper. For, in the passages such as

‘The three pillars of Dharma’

(Chā. 2.23.1)

etc., there is made a mere reference to those stages of life,—that is to say, a mere repetition. Whence this? Acodanāt—that is to say, on account of there being no injunction. There is not to be seen (heard) here an injunctive-word. By

‘The three pillars of Dharma’

(Chā. 2.23.1)

etc., indeed, is praised the worship of Brahman as Praṇava which is the subject matter, on account of the conclusion in

‘One stationed in Brahman goes to immortality.’

(Chā. 2.23.1)

Therefore, here is made merely a repetition of the statements about those stages of life, for (some) other purpose. As (the passage)

‘And these who worship Śraddhā as Tapas in the forest’

(Chā. 5.10.1)

aims at the Devayāna-injunction, there also (exists) no possibility of any injunction about other Āśramas. For, on the contrary, the Śruti condemns other Āśramas in etc. Therefore, there are no Āśramas for the celibates—So opines the preceptor Jaimini ॥ 18 ॥

(The other Āśrama) has to be gone through (says)

Bādarāyaṇa, on account of the Śruti pointing to similarity.

॥ 19 ॥

[483] His Holiness Bādarāyaṇa thinks that like the householder's stage of life, other Āśramas also have to be gone through,—Whence? Sāmyaśruteḥ—On account of the Śruti pointing to similarity.—For, in the Śruti is seen even in the case of those Āśramas similarity with the Grhasthāśrama, which is admitted as being acceptable. The mention for praising one who is established in Brahman, beginning with

‘The three pillars of Dharma’

(Chā. 2-23-1)

is the same in respect of the householder's stage of life, and the other stages of life. Now, if it is the view that the repetition of the Grhasthāśrama is possible only if its existence is already established and so its attainment has necessarily to be accepted; that is equally applicable to the others also; and so, why this partiality for the other one? Not again is it proper that only the feature of the householder's life is denoted by all the words, sacrifice, study, gifts, penance, celibacy etc., in that case celibacy and Tapas would be possible only in the case of the householder, on account of the impropriety of the statement about division—First, Second, Third—after having combined them together, as the Triad in

‘The three pillars of Dharma’

(Chā. 2-23-1)

—therefore, by

is referred to, the Gr̥hasthāśrama. The word Adhyayana refers to the repetition of the Vedic passages. By the word Tapas the Vaikhāṇasa and the ascetic are to be taken, because both prominently comprise Tapas; for, the word Tapas is used in the sense of the mortification of the body. And that is common to both also. The duties themselves of a Brahmacārin are denoted by the word Brahmacarya. The word Brahmasaṁstha being mentioned in the Śruti later in

‘One stationed in Brahman goes to immortality’

(Chā. 2-23-1)

is to be understood etymologically and is common to all the Āśramas, on account of the possibility of being stationed in Brahman in the case of the followers of all Āśramas. Brahmanī saṁsthā—establishment—establishment in Brahman and that is undoubtedly possible in the case of all. Only followers of the Āśramas deficient in the attachment to Brahman, resort to the holy worlds. And amongst them alone, the one attached to Brahman becomes the enjoyer of immortality. All this has been very clearly stated by His Holiness Parāśara, having mentioned the fruit up to the acquisition of the Brahmaloka in the case of those who are merely attached to the Varṇas and the Āśramas, beginning with

‘The world of Prajāpati for the Brāhmaṇas’ (V. P. 1-6-34)

and ending with

‘The world of Brahman is mentioned in the Smṛti for the Sannyāsins (ascetics)’ (V. P. 1-6-37) in mentioning the acquisition of Brahman by those attached to Brahman in ‘Those Yogins, indeed, who are always meditating upon Brahman wholeheartedly, for them that is the highest place which the wise ones see.’ (V. P. 1-6-38)

Therefore, the Āśramas also of the celibate on par with the Grhasthā-śrama are seen, and so they also have to be gone through By Aranya in

(Chā 5 10 1)

also—because the Devayāna-injunction stands in need of accepting that Āśrama where penance is prominent — there also the attainment to that has got to be accepted ॥ 19 ॥

[484] Having propounded that in the reference-view, and the injunction-view, these (Āśramas) also have to be gone through equally with the Grhasthāśrama —(the Sūtrakara) now says in order to propound that there is the injunction alone of all the Āśramas, not merely repetition—

Injunction definitely, like carrying ॥ 20 ॥

The word Va is for emphasis This is indeed an injunction of all the Āśramas as in the case of Dhārana—Just as in the Dīstāgnihotra-sacrifice from the passage—Carrying the Samidh down, he should follow on swiftly, for, he carries it above for the Gods—although it is of the nature of a mere repetition an injunction is enjoined, on account of the carrying above not known before That is said in (the chapter) Śesalaksana

‘(There is) however the injunction for carrying, for that is unknown before’

(Jai Su 3 4 3)

Similarly here also, on account of the thing not being established before, an injunction alone has got to be accepted, like the injunction about the Āśramas in respect of the Jābālas taking it to be as though not being there in ‘Having completed the celibacy-stage one should become a householder; leaving the house, having become a forester, (one) should even in the case of these and other passages referring to other Āśramas, the establishment of the Āśramas has got to be accepted — this has been propounded.

(Jā. 4)

Thus on account of the definite statement (injunction) about the other Āśramas, the Sruti about the debt, the Sruti—Yāvajjīva (for all life)—the Sruti condemnatory—all these are to be known as referring to those alone that are not free from attachment; other Śrutis enjoining Karmans to be necessarily gone through right up to departure (from the body), by the Brahmanknowers, and the Smritis also refer to the particular Āśrama-duties in their respective cases. Therefore, on account of the prescription of Brahmanvidyā in the case of the celibates, it is established that there is salvation from Vidyā, superimposition of the idea of being the most eminent Rasa etc., in the case of

भावशब्दाच्च ॥ २२ ॥

Udgītha and others? Here, having admitted that the propounding aims at the worship, and worship being for the sake of salvation, it was stated that there was no rule about the worship being included in the sacrifices, — What proper? The passages aim at mere praise. Whence? On account of the inclusion of Udgītha and others, for, having admitted Udgītha and others which are the limbs of the sacrifice, their being the most eminent Rasa etc., is set forth. Just as in the case of the statement advocating the ladle and others as being the earth and others, (the statement) — This same, ladle; the heavenly world, the Āhavanīya (fire) etc., — aims merely at its praise, similarly here also. So, this is the doubt raised — Stutimātramupādānāditi cet — If it be argued that on account of the inclusion of Udgītha etc., it is intended to say that these passages are merely for the sake of their praise —

Here (is) the answer — Nāpūrvatvāt — it is not reasonable that (the passages are) merely for praise. Whence? Apūrvatvāt — on account of their being not (proved, seen) before. Not indeed, are Udgītha and others apprehended as being the most eminent Rasa etc., by another means of proof, so that (statements about) their being the most eminent Rasa etc., would be repeated for producing the idea of being praiseworthy. Nor again is any injunction about Udgītha etc., nearby here, so that like (the passage) — This same, ladle; the heavenly world, the Āhavanīya (fire) etc., — that could be accepted as aiming at their praise, in some manner or other, on account of its forming up one sentence. Therefore, it is reasonable that there should be the prescription of superimposition as being the most eminent Rasa etc., on the Udgītha etc., for the purpose of the accomplishment of the fruit, the possession of power by the sacrifice etc. ॥ 21 ॥

And on account of the word denoting the optative mood, in ‘One should worship’

(Chā. 1.1.1)

it is reasonable that it should aim at injunction; for, a word denoting an action, endowed with an injunctive termination makes one comprehend its sense which is the object of the injunction itself. Therefore, these Sruti passages are for the purpose of enjoining worship. ॥ 22 ॥

Here ends the Stutimātrādhikaraṇa (2)

II (it be said) they are for the Pāriplava. (the answer is)—No, on account of that being specialised ॥ 23 ॥

‘Pratardana, verily, the son of Divodāsa, indeed, went to the dear abode of Indra’

(Kau. 3.1)

‘Śvetaketu, indeed, was the descendant of Aruṇa’

(Chā. 6.1.1)

— Are these legends (episodes) etc., for the purpose of employment in the revolving legends, or for the purpose of propounding a particular Vidyā ?—While considering this, if it be argued that because the legendary discourses are employed in the Pāriplavas (revolving legends) in (the passages)—They narrate the episodes — it is not reasonable that they should be prominently for Vidyā—(we say)—No, all legendary discourses cannot be employed in the Pāriplava procedure. Whence ? Because the practical application is specialised. Having stated—They narrate the episodes,—in that same place the legends about Manu and others — Manu, the son of Vivasvat, the King — are specialised. Therefore, it is known that they alone are to be employed there. Therefore, the Sruti passages dealing with the legendary discourses in all the Vedāntas, are not for the sake of the Pāriplava-procedure, but for the purpose of enjoining a Vidyā ॥ 23 ॥

And likewise on account of forming up one sentence ॥ 24 ॥

And because the legendary discourses are connected as forming one sentence with the injunction in ‘Ātman, verily, (O) dear one, should be seen’ (Br. 2.4.5) etc., it is known that they are for the sake of the injunction of the Vidyā alone. Just as (the passage)

‘He wept’

Here ends the Pāriplavādhikaraṇa (3)

Sruti as having connection with the Vidyā in

'One stationed in Brahman goes to immortality' (Chā 2 23 1)

'And these who worship Sraddhā as Tapas in the forest'

(Chr. 5 10 1)

'The renouncers (ascetics) longing for this very world, go away'

(Br 4 4 22)

'Longing for which, they practise celibacy' (Kā 2 15)

etc for this very reason in the case of the celibates there is no need for the Vidyā, of the kindling of the fire etc Agnīndhana—keeping up the fire There is no need for the rites such as the Agnihotra, Darśapūrnamāsa (New and Full moon-sacrifices) etc, preceded by the keeping up of the fire that is to say, in their case Vidyā expects the Karman prescribed only for their own Āśrama ॥ 25 ॥

Here ends the Agnīndhanāḥ, adhikarana (4)

And the need of all, like the horse, on account of the Sruti referring to the sacrifice etc. ॥ 26 ॥

(Adhikarana 5, Sūtra 26)

[488] If Vidyā leads on to immortality, verily, without standing in need of the sacrifice etc, then in the case of the house-holder also, it deserves to accomplish the same without standing in need of that (Yajña etc,) itself The Sruti passage referring to the sacrifice etc, does not propound Karman as subsidiary to knowledge from the expression

'They desire to know.'

(Br 4 4 22)

Therefore (the Sutrakāra) says—Sarvāpeksā The Vidyā does stand in need of all Karman, Agnihotra etc in the case of the house-holders who perform sacrificial rites Whence? Yajñādisrutah—

‘Him, this one, the Brāhmanas in accordance with the statement in the Vedas, desire to know, by the sacrifice, gifts, Tapas, indestructible’

(Br. 4.4.22)

by this etc., sacrifice and others are indeed mentioned in the Śruti as subsidiary to Vidyā—By sacrifice etc., Vividisanti—desire to know; that is to say, they desire to secure knowledge by sacrifice etc. It is only when sacrifices etc., are (admitted to be) the means of knowledge, the reference viz, they desire to secure knowledge by sacrifice etc., becomes appropriate; as when the sword is (known to be) the means of killing, there can be the statement—He wishes to kill by the sword. Therefore, sacrifice etc., are apprehended as the means of knowledge. And that knowledge, a different matter from the knowledge of the sense of the passages, denoted by the words Dhyāna (meditation), Upāsānā (worship) etc., of the form of remembrance attaining to the nature of the clearest direct perception, exceedingly agreeable, with its abundance increasing day by day by practice, persisting right up to the departure (from the body)—such knowledge is the means of salvation—(this) is stated by us already. (The Sūtrakāra) would speak of this in etc. And that contemplation of this nature is produced by sacrificial rites being practised day by day — both obligatory and occasional — of the nature of the worship of the highest Puruṣa, through the grace of the highest Puruṣa —This is propounded by the Śāstra — They desire to know by sacrifice etc. —Therefore, in the case of the house-holders performing the sacrificial Karma, Vidyā stands in need of all rites, obligatory and occasional, such as sacrifice etc.

Āśvavat — Just as a horse that is the means of movement in the case of a man, stands in need of accessory acts such as tightening up its saddle, the bridle, so Vidyā although the means of salvation stands in need of the obligatory and occasional Karmans, and their paraphernalia—All this the Lord himself says—

‘Sacrifice, gifts, penance, (sacrificial) Karman, — (all that) should not be abandoned; that should be, verily, gone through. Sacrifice, gifts and penance—these surely (are) the purifiers in the case of the wise ones’

[489] While considering the question in the case of the householder, tranquillity, restraint etc.,—are these to be practised or not?—(the prima facie view) being reached—because the performance of a rite is of the nature of operation by internal and external sense-organs; Śama, Dama etc., being of an opposite nature, they are not to be performed—it is stated (in reply)—Although the householder is engaged in the acts involving the operations of the sense-organs, he may be a wise one endowed with tranquillity,

‘Therefore, one knowing this, being tranquil, restrained, non-active, enduring, composed, should see the Ātman in the Ātman himself’ (Br. 4.4.23)

—Because for the rise of Vidyā, Sama, Dama etc., being seen to be actively helping, being of the nature of the composure of the mind, and because Sama, Dama etc., are necessarily to be gone through for the securing of the Vidyā, they also have got to be gone through. Not again is there the mutual opposition of Karmans and Sama, Dama etc., on account of their having the nature of operation of the sense-organs, and the contrary of that (respectively), because they have different objects (to work upon). There is the operation of the sense-organs in (the matters) prescribed and its sublation in the case of non-prescribed (Karmans) void of any purpose. Not again in the case of a person associated with rites of the nature of operation of the sense-organs, is there the impossibility of his taking to Sama, Dama etc., through the power of Vāsanā, on account of the prescribed Karmans being the cause of the rooting out of the entire opposite Vāsanās, through His grace, by propitiating the highest Purusa. Therefore, Sama, Dama etc., also are to be gone through by a house-holder ॥ 27 ॥ is declared in the case of a Prāṇa-knower permission for eating all food. The doubt being there — Is this permission for eating all food for all time for one who is devoted to the Prāṇavidyā, or in the exigency of danger to life? — (The prima facie view) being reached — on account of the absence of any specific mention, always, — it is stated (in reply) Prāṇātyaye — The word Ca is for the sake of emphasis — that is to say, only in the exigency of danger to life. Whence? Taddarśanāt — for, it is seen elsewhere, that even in the case of the Brahman-knowers, there is the permission for all food only in the exigency of danger to life; what again in the case of the Prāṇa-knower? Uṣasta, the son of Cakrāyaṇa, it is reported, the foremost of the Brahman-knowers, while the Kuru regions were affected by hail and were suffering from famine, residing in the Ibhya village, being in danger to life on account of starvation, desiring that his life should not come to an end, for the sake of the accomplishment of the Brahmanvidyā, begging of (the villager) Ibhya who was eating the Kulmāṣas, when replied to by him — Other than these half-eaten by me, there are none; having said to him once again — Give me (some) of these; having accepted the Kulmāṣas given by that Ibhya taken out of what had been left over, requested by Ibhya that he should accept the water after (the food is eaten,) — Cākṛāyaṇa saying —

‘(In that case) my drinking would be something used by another (and hence unclean)’

(Chā. 1-10-3)

and being confronted with the rejoinder by Ibhya—Are these Kulmāṣas not used by another?—having said

‘I would not have lived, not eating these; the drinking of water would be at my will’— about his exigency viz. danger to life if the Kulmāṣas were not eaten, and his being able to keep on his life by the eating of that much, the drinking of the water (unclean) used up by another, in his case being voluntary, would be prohibited; having given to his wife something remaining after he had eaten, and desirous of going with a view to earn by performing a sacrifice (for some one) the next day, once again afraid of danger to life, ate those same (Kulmāṣas) used up by Ibhya, used up by himself and left over, and those preserved by her (his wife). Therefore, available even in the case of the Brahman knowers, permission for eating all food being only when there is the danger to life, the eating of all food by the Prāṇa-knower, described here without any qualification, is ascertained to be (valid) only in the exigency of danger to life. ॥ 28 ॥

And on account of non-contradiction ॥ 29 ॥

Also on account of the non-contradiction of the injunction about pure food for the production of Brahmanvidyā, in

‘When there is pure (clean) food, there is the purity of Sattva; when there is the purity of Sattva, there is permanent remembrance’

(Chā. 7-26-2)

it is known that the eating of all food in the case of the Brahman-knowers refers to (times of) calamity. Thus, on account of being the eater of all food in the case of Brahman-knowers although possessed of excessive powers, referring only to (times of) calamity, permission for all food in the case of the Prāṇa-knower possessed of scanty power, refers only to (times of) calamity. ॥ 29 ॥

Moreover, it is mentioned in the Smṛti ॥ 30 ॥

Moreover, being the eater of all food in the case of Brahman-knowers and others is mentioned in the Smṛti, as referring only to calamity—

॥ ३० ॥

(The Śruti) word, for this very reason, referring to activity not at will. ॥ ३१ ॥

Because being the eater of all food in the case of the Brahman-knowers and others, refers only to (the times of) calamity; for this very reason, in the case of all, Akāmakāre Śabdah—word prohibiting actions at will, exists. For, in the Sāmbhitā of the Kathas, there is the word prohibiting activity at will—

‘Therefore, a Brāhmaṇa does not drink wine, thinking—I may not be freed from sin’ (Katha. Sām.)

—that is to say, a Brāhmaṇa does not drink wine, thinking that he may not be associated with sin. ॥ ३१ ॥

(Adhikaraṇa 8, Sūtras 32-35)

[491] It has been stated that Brahmadevidyā has sacrifice and other rites subsidiary to it. In considering whether those rites, sacrifice and others, are to be gone through also by one sticking only to the Āśrama (duties), not desirous of salvation or not; — Yajña and others cannot be the duties only of the Āśramas, because thereby there would be the undesirable contingency viz. conflict in respect of being connected with the obligatory and occasional (Karmans) if being subsidiary to Vidyā they are only subsidiary to the Āśramas —This (prime facie view) being reached, it is stated—Āśrama-karmāpi

'One performs the Agnihotra as long as one lives'

(Ā. Śrau. 3-14-11)

etc.,—that is to say, they are prescribed as obligatory owing to their being dependent upon (the person) being alive. ॥ 32 ॥

And similarly, because they are prescribed as subsidiary to Vidyā, in

'Him, this one, in accordance with the statement in the'

(Br. 4-4-22)

etc., they are to be gone through, even as being subsidiary to Vidyā—so, says (the Sūtrakāra)

And on account of their nature as co-workers ॥ 33 ॥

They are to be gone through because they are even the co-workers of Vidyā, through the production of Vidyā. That is to say, their being for the sake of both, owing to the application being different, is not contradicted like the qualified life-status and heaven etc., as in the case of Agnihotra etc. ॥ 33 ॥

And likewise also, there is not other Karman as well—so says (the Sūtrakāra)—

In any case, they the same, on account of the indicatory mark in both ॥ 34 ॥

In all cases, whether they are for the sake of Vidyā or even for the sake of the Āśramas, they are the same, sacrifice and others—this should be borne in mind. That is to say, there is no difference in the nature of the Karman. Whence? Ubhayalingāt—on account of the Śruti passages in

And the Śruti shows non-overpowering ॥ 35 ॥

And having referred to the same religious duties, the sacrifice etc., by ‘ He dries away sin by Dharma ’ (M. Nā. 22-1) etc., (the Śruti) points to the Anabhibhava of Vidyā by them — (that is to say) the absence of any obstacle to the production, by sinful deeds. For, Vidyā is produced being augmented (dragged nearer) every day in the mind (rendered) very pure by sacrifice etc., performed day after day. Therefore, the sacrifice and others are the same in both. ॥ 35 ॥

Here ends the Vihativādhikarana (8)

And (there is) even (in the case of the non-Āśramites, staying) midway, however, (qualification for Vidyā) on account of that being seen ॥ 36 ॥

(Adhikaraṇa 9, Sūtras 36-39)

[492] It has been stated that the followers of the four Āśramas are qualified for the study of Brahma-vidyā, and the Āśrama-duties are the co-workers of Vidyā. Those again that are in between the Āśramas like widowers and others, — Are they qualified for Brahma-vidyā or not ? — This doubt being there, (the prima facie view) being reached, that they have no qualification on account of the Vidyā being associated with the know-how (ultimate purpose) of the Āśrama-duties and there is the absence of the Āśrama-duties in the case of the non-Āśramites — it is stated (in reply) — Antarā cāpi tu — the word Tu is for the purpose of turning away the (above) view ; the word Ca (is) for the sake of emphasis. There is surely even in the case of the non-Āśramites standing midway, the qualification (eligibility) for Vidyā.

Whence? Taddrsteh—There is indeed seen even in the case of the non-Āśramites, Raikva, Bhīṣma, Saṁvarta and others, extreme attachment to Brahmadevidyā. Nor again is it possible to say that there is the favour of Vidyā only by the Āśrama-duties; because gifts etc., in

‘By the sacrifice, gifts, by penance, indestructible’

(Br. 4.4.22)

although not invariably found in the Āśramas are mentioned as being favourable (to Vidyā). Just as in the case of the celibates, devotion to Vidyā is seen and the favour of Vidyā is accomplished by things different from Agnihotra etc., similarly in the case of the non-followers of Āśramas also, Vidyā is seen, and the favour of Vidyā is possible to be had by the muttering of prayers, fasting, gifts, worship of deities etc., which are not confined as a rule to the Āśramas. ॥ 36 ॥

And it is mentioned in Smṛti ॥ 37 ॥

And moreover, even in the case of the non-followers of the Āśramas, the favour of Vidyā is mentioned in the Smṛti as being due only to the muttering of prayers etc., as in ‘A Brāhmaṇa may reach perfection even by the (silent) muttering of prayers; no doubt about it. He may or may not perform anything else, a Brāhmaṇa is friendly to all’.

(Manu. 2.87)

Samsidhyet—attains to perfection by the Vidyā favoured by Japa etc., —this (is) the sense ॥ 37 ॥

And there (is) the special favour ॥ 38 ॥

Not is this matter to be solved by mere reasoning and Smṛti works. It is mentioned in the Śruti that there is the favour of Vidyā by specific religious duties not confined to the Āśramas, in

But for this reason, the other one is superior, and on account of the Līṅga (Smṛti) ॥ 39 ॥

The word Tu is for the sake of emphasis. For this very reason, the one other than a non-follower of Āśrama — viz. being a follower of Āśrama is alone superior. Not being a follower of Āśrama is a case of exigency—(Āpat), that is to say, one who is capable must take to being the follower of (some) Āśrama (or other), on account of the two viz one having abundant Dharma, and another having a scanty Dharma — both cannot be functioning equally. Līṅga — that is to say, on the strength of the Smṛti —
The Smṛti mentions the resorting to the Āśrama in respect of one who is qualified, in

‘A twice-born should not stay even for a single day, as not belonging to any Āśrama’

(Dakṣa 1.10)

etc. In the case of one who is past the Brahmacharyaśrama, one who has not taken a wife, and one whose wife is dead, — not having a wife, there being no freedom from attachment, is a calamity. ॥ 39 ॥

Here ends the Vādhuvādhikaraṇa (9)

But in the case of one belonging to that (Āśrama) there cannot be absence from that, even according to Jaimini, owing to the restriction in respect of the absence of their characteristics. ॥ 40 ॥

(Adhikaraṇa 10, Sūtras 40-43)

[493] In considering whether there is the (required) qualification for (the study of) Brahmadvidyā even in the case of those fallen away from the Āśramas — all-life Brahmachārins, foresters and Samnyāsins, — (the prima facie view) being reached that as in the case of widowers etc , there is the necessary qualification owing to the possibility of Vidyā favouring them, by gifts etc , that are not confined to any Āśrama,—it is said (in reply)—Tadbhūtasya tu nātadbhāvah — The word Tu is for the sake of turning away the (above) view Tadbhūtasya — of one belonging to the Āśramas, the all-life celibate etc,—Nātadbhāvah — not remaining like that, no possibility of staying without belonging to some Āśrama Whence ? Tadrūpābhāvebhyo niyamāt — tadrūpāni — the features of those Nais̥hika etc , that is to say, their characteristics Tesāmbhāvah—absence of those characteristics, on account of their being restricted by the Sāstra to them, for, the Sāstras restrict those who have entered the Āśramas, Nais̥hika etc , in respect of turning away from the duties of their Āśramas,

‘The Brahmacārīn, one residing in the preceptor’s house, the third, not sparing himself thoroughly at the preceptor’s house’

(Chā 2 23 1)

And also—

‘He should go to the forest and should not come back from there’

And also—

‘Having renounced, he should not take to the fire again’

(Kathāru 4, Kathāśru 22)

Therefore, it being not possible for the Nais̥hika and others to remain like the widowers etc , without belonging to any Āśrama, Brahmadvidyā does not confer upon them any qualification, showing by the expression Jaiminerapi, his agreement (with him, the Sūtrakāra) corroborates the view favoured by him, as stated ॥ 40 ॥

Now it may be (argued) that the necessary qualification is possible in the case of the Naisthikas who have fallen away from celibacy, on account of the atonement, and there is mentioned the atonement in Adhikāralaksana, in 'One who has scattered his semen over a beast, like that'

(Jai Sū 6824)

Therefore, atonement being possible in the case of one fallen from celibacy, after making the atonement one would have the necessary qualification for Brahmavidyā — There (the Sūtrakāra) says —

And not (the atonement) even in the Adhikāra-section, on account of the Smṛti passage referring to the fall, and on account of the impossibility of that ॥ 41 ॥

[494] The atonement although mentioned in the Adhikāralaksana is not possible in the case of Naisthikas and others who have fallen from them (their respective Āśramas) Whence? Patanānumanāttadayogāt — On account of the Smṛti passage referring to the fall of those who have fallen away, Naisthikas and others, that atonement is not possible—

'Having taken to the duties of an all-life celibate, that twice-born who falls away (from them)—I do not see any atonement (for him), by which that Ātman killer would be purified'.

(Atrisṁr 816)

Therefore, the atonement mentioned in the Adhikāra-chapter refers to other Brahmacārins (and not to the Naisthika) ॥ 41 ॥

Because it is just a minor sin, some (admit) the existence (of atonement) like eating, that has been said ॥ 42 ॥

Falling away from celibacy in the case of the Naisthika Brahmacārins and others — Upapūryam — a minor sin, on account of its being not counted among the great sins. So some preceptors admit the Bhāva — existence also of the atonement there. Āśanavat — Like eating. As there is the prohibition of the eating of honey etc., and its atonement, the same would be the position in respect of the Brahmacārin fallen from celibacy and the Nais̥thika etc.

That has been said by the Smṛtikāras —

‘And this is not conflicting with the latter’ (Gautama 1.3.4)

That is to say, — what has been said in connection with him who resides at the preceptor’s house, that not in conflict with one’s own Āśrama, exists in the case of the followers of the later Āśramas also. Like that, here also, there being the possibility of an atonement, when fallen away from celibacy, there is also the fitness for Brahmanvidyā ॥ 42 ॥

But outside, even in both cases, on account of the Smṛti and on account of the (rule of) conduct. ॥ 43 ॥

The word Tu is for the purpose of turning away the other view.
Whether it is a minor sin or a great sin, these are definitely outside the pale of those qualified for Brahmanvidyā — that is to say, not qualified for the Brahma-vidyā. Whence? Smṛteḥ — on account of the Smṛti passage about fall, mentioned before. Although one is entitled to the atonement on account of some statements (in the Śāstras), for the sake of removing the sin, still there is not possible the atonement which is the cause of purity befitting the qualification for (performing some sacrificial) Karman on account of the Smṛti —

‘I see no atonement by which that Ātman-killer could be purified’

(Atrismr. 8.16)

— This (is) the sense. Ācārācca — And on account of the rule of conduct; for, gentlemen avoid Nais̥thika etc., who had fallen away, although they have undergone atonement, they do not teach them Brahmanvidyā etc. Therefore, they are not entitled to Brahmanvidyā. ॥ 43 ॥

Of the Yajamāna, on account of the Śruti about the fruit — so (opines) Ātreya ॥ 44 ॥

(Adhikaraṇa 11, Sūtras 44-45)

[495] While considering whether the Upāsana, Udgītha and others resorting to a part of the sacrificial rite, have the sacrificer as the agent or the priests, Ātreya opines—they have the sacrificer as their agent. Whence ? Phalaśruteḥ — on account of the fruit and the Upāsana being seen to have one resort in the Upāsana, Dahara etc., prescribed in the Vedāntas, and here also on account of the fruit of the Udgīthopāsana, of the form of non-obstruction to the fruit of the sacrifice mentioned as having the sacrificer as the resort—This (is) the sense. Not again is there the impossibility of the sacrificer being the agent, on account of his being the resort of the subsidiary thing, like the godohana vessel etc. It is not possible for any one else to take the godohana which is associated with the approach with the Adhvaryu as the agent. But here though the Udgītha has the Udgātṛ as the agent, it is possible for the sacrificer himself to contemplate upon the Udgītha etc., as having the preeminent Rasa. ॥ 44 ॥

This (prima facie view) being reached, it is stated (in reply)—

The priestly act, — so Audulomi ; for that he is indeed bought ॥ 45 ॥

Ārtvijyam — the duty of a priest, the Upāsana (worship) of the Udgītha etc. — thus the preceptor Audulomi opines. Whence ? Tasmai hi — for that purpose the priest is bought — that is to say, for the performance of the sacrifice with the parts, which is the means of the fruit. From the Śāstra mentioning the priest as the agent in respect of the injunctions about the rite—

‘ He chooses the priests, he gives Dakṣiṇā to the priests ’

it is known that the (entire) rite with the parts, the means of the fruit, is to be performed by the priests. The acts, physical and mental, within that have the priest himself as the agent. Nor again, being strong or weak is the restraining factor of that. Although the Upāsana of Udgītha etc., is (conducive to) salvation, still, because it forms a qualification for one entitled to perform a sacrifice, and because the entire sacrifice with its parts has the priest as the agent and because the Vidyā is mentioned in the Śruti as having the same (priest) alone as the agent, because it is useful for the rite the performer of which is the priest — in

'Whatever he does by Vidyā, that alone becomes more powerful' (Chū. 1.1.10)

— these have the priest for their performer. In the case of the worships Dahara etc., the priest as the performer not being mentioned, there is definitely the state of the agent for one who aspires for the fruit, in accordance with the maxim—

'The fruit of the Śāstra belongs to the performer.'

silence also is enjoined like the childlike nature, and learning (scholarship), or it is merely repeated—because the words Mauna and Panditya mean knowledge, the knowledge which is already enjoined — Being disgusted with learning—is repeated in — Then Muni — and no injunctive word is indeed mentioned here in the Sruti — This (prima facie view) being reached, we say (in reply)
— Sahakāryantaravidhiḥ — Tadvataḥ — possessed of Vidyā, Viddhyādivat — Vidhi is that which is enjoined. By the word Vidhi are denoted sacrifice etc., the duties of all Āśramas, and tranquillity, restraint etc. By the word Ādi are to be understood, hearing and meditating. In (the expression) Sahakāryantaravidhi — here also Vidhi is that which is enjoined, another co-helper and Vidhi — the Sahakāryantaravidhi.

This is what is intended to be said—Just as, in (the passage)
beginning with

‘ Him, this one, the Brāhmaṇas desire to know in conformity with the teachings of the Veda, by sacrifice, by gift, by penance indestructible ’
(Br 4.4 22)

etc., the triad — Scholarship (learning), childlike nature, silence—the other co-workers of Vidyā — is enjoined. (The Sūtrakāra) says Pakṣeṇa — because silence is another thing from scholarship. As the word Muni as an alternative is seen as being used, referring to Vyāsa and others habituated to the highest thinking, silence is the third thing with the two — Scholarship and childlike nature. Although in (the expression)

‘Then the ascetic’

(Br. 3.5.1)

here the injunctive termination is not mentioned in the Śruti, still as silence is a new thing not arrived at before, its being associated with an injunction has got to be understood, in (the passage) — Then he would be Muni. And this silence is a thing different from meditating for the sake of establishing the hearing, again and again revolving upon the object of the Upāsanā, having the form of that mental state.

Thus then is the sense of the passage — A Brāhmaṇa possessed of Vidyā, getting disgusted with scholarship and having known Brahman, (the highest) reality, the object of worship, all-pure, all-full—having secured the knowledge got by hearing and meditation — this (is) the sense. And that is effected by the strengthening of the Sattva (quality), caused by devotion to the Lord. As has been said, beginning with—

‘Not, this Ātman, by lectures’

(Kā. 2.23; Mu. 3.2.3)

etc.

‘One should stay as a child’

(Br. 3.5.1)

—The nature of child-hood would be explained immediately below.

‘Getting disgusted with the childlike nature and scholarship, then he would be Mum (ascetic)’

(Br. 3.5.1)

—having taken to in a proper manner the childlike nature and scholarship, one should become habituated to reflecting upon the all-pure, all-full Brahman, for the sake of obtaining the Vidyā of the form of concentration.
Thus by taking to the triad, he secures the Vidyā. This (the Śruti) says—

‘Being disgusted with non-silence and silence, then (he) becomes a Brāhmaṇa’

(Br. 3.5.1)

Amauna — the group of co-workers other than the Mauna. One taking to that and also to silence in the proper manner, would secure the highest Vidyā, to be produced by them alone—this (is) the sense. ‘When asked — Is there any other means than the means mentioned in ‘How can he become a Brāhmaṇa?’

(Br. 3.5.1)

by the (answer)—

‘By whatever he is, by that itself, he is, verily, of this nature’

(Br. 3.5.1)

--by which culminating into silence he is said to be a Brāhmaṇa; by that itself he would be like this — not by any other means whatsoever, this has been repudiated. Therefore, in the case of the learned one, abiding in all the Āśramas, scholarship etc., with silence as the third is enjoined as the other co-workers of the Vidyā, like the duties, sacrifices etc., of his own Āśrama. ॥ 46 ॥

[497] If it be (argued)—If in the case of learned people abiding in all the Āśramas, Vidyā helped by silence as the third, the co-worker with the duties of the various Āśramas, is spoken of as the means of attaining to Brahman; how then is appropriate the reference to staying in the state of a householder as long as one lives, in the Chāndogya beginning with ‘ On returning (from the preceptor's house, after finishing his studies) in the family, in a clean spot ’

(Chā. 8-15-1)

‘ He indeed, living thus, as long as he lives, attains to Brahman-world and does not return ’

(Cīā. 8-15-1)

— Here says (the Sūtrakāra)—

But on account of the existence in all, the inclusion of the householder ॥ 47 ॥

The word Tu turns away the objection Kṛtsnabhāvāt—on account of existence in all, on account of the existence of the Vidyā in all the followers of the Āśramas, it exists even in the case of the householder — and so there is the inclusion of that. ‘ Therefore the inclusion of the householder is for the sake of pointing out the duties of all the Āśramas — this is the intention ॥ 47 ॥ desire for wealth and from desire for the worlds—then wander

Like silence, on account of the instruction in the case of others also ॥ 48 ॥

The instruction about silence preceded by wandering about for food in the case of one freed from all desires, is for the sake of illustrating the duties of all Āśramas. Whence? Because, like the instruction about this kind of silence, there is the instruction about the attainment of Brahman in the case of the followers of other Āśramas also, in (the passage) beginning with

‘The three pillars of Dharma’

(Chā. 2-23-1)

‘One stationed in Brahman goes to immortality’

the childlike nature is mentioned as fit to be taken to by a learned person. Bālyam — the state or act of a child. On account of the state of a child—a particular state of age—being incapable of being taken to, the act alone must be understood here. There the doubt (being raised) — Is the act of a child, behaving at one's sweet will etc., all that to be taken to by the wise one, or only being bereft of hypocrisy etc. ? — (one view is) — Everything has got to be taken to, on account of the absence of any specific statement and the regulating Śāstra passages are contradicted by this specific injunction.

This (prima facie view) being reached, it is stated (in reply) — Anāviṣkurvan — A learned man should carry on, taking to what is the act of a child, of the nature of non-manifestation of its nature. Whence ? Anvayāt — on account of the connection of that alone. In this injunction—

‘ One should stay child-like ’

(Br. 3-5-1)

— in this injunction there is the possibility of connection with that alone, on account of the others being mentioned as opposed to Vidyā in

‘ Not one who does not desist from wicked deeds, not one who is not concentrated, not again one with the mind not composed — but only by Prajñāna one would attain to this one ’

and having salvation as the fruit. There arises the doubt — Is the Vidyā with material prosperity as the fruit, produced immediately after the Karman through the meritorious acts that are the means at its command, or after a lapse of time,—thus no particular rule about it? For, the wise one is born by virtue of the meritorious deeds done before; as has been said by the Lord—

(Gītā 7-16)

—when the means have finished (the work) there is no cause for delay (for the production of the fruit)—so, verily, immediately after. This (prima facie view) being reached, it is said (in reply) — Aihikamaprastutabandhe — Aihika — the Upāsana with material (worldly) prosperity as the fruit. Aprastutapratibandhe — When the obstruction by another powerful Karman has not started (functioning) no interval; when there is the obstruction, at a time later than that — and thus there is no rule. Whence? Taddarśanāt — Because in the Śruti is admitted the obstruction to the fruit of the Karman by another powerful Karman, on account of the mention in the Śruti

‘Whatever one does by Vidyā, by faith, by the Upanisad, that alone (is) more powerful’

(Chā. 1-1-10)

of there being no obstruction to the fruit in the case of the Karman associated with the Udgithavidyā. ॥ 50 ॥

Here ends the Aihikādhikaraṇa (14)

Thus no rule about that having salvation as the fruit, on account of the ascertainment of that state, on account of the ascertainment of that state ॥ 51 ॥

(Adhikaraṇa 15, Sūtra 51)

[500] In the case of the worship with salvation as the fruit, also,

कालानियमः, तस्यापि पूर्ववत्प्रतिबन्धाभावप्रतिबन्धसंप्राप्तिरूपावस्थावधृतेः, अत्रापि तस्य हेतोः समानत्वादित्यर्थः । सर्वेभ्यः कर्मभ्यो मुक्तिफलविधासाधनस्य कर्मणः प्रबलत्वात्प्रतिबन्धासंभव इत्यधिकादाह । तत्रापि ब्रह्मविद्वपचाराणां पूर्वकृतानां प्रबलानां संभवात्प्रतिबन्धसंभव इति परिहारः । द्विरुक्तिरध्यायपरिसमाप्तिं द्योतयति ॥ ५१ ॥

इति श्रीभगवद्भामानुजाचार्यविरचिते शारिङ्गकर्ममार्गशाभाष्ये

there is no rule about time in this very way in regard to the production (of the fruit) by the extremely important Karmans, that are the means for it; because in that case also, there is the ascertainment as before, of the state of the absence of the obstacle and that of being confronted with the obstacle—that is to say, here also, the cause would be the same. There is here an additional doubt — because the Karman which is the means of Vidyā having salvation for its fruit is more powerful than all the Karmans, there is no possibility of any obstacle. The refutation is — there also is the possibility of obstacles on account of the possibility of previous powerful misdeeds done by the Brahman-knowers. The repetition twice points out to the conclusion of the Chapter ॥ 51 ॥

First Quarter of the Fourth Chapter

Repetition on account of the instruction more than once

॥ १ ॥

(Adhikaraṇa 1, Sūtras 1-2)

[501] In the third Adhyāya, Vidyā along with the means was taken for consideration. And now is considered the fruit of the Vidyā, preceded by the scrutiny into the nature of the Vidyā. There (arises) the doubt — Is the apprehension enjoined as being the means for the attainment to Brahman in the Vedānta passages

‘The Brahman-knower secures the Highest’ (Tai. 2.1)

‘Having known him alone, he goes beyond death’ (Śve. 3.8)

‘(He) who knows Brahman, becomes Brahman itself’

(Mu. 3.2.9)

‘When the seer sees the gold-coloured’ (Mu. 3.1.3) etc.,—is the purport of the Śāstra to be gone through once, or is it to be repeated more than once?—What proper? To be gone through only once.

Whence? Because there is no means of proof for understanding repetition more than once, on account of the enjoining of mere apprehension in

‘(He) who knows Brahman, becomes Brahman itself’

(Mu. 3.2.9)

Nor again is it possible to say that as in the case of pounding down etc., where there is the repetition till the effect is produced, because the remedy is (actually) seen, so in the case of apprehension as regards the direct realisation of Brahman.—Apprehension is not seen to be the means ‘यस्तद्देव यस्त वेद स मयेतदुक्तः’

(छा. ४।१।४)

इत्युपक्रमे विदिनोक्तं रैकस्य ज्ञानम्

(for the realisation of Brahman). The sacrificial rites, Jyotiṣṭoma etc., and the apprehension prescribed in the Vedāntas, are of the nature of propitiating the highest Puruṣa, and from the highest Puruṣa (thus) propitiated, there is the acquisition of the human purpose in life known as Dharma, Artha, Kāma and Mokṣa.— this indeed has been propounded in

‘The fruit from this one, on account of the propriety’

(Bra. Sū. III 2-37)

Therefore, like the Jyotiṣṭoma etc., the intention of the Sāstra as actually worded, is (that the Vedana is) to be gone through only once.— This (prima facie view) being reached, we say (in reply) — Āvṛttirasakṛt — the purport of the Sāstra is that the apprehension should surely be gone through more than once. Whence ? Upadeśāt — on account of the instruction by the word Vedana, a synonym for Dhyāna, Upāsana. And its being a synonym of them is apprehended by the use in the passages instructing the Vedana, of Vid (to know), Upās (to worship), Dhyai (to meditate), referring to one and the same thing. To explain the same—

The matter introduced with Upās in ‘One should worship (upāsita) mind as Brahman’

(Chā. 3-18-1)

is concluded by Vid in

‘Who thus knows (Veda)—he shines and scorches, by fame, glory and Brahmanical lustre’

(Chā. 3-18-3)

—Similarly, the knowledge of Raikva mentioned by (the use of the root) Vid in the introductory part in

‘Who knows that, what he knows—he has been told this by me’

(Chā. 4-1-4)

is concluded by (the use of the root) Upās in ‘अनु म एता भगवो देवता ज्ञाधि या देवतामुपास्ये’ (छा ४।२।२)

इत्युपासिनोपसंहियते । तथा

Similarly in (passages) having similar import to that in

‘The Brahman-knower secures the Highest’ (Ta: 2 1)

‘The Ātman verily, my dear, should be seen should be thought of, should be meditated upon’ (Br 2 4 5)

‘There again, he sees, meditating upon that impartite’ (Mu 3 1 8)

etc the Vedana is denoted by Dhyāyati And Dhyāna is meditation and meditation is of the form of a continuity of remembrance not merely remembrance And Upās also has the same sense as that, on account of its use being seen to denote the constant nature of the concentrated mental course So, both having one and the same sense the continuous remembrance repeated more than once is ascertained as being denoted by the words Vedana etc, in (passages)

‘Who knows Brahman here, becomes Brahman itself’ (Mu 3 2 9)

‘Having known the shining one (God), he is freed from all bonds (nooses)’ (Śve 1 8)

etc ॥ 1 ॥

And on account of the Smṛti ॥ 2 ॥

Ljha—Smṛti This purport is also understood from the Smṛti For Vedana, the means of salvation, is described in the Smṛti-works as having the form of continuity of remembrance as in

‘तद्रूपप्रत्यये चेका संततिश्चान्यनिःस्पृहा ।

‘For the apprehension of his form, there is only one continuous (apprehension) not depending upon another. That meditation is produced likewise by the first six factors (Yama, Niyama, etc.).’

(V. P. 6-7-91)

Therefore the Śāstra-import—the Vedana, verily, is to be repeated more than once. ॥ 2 ॥

Here ends the Āvṛttyadhikaraṇa (1)

But they worship (Brahman) as Ātman, and (the Śāstras) make one comprehend (this) ॥ 3 ॥
(Adhikaraṇa 2, Sūtra 3)

[502] This is now being considered—Is Brahman, the object of worship, to be worshipped as being different from the worshipper, or as being the Ātman of the worshipper ? What proper ? As being different. Whence ? Because Brahman is a different entity from the inmost Ātman, the worshipper. — (That Brahman is) a different entity, has been reasoned out in (the Sūtras)

‘But additional, owing to the reference to difference’

(Bra. Sū. II. 1-22)

‘On account of the instruction of something more’

(Bra. Sū. III. 4-8)

‘Not the other, on account of impropriety’

(Bra. Sū. I. 1-14)

etc. And Brahman is to be worshipped as it is. For, if (Brahman) were to be worshipped as it is not, the attainment to Brahman would also be as it should not be, in accordance with the dictum—

‘What will (sacrifice) a man has in this world, so he becomes, having departed from here.’

Therefore, Brahman should be worshipped as being different—

This (prima facie view) being reached, it is stated (in reply)—Ātmeti tu—The word Tu is for emphasis : (Brahman) is to be worshipped as the Ātman alone of the worshipper. The worshipper, the inmost Ātman—just as he himself is the Ātman of his own body, in the same way, the Highest Brahman (is the Ātman) of one's own Ātman—that is to say, one should worship (Brahman) as the Ātman himself. Whence? For thus, indeed the former worshippers (used to) approach (the matter), as in

‘You verily, I am, (O) divine deity, I, verily, you are’
(Varaḥo 234)

(If it is argued)—How could the worshippers approach Brahman as I, which is a different entity from the worshipper?—Here says (the Sutrakāra) Grāhayanti ca—this purport not conflicting, the Śāstras make the worshippers apprehend reason out for them—that (is) the sense (as) in—

Who, abiding in Ātman, (is) different from Ātman whom Ātman knows not whose body (is) Ātman, who controls the Ātman within—he, your Ātman, the inner Controller, immortal’

(Śa Bra 14.16-7.30)

Similarly in

‘(O) gentle one, all these people have (their) root in Sat, (their) abode in Sat, stability in Sat’ (Chā 6.8.6)

‘All this has this as the Ātman’ (Chā 6.8.7)

And in (the passage),

‘All this verily, (is) Brahman, where it is originated, is merged and is sustained’ (Chā 3.14.1)

—on account of everything, sentient and non-sentient entities, being produced from it, merging into it, breathing forth into it, being controlled by it, and being his body ; therefore this (is) the Ātman of all. Therefore, he is your Ātman. Therefore, just as, because the inmost Ātman is the Ātman in respect of his own body, there is the continued cognition—I am a god,—I am a man,—in the same way, because the Paramātmān is the Ātman even of the inmost Ātman, the continued cognition—I (am)—is quite proper in him also. This has been set forth by the Sāstra-passages. Because all cognitions are centred in Brahman alone, those admitting all words to be pointing out to Brahman alone, spoke by mutual identification—as

‘You, verily, I am, (O) divine deity, I, verily, you are,
(O) divine deity,’

(Varāho. 2:34)

And again thus, in (the passages)—

‘Now, (he) who worships another deity as—that (is) different (from) me, I am different—he knows not’ (Br. 1:4:10)

This one, verily, (is) not complete.. one should worship as Ātman alone’ the repudiation of the non-continued cognition of the nature of Ātman, and the enjoining of the cognition as being different, in ‘Having thought of the Ātman separately as the Impeller’

(Śve. 1:6)

are not conflicting. By the continued cognition of being one’s own Ātman as I, the repudiation of continued cognition about something different has been secured; like the continued cognition of Ātman being over and above one’s body, on account of the continued cognition of the Paramātmān being over and and on account of Brahman being the Ātman of the worshipper, (it is as good as stated that) one should worship as Ātman alone — it is stated in reply— Na pratīke — In the case of the symbol, cognition as Ātman should not be gone through. I say (says the objector)—Here also Brahman alone is the object of worship; when there is the possibility of Brahman being the object of worship, the mind etc., that are non-sentient with meagre power, as being the resorts of the object of worship, cannot be justified. Therefore Brahman alone is to be worshipped with mind etc., superimposed upon it—There says (the Sūtrakāra)

Superimposition of Brahman, on account of pre-eminence

॥ 5 ॥

The superimposition of Brahman alone upon mind etc., (is) proper,—not the superimposition of mind etc., upon Brahman, because Brahman has pre-eminence over mind etc., and because they (mind etc.,) are the opposite of that. Indeed, the superimposition of a servant upon the superior king would create trouble, but the superimposition of the king upon the servant (is) conducive to prosperity. ॥ 5 ॥

[505] It has been stated that knowledge prescribed in the Vedānta-Sāstras as the means of salvation denoted by the words—Dhyāna, Upāsana, etc., being repeated more than once is of the form of continuous remembrance.
While going through that, there being no specific mention whether one should do this, sitting (as a rule), or one (should be) sitting, sleeping, standing, moving,—one should carry on indiscriminately—This (prima facie view) being reached, it is said (in reply)—Āsīnah—one should carry on with the worship, sitting. Whence? Sambhavāt—for, there is the possibility of the concentration of the mind in the case of one sitting only; because, standing and moving stand in need of some effort, and there is the possibility of sleep while lying down. In order to avoid the effort for supporting the lower half of the body, one should carry on (the worship) while sitting without any support. ॥ 7 ॥

. In the case of worship, it is essential that there should be perfect concentration of the mind, as the worship is of the nature of meditation, as in

‘ He should be meditated upon ’

—for, it is said that Dhyāna is meditation upon one thing, not obstructed by other heterogenous apprehensions. ॥ 8 ॥

And taking into account the unshakable state ॥ 9 ॥

And taking into account the state of being unshakable, there is seen the use of Dhyāna, speech, as referring to the Earth, mid-region etc., in

On its acquisition, non-contact and destruction of future and past sins, on account of the reference to that ॥ 13 ॥

(Adhikaraṇa 7, Sūtra 13)

[507] Having thus laid under scrutiny the nature of Vidyā, (the Sūtrakāra) begins to consider the fruit of the Vidyā. On the acquisition of the knowledge of Brahman, are mentioned in the Sṛuti, the non-contact and destruction (respectively) of the future and past sins in the case of a person.
In (the passages)—

'That, as the waters on a lotus-leaf do not stick (to it), thus, the sinful deed sticks not in the case of one who knows thus'
(Chā. 4-14-3)

'Only his Ātman, the knower of the place, having known him, is not contaminated by the sinful Karma'
(Br. 4-4-23)

—there is the non-contact with the later sin In (the passages)—

'That, as the cotton on the brick cast into the fire is damaged, thus indeed in his case, are all sins damaged'
(Chā 5 24-3)

'And his deeds are destroyed, when is seen that, high and low'
(Mu. 2-2-8)

—there is the destruction of the past sin.

—The doubt arises whether these, non-contact and destruction, which, are the fruit of the Vidyā are proper or not ? What (is) reasonable ? They are not proper. Whence ? On account of the conflict with the Śāstra ‘ Karman, unless it is enjoyed, cannot be destroyed even in hundreds of crores of aeons ’

(Brahnavai. 26-70)

etc. The reference to the non-contact and destruction, for the matter of that, which is found in the concluding portion of the passage enjoining Vidyā, the means of salvation, can somehow be accounted for, also by taking that to be for the praise of Vidyā. Nor again is Vidyā enjoined as an atonement for past and future sins, so that the destruction of the sin could have been spoken of as due to the atonement. For, Vidyā is enjoined as a means of the acquisition of Brahman, in

‘ The Brahman-knower secures the Highest ’

(Tai. 2.1)

‘ Who knows Brahman, (he) becomes Brahman itself. ’

(Mu. 3.2.9)

Therefore, this reference to non-contact and destruction of the sin is just a glorificatory statement in praise of Vidyā —

—This (prima facie view) being reached, it is stated (in reply) —
Tadadhigame — On the acquisition of the Vidyā in the case of a person, on account of the greatness of Vidyā, the non-contact and the destruction of the future and past sins, are proper. Whence ? For such indeed is known to be the greatness of Vidyā, on account of the reference in

‘ To one who knows thus, the sinful deed sticks not ’

(Chā. 4.14.3)

‘ Thus indeed all his sins are damaged ’

(Chā. 5.2.4.3)

etc. Not is there any contradiction with this reference, in because the subject-matter is different. For, that indeed refers to the firmness of the strength to produce the fruit in the case of the Karmans. But this propounds in the case of Vidyā that is produced, the power to destroy the capacity of producing the fruit of sins done before, and also the power to put forth obstacles in the production of the capacity to produce fruit in the case of sins that are yet to come into being — and so, the subject-matter in the case of the two is different. Just as even in the case of the two means of proof, referring to the power of (producing) heat and the warding off of it (respectively), in the case of fire and water, there is the authoritative nature, on account of the difference of the subject-matter; so here also, thus there is no contradiction. Effecting non-contact with the sin is the causing obstruction to the production of the power, the cause of impediment to the Vāsana associated with unfitness for any sacrificial rite; for, the sins done produce in a person unfitness for a sacrificial act, a taste for doing other similar Karman, and obstruction. Bringing about destruction in the case of the sin, is the effecting of destruction of that power produced. The power also is the non-gratification itself of the highest Puruṣa. And thus Vidyā being itself unsurpassingly dear to the knower owing to its being exceedingly dear to the object of knowledge, being of the form of the worship of the highest Puruṣa who is to be known, destroys non-gratification of the highest Puruṣa, caused by the collection of sins done in the past. And that same Vidyā also obstructs the production of non-gratification of the highest Puruṣa, caused by sin that is to come into being in times later than its own production. So, this statement about non-contact should be regarded as confined to something what is done through mistake, because by the Sāstric passages

Thus, non-contact with other also, but at the fall ॥ 14 ॥

(Adhikaraṇa 8, Sūtra 14)

[508] The non-contact and destruction of future and past sins by the Vidyā have been stated. In accordance with the aforesaid dictum, there would be the non-contact and destruction, itarasya — of the other — of merit also, by the Vidyā on account of being contrary to the fruit of Vidyā being common and on account of the reference. And there is, indeed, a reference pointing out to both good deeds and evil deeds, in

‘ All sins turn away from him ’

(Chā. 8.4.1)

and also in

‘ Shakes off his good deeds and evil deeds ’. (Kau 1.4)

A good deed also is referred to as sin, because that produces an undesirable fruit for one desirous of salvation. This is an extension of the application (of the rule) to turn away the doubt that a good deed might not be opposed by the Vidyā, because it is prescribed in the Sāstra and its fruit is seen to be desirable in the case of some. I say (says the objector) — Even in the case of the wise one (Brahman-knower) the fruits, the shower of rain, food, etc., for the purpose of completing the Upāsana (worship) with its full procedure are, to be sure, desirable. How can their destruction due to opposition be spoken of ?

Thereupon, the doubt being there—Is there destruction without any distinction of good and evil deeds, existing in the past, or, only of those which have not yet started to function ? Because in ‘ All sins are damaged ’

(Chā. 5-24-3)

the fruit of the Vidyā is not mentioned in a specific way, and the existence of the body continuing in the time posterior to the production of Vidyā, being accounted for even on the strength of the impressions, as in the case of the

has been stated non-contact even with a good deed, on account of the power of Vidyā. In the case also of Fire-sacrifice etc., and obligatory and occasional duties of one's own Āśrama, being on par with good deeds, if there is non-contact with their fruit, there would be the non-performance of them against one's will—This (prima facie view) being reached, it is said (in reply)—Agnihotrādi tu—The word Tu distinguishes the matter from other good deeds. The Āśrama-duties—Agnihotra and others have indeed to be performed, on account of the impossibility of non-contact with the fruit; and that impossibility is for the sake of the functions performed by them. For, the performance of Agnihotra etc., in the case of the wise one, is for the sake of the effect viz Vidyā itself. How is this known? Taddarśanāt—On account of that being seen; for, it is seen that Agnihotra and others are the means of Vidyā in

And because Vidyā is to be produced day after day with its content increased through practice up to death, the Āśrama-duties also have got to be performed daily for its production; otherwise, on the cessation of the Āśrama-Karmans, there would be no production itself of Vidyā in the case of one of an impure mind, ॥ 16 ॥

If the good deeds like Āgñihotra etc., are for the production of Vidyā, and if the good deed prior to the production of the Vidyā perishes by being experienced as stated in ‘Having stayed till the fall (of the body)’ (Chā. 5.10.5)

‘Having gone to the end of Karman’ (Br. 4.4.6) and the fruit of the Karman that has started functioning, being enjoyed, and has some remainder, — what then is the province of the statement—The friends, the good deeds?

Therefore another also; for, in the case of some, of both. ॥ 17 ॥

Therefore, some other good deed is indeed possible, other than the good deeds Āgñihotra etc., that are meant for the production of the Vidyā, endless, having the fruit obstructed by the powerful Karman, in respect of both the good deeds, past as well as future on account of the acquisition of the Vidyā. Referring to that is this statement accepted by the followers of some recensions—His sons inherit his heritage (his) friends (his) good deed—The mention in the Śruti about the non-contact and destruction by Vidyā, refers to that ॥ 17 ॥

(The Sūtrakāra) reminds one of what has been stated before viz. the possibility of the obstacle to the fruit of Karman although gone through—

By the statement about the fruit, non-obstruction of the fruit of the sacrifice in the case of the Udgitha-Vidyā in ‘Whatever one does by Vidyā, that alone (is) more power-is indeed suggested obstruction to the fruit of Karman although gone through.

Therefore, the statement in the Śātyāyana — (His) friends, the good deeds attains to (Brahman); if they produce fruit fit to be enjoyed in more than one body, he attains (to Brahman) at the end of that, because both (good and bad) Karmans that have started giving their fruit are fit to be destroyed by enjoyment alone. In

‘For him there is delay only so long as he is not freed’

(Chā. 6.14.2)

also, freedom from both those Karmans is spoken of as by enjoyment, as there is no fixed limit mentioned in the Śruti for the end of the body.
Therefore, in this way, the Karman of the nature of merit and demerit, which is gone through prior to the Brahmanvidyā, whose fruit is not yet enjoyed, which has not yet started giving its fruit, which is heaped up from times immemorial, and endless, perishes on account of the greatness of Vidyā.
And (the Karman) performed in times posterior to the production of Vidyā does not stick on. There, the friends of the wise one take everything that is meritorious, and the haters the sin — this (is) flawless ॥ 39 ॥

SECOND QUARTER OF THE FOURTH CHAPTER

Vāk in the mind, on account of being seen and on account of the (Vedic) word ॥ १ ॥

(Adhikarana 1, Sūtras 1-2)

[512] Now, (the Śūtrakāra) starts discussing the mode of departure of the wise one. First, for the matter of that, is considered the going out. There this is mentioned in the Śruti—

‘Of this Purusa, (O) genile one, while departing, the Vāk (speech) merges into the mind, the mind into Prāṇa, Prāṇa into the Tejas, and the Tejas into the highest Deity.’ (Chā. 6.8.6)

Here, the Śruti, Vānmanasi saṃpadyate, mentioning the merging of speech into the mind—Does it refer only to the function of the Vāk or to the Vāk?
—this being the doubt, it would be proper that it refers to the function only.
Whence? Because the mind is not the material cause of Vāk, it is impossible for the nature of Vāk to merge into it. The Śruti passage referring to the merging of the function can somehow or other be accounted for, because the functions of Vāk and others are dependent upon the mind—This (prima-facie view) being reached, it is stated (in reply)—Vānmanasi —The nature alone of Vāk merges into the mind. Whence? Taddarśanāt —on account of that being seen. For, it is seen that there is the functioning of the mind even when the sense-organ of speech has ceased (functioning).
If (it be argued) that it can be accounted for even by the merging of only the functioning—there (the Śūtrakāra) says—Śabdācca—for, (the Vedic) expression

‘Vāk merges into the mind’

(Chā. 6-8-6)

refers to the merging of the nature itself of Vāk and not to the merging merely of the functioning. Not, indeed, at that time when the functioning has ceased, is the sense-organ of speech, apprehended by another means of proof, so that it could be said that only the functioning is merged.

As to what has been said — because the mind is not the constituent cause of Vāk, the merging of Vāk into the mind is not reasonable — that is to be refuted thus — on account of the passage

‘Vāk merges into the mind’

(Chā. 6-8-6)

meaning that Vāk is associated with the mind, but not dissolved into it ॥ 1 ॥

For this very reason, all, after (Vāk) ॥ 2 ॥

Because the Sampatti (merging) of Vāk is but merely the connection with the mind, but not its dissolution—for this very reason, the Śruti-passage mentioning merging in the mind of all the sense-organs after the Vāk, becomes reasonable —

‘Therefore, with lustre all laid low, with the sense-organs, merging into the mind — rebirth,’

(Pra. 3-9)

(Chā. 6·8·6)

— But a further doubt (arises) on account of the passage

‘ Constituted of food, indeed, gentle one, the mind ’

(Chā. 6·5·4)

the mind is apprehended to have food as its material cause. And on account of (the passage)

‘ Those produced food ’

(Chā. 6·2·4)

is established that food is constituted of waters. On account of (the passage)

‘ Prāṇa is constituted of waters ’

(Chā. 6·5·4)

is also apprehended that Prāṇa has waters as the material cause. Therefore in (the passage) —

‘ The mind merges into Prāṇa ’

(Chā. 6·8·6)

having referred to the waters which are the constituent cause of Prāṇa, by the word Prāṇa, when the merging of the mind in them is set forth, the expression, merging, becomes appropriate because in that case there would be the merging indirectly in its own cause — And the refutation (of the above) would be — In (the passage)

‘ Constituted of food, indeed, gentle one, (is) the mind ; constituted of the waters, Prāṇa ’

(Chā. 6·5·4)

— the source of the mind and Prāṇa (respectively) is mentioned as the food and waters, not as their being the constituent causes; because the mind is constituted of Āhmkāra, and Prāṇa is a modification of Ākāśa, and there would be the metaphorical reference to waters by the word Prāṇa ॥ 3 ॥

[514] Just as in conformity with the passage

‘ Vāk merges into the mind, the mind into Prāṇa ’

(Chā. 6-8-6)

there is the merging of the mind and Prāṇa themselves in Vāk and the mind (respectively); similarly on account of the passage

‘ The Prāṇa in the Tejas ’

(Chā. 6-8-6)

Prāṇa is merged into the Tejas itself — This (prima-facie view) being reached, it is said—Sah, adhyakṣe — He, Prāṇa, in the President (master) of the sense-organs, in the, Jīva, is merged. Whence? Tadupagamādibhyaḥ — The going of the Prāṇa unto the Jīva is, for the matter of that, mentioned in the Śruti —

‘ In this very manner, unto this Ātman, all Prāṇas move at the time of death. ’

(Br. 4-3-38)

Similarly, is mentioned in the Śruti

‘ Him departing, Prāṇa departs after ’

(Br. 4-4-2)

the departure of the Prāṇa along with the Jīva. And in the Śruti is mentioned his (Prāṇa's) stability along with the Jīva in

‘ On whose going out, shall I be going out? Who being stabilised, shall I be stabilised? ’

[515] In

the merging of the Prāṇa connected with the Jīva, in the Tejas is mentioned.—The doubt being there—Is that merging in merely the Tejas, or in all the elements taken together?—and (the prima facie view) being reached—In the Tejas, on account of the mention of only the Tejas in the Śruti—It is stated (in reply)—Bhūteṣu—is merged into the elements. Whence? Tacchruteh—on account of the Śruti (passage)

Whence ? Because there is the absence of going out, in the case of the wise one, on account of the statement about immortality here itself (for him). The statement about the immortality of the wise one, is indeed here mentioned in the Śruti,

‘ When all the desires that are clinging to his heart are let off, then mortal becomes immortal, — here he attains to Brahman ’

(Kā. 6-14; Br. 4-4-7)

(This prima facie view) being reached, it is stated (in reply) — Samānā cā sṛtyupakramāt — In the case of the wise one also, the going out is common up to the starting movement. Ā sṛtyupakramāt — up to the starting of the movement, that is to say, prior to the entrance into the Nādis. For, even in the case of the wise one, the movement by going out by a particular Nādi is mentioned in the Śruti (passage) —

‘ Hundred and one are the Nādis of the heart, — of these one extends on to the head; going out above by that he goes to immortality; others are for the going out in various ways ’

(Kā. 6-16; Chā. 8-6-6)

— Thus on account of the mention in the Śruti of the movement by a particular Nādi, the going out in the case of the wise one is unavoidable. And that (going out) is common on account of the absence of any specific mention in the Śruti, prior to the entrance into the Nādi. And there is a specific mention in the Śruti, in the state of entrance into it, in ‘ That being lighted, this Ātman departs, either from the eye, or from the head, or from the other parts of the body ’

on account of this Śruti having the same sense as (that of)

‘ And hundred and one of the heart ’ (Kā. 6-16; Chā. 8-6-6)

— the going out from the head refers to the wise one, and the other (alternative) refers to the non-wise.

As to what has been said — immortality here itself is spoken of in the case of the wise one, — it is stated — Amṛtatvam cānuposya — The word Ca is for emphasis Anuposya — even without burning the connection with the body, sense-organs etc., what immortality of the nature of the non-contact and destruction of the posterior and prior sins, is secured, that is referred to by Śruti (passages like)

‘ When all are let off ’

(Kā. 6-14 ; Br. 4 4-7)

etc., — this (is) the sense. And (the passage)

‘ Here he attains to Brahman ’ refers to the realisation of Brahman which takes place at the time of the worship — this (is) the idea ॥ 7 ॥

That up to the merging on account of the mention of the Samsāra (worldly existence) ॥ 8 ॥

[517] And necessarily it should be known that immortality belongs to one whose connection with the body is not (as yet) burnt away. Whence ? Āpīteḥ samsāravypadesāt — Āpīteḥ — merging, attainment to Brahman. And it would be stated that (Brahmaprāpti) can be had after reaching specific regions by the Arcirādimārga. Ā — Upto the attainment of that state, Samsāra having the characteristic of the connection with the body is indeed referred to in

‘ For him there is delay only so long as he is not freed ;
then he gets merged ’

(Chā. 6-14-2)

and also in

‘अथ इयं रोमाणि विधूय पापं चन्द्र इव राहोर्मुखात्प्रमुच्य भूत्वा शरीरमकृतं

॥ ८ ॥

The subtle, on account of the means of proof and that being found thus ॥ ९ ॥

And for this reason the bondage even of the wise one is not here burnt away, because (his) subtle body persists. Whence is this known? Pramānatastathopalabdheh — On account of the means of proof and that being found thus — for, it is found in the case of the wise one going by the Devayāna path, in

‘One should speak to him, one should speak the truth’

(Kau. 1.6)

there is the existence of the body on account of the statement of the conversation with the Moon. Hence, the subtle body persists and hence, the bondage is not burnt away. ॥ ९ ॥

Therefore, not by the uprooting ॥ १० ॥

Therefore, the statement in

‘When all the desires that are clinging to his heart are let off, then mortal becomes immortal, here he attains to Brahman’

(Kā. 6.14, Br. 4.4.7)

does not speak of immortality by the uprooting of the bondage. ॥ १० ॥

On account of this subtle body being appropriately there in some cases, the warmth prior to death, of the wise one on the point of death is found in some cases in the gross body. Not again does this warmth belong to the gross body alone, because it is not found elsewhere. And therefore, it is known that the occasional apprehension of the warmth is dependent upon the departure of the subtle body in the case of the wise one. Therefore, it is well said that in the case of the wise one also, the going out is common up to the beginning of the movement ॥ 11 ॥

Once again having raised the doubt that the going out in the case of the wise one is not possible — that is being refuted —

If it be objected on account of the denial, (the answer is)—
No, from the embodied one, in the case of some, clearly stated ॥ 12 ॥

[518] What has been said that the going out is common even in the case of the wise one, — that is not possible, on account of the repudiation of the going out in the case of the wise one. To explain the same —

Having mentioned the mode of the going out in the case of the non-wise, in (the passage) —

‘Now the one not longing for, — who, desire-less, free from desires, with desires fulfilled, longing for Ātman — his Prānas do not go out being Brahman alone, he goes unto Brahman’ (Br 4 4 6)

— the going out in the case of the wise one, is denied. Similarly, even in the Ārtabhāga-question before is to be seen the denial of the going out in the case of the wise one — Having referred to the wise one, in (the passage)

(Br. 4 4 6)

the embodied one alone is referred to, who is the matter in hand in ‘Now, one who does not long for’

(Br 4 4 6)

and not the body not mentioned in the Sruti

If it be objected that the embodied one is referred to as having connection with the vital airs by the genitive Tasya, not as something from which there is the going out, Apādāna for the going out refers to the body alone — (We reply) — No, because when there is the expectancy for the Apādāna, Ātman alone mentioned as being nearer than the body not mentioned in the Sruti, has got to be apprehended even as being the Apādāna. And further, the vital airs being too well-known as verily being connected with the Jiva, there is no purpose in mentioning that connection—and so it is ascertained that there is the specific reference to the Apādāna by the genitive denoting only the connection in general, as in — He hears from the actor. And there should be no debate on this point. It is clearly stated in the Vedic text of some — the Mādhyandinas — that the embodied Jiva alone is the Apādāna in

‘Who, bereft of desires, free from desires, with desires fulfilled, with desire for Ātman—from him depart not the Prāṇas’

(Śa. Brā 14-7-2 8)

If it be argued — there being no possibility of the going out of the vital airs from the embodied one (Jiva), the repudiation of the same is not proper, — (we reply) — No. Because by the mention of the merging into Brahman at the time of separation from the body in the case of the wise one, in

‘For him there is delay only so long’

there would arise the separation from the embodied (Jīva) of the wise one, even in the case of the Prāṇas at that time. And thence there would not be the merging into Brahman by taking to the Devayāna path; so by — His vital airs depart not — is stated that prior to the attainment to Brahman by the Devayāna path, the Prāṇas are not separated in the case of the wise one.

As to the Ārtabhāga-question also, if it pertains to the wise one this same is the refutation; but that refers to the non-wise. For, there in the question and the answer is not seen any reference to the contingency of Brahma-vidyā. For, there are answered, preceded by queries, these following topics— the nature of the sense-organs and the objects of the senses, having the form of Graha and Atigraha, the waters being the food of fire, the non-abandonment of the Prāṇas by the dying Jīva, the persisting of fame denoted by (the word) Nāma in the case of the dead one, and the attainment of the course in conformity with merit and demerit. There in

‘He again conquers death’

(Br. 3.2.10)

it has been stated that victory over fire itself is victory over death, owing to the knowledge of waters being the food of Agni. So, here is no reference to the wise one. In the case of the non-wise, however, the statement about the Prāṇas not going out, propounds that the vital airs do not leave like the gross body, but on the other hand, go away clinging to the Jīva like the subtle elements and so, it is unobjectionable. ॥ 12 ॥

And it is stated in the Smṛtis ॥ 13 ॥

And it is mentioned in the Smṛtis that there is the going out by the Nāḍ, in the head, in the case of the wise one —

‘ ऊर्ध्वमेकः स्थितस्तेषां यो भित्त्वा सूर्यमण्डलम् ।

(Adhikarana 6, Sūtra 14)

[519] It has been stated that the inmost Ātman, at the time of the going out, along with the group of the sense-organs, the Prānas, the Master of the sense-organs merges into the subtle elements, Tejas etc. . And that this merging does not take place in the case of the wise one,—this has been refuted after having raised a doubt to that effect. (Now) the doubt being there — whether those subtle elements again clinging to the Jiva, do go for their own purpose in conformity with their Karman and their knowledge, or do they merge into the Paramātman—(The prima facie view) being reached viz. — on account of the absence of any effect in the form of enjoyment of happiness and misery in the interval of merging into the Paramātman, they go in conformity with the enjoyment thereof according to their Karman and according to their knowledge—it is stated (in reply) — Tāni pare — Those are merged into the Highest Ātman. Whence ? Tathā hyāha — For to the same effect says the Śruti

‘ The Tejas in the highest Deity ’

(Chā. 6-8-6)

That is to say, — what the Śruti says in conformity with that, that effect has to be postulated. Just as in the case of deep sleep and world-dissolution there [520] This merging into the Paramātman of that kind — Is it of the nature of assuming the state of the cause like the ordinary dissolution, or is it of the form of non-distinction as in the case of the Vāk merging into the mind etc. ? — In considering this, there being reached (the prima facie view) —

It is of the form of the state of the cause, because the Paramātman is the source of all — it is said (in reply) — Avibhāgaḥ — that is to say, not being distinct, the contact not deserving to be designated as separate. Whence ?
Vacanāt — because there is its connection with the expression Sāmpadyate of the thing connected, on account of its denotation of a particular contact, and because there is no purpose in assuming the nature of the cause at the time of the going out, and because there is the absence of a statement about the creation of the Unmanifest etc. ॥ 15 ॥

(Adhikarana 8, Sūtra 16)

[521] In this manner, has been stated the mode of going out having the same form in the case of the wise and the non-wise up to the beginning of the movement Now is stated the speciality in the case of the wise
There it is stated in the Sruti —

‘ Hundred and one (are) the Nādis of the heart, out of th in one goes on further to the head, going up by it, he goes to immortality, others are (useful) for getting out in various ways ’

(Kā 8 16, Chā 8 6 6)

There is a doubt whether the restriction is appropriate or not — there is the going out of the wise one by this Nādi existing in the head alone, the one more than the hundred Nādis, and the going out of the non-wise only by the others — What proper ? Restriction is not proper Whence ? Because, it is difficult to discriminate in the case of the Nādis as they are many and extremely subtle, so, it is impossible for a person to take to them (The passage)

‘ Going up by it, he goes to immortality, others are (useful) for getting out in various ways ’

(Kā 8 16 Chā 8 6 6)

repeats the going out at will, and so it (is) proper — (This prima facie view)

Satādhikayā — The wise one goes out by the head-Nāḍi alone, the one over hundred. And for the wise one, there is no question of it being difficult to discriminate. For, the wise one, on account of the power of the Vidyā which is exceedingly covetable, which is the worship of the highest Puruṣa, and on account of his association with the remembrance of the exceedingly covetable course of the Ātman, that is subsidiary to the Vidyā, becomes favoured by the highest Puruṣa residing in the heart, pleased, and then Tadokas—the place of that Jīva, the heart is Agrajvalana—that in which there is the burning, the lighting up at the top, this is the Agrajvalana. Through the favour of the highest Puruṣa, with the door lighted up, the wise one knows that Nāḍi and so, the movement of the wise one by that is appropriate ॥ 16 ॥

Here ends the Tadokodhikarana (8)

Following the rays ॥ 17 ॥

(Adhikarana 9, Sūtra 17)

[522] In the case of the wise one, although gone out by the head-Nāḍi, the hundred and one, from the heart, is mentioned in the Sruti, the course to the Sun orb following the rays of the Sun—

‘Now where he goes out from this body, then by these very rays he ascends up’

(Chā. 8.6.5)

There, while considering whether the rule about this course, viz. only by following the rays, is possible or not—(one view would be) no rule on account of the impossibility of following the rays in the case of the wise one who is dead at night. As to the statement (in the Sruti), that refers to what is an alternative at hand,—(This prima facie view) being reached, it is stated (in reply)—Rāśmyanusāri—The wise one goes up indeed, following the rays (of the Sun) alone. Whence? On account of the emphatic statement in

‘By these very rays’

(Cha. 8-6-5)

If the matter were to admit of any alternative, the use of Eva would be meaningless.

As to what has been stated that in the case of one dead at night, the movement by following the rays (of the Sun) is not possible as the rays are impossible (at that time)—(We reply) Not so. Even at night is possible the movement along with the Sun's rays. For, in the summer season is noticed even at night the existence of the rays by the experience of heat. In winter etc., on the other hand, there is the non-experience of heat, as on a rainy day, on account of its being overpowered by snow. And it is mentioned in the Śruti that there is the connection always between the Nādis and the rays—

‘It is thus—as a royal road stretched far off, goes to both the villages, this one, and that one; in the same way these Sun's rays go to both the worlds, this one and that one; they spread out from this Sun; they mixed up with these Nādis spread out from these Nādis; they get mixed up in the yonder Āditya.’ (Chā. 8-6-2)

Therefore, because the rays exist even at night, in the case of the wise although dead during the night there does take place the attainment to Brahman by following the rays ॥ 17 ॥

Here ends the Rāśmyanūsārādhikaraṇa (9)

If it be objected—Not during night, (the reply is) —No, because the connection persists as long as the body; and the Śruti points out (the same) ॥ 18 ॥

(Adhikaraṇa 10, Sūtra 18)

[523] इदमिदानीं चिन्त्यते—विदुषो निशि मृतस्य ब्रह्मप्राप्तिरस्ति न वेति । यद्यपि निशायां सूर्यरश्मिसंभवाद्रश्म्यनुसारेण गतिनिशायामपि संभवति, तथापि निशामरणस्य शास्त्रेण गर्हितत्वात्परमपुरुषार्थलक्षणा ब्रह्मप्राप्तिनिशामृतस्य न संभवति । शास्त्रेण दिवामरणं प्रशस्तं विपरीतं निशामरणम्

‘ तस्य तावदेव विरं पापन्न विमोक्षयेज्य संपत्त्ये ’

(छा. ६।१।४।२)

[523] Now is being considered — Is there the attainment to Brahman in the case of the wise one dead at night or not ? Although on account of the existence of the Sun's rays at night, movement by following the rays is possible even at night time, still as dying at night is censured in the Śāstras, the attainment to Brahman, which is of the nature of the highest purpose in life, is not possible in the case of one dead at night. In the Śāstras death by day is acclaimed and death by night, the opposite of that.—

‘ Day and the Bright-half, and verily, the northern Solstice,—these are acclaimed for impending death, opposite to this is censured. ’

Acclamation and otherwise in the case of death by day and death by night could be there on account of that being the cause of an excellent or a base position. So, because dying by night is the cause of the base state, it is not the cause of attainment to Brahman—If (it is argued) thus—(we say)—No, because the connection with the Karman in the case of the wise one, continues as long as the body is there.

This is what is intended to be said — Because the Karmans which are the cause of a downward course and whose effects have not yet started functioning are destroyed by the connection with Vidyā itself, and because the future ones cannot have any connection with that, and because Karman that has started functioning lasts so long as the last body is there, the attainment to Brahman by the wise one though dead at night is definitely established on account of the absence of the cause for bondage. And the Śruti indicates this—

‘ For him, there is delay only till he is not freed (from the body), then he gets merged ’

(Adhikarana 11, Sūtras 19-20)

[524] The cause for the attainment to Brahman in the case of the wise one although dead at night, which has been stated—due to that same cause is established the attainment to Brahman, of one who is dead even at the period of the southern Solstice. But there is this additional doubt—Because in

‘Who dies during the southern Solstice, having attained to the greatness of the fathers (Manes) becomes identical with the Moon’ (Ma. Na. 25 1)

it is mentioned by the Sruti that one dying during the Dakṣiṇāyana goes to the Moon and because there is the mention in the Sruti of returning again in the case of those who had gone to the Moon, in

‘When that turns away’ (Br. 6 2 15)

‘Then, they return again by this very path’ (Chā. 5 10 5) and because waiting for the Uttarāyana is seen in the case of Bṛhasma and others who were firmly devoted to Brahman, the attainment to Brahman of one dead during the Dakṣiṇāyana is not possible—And the refutation of that is—There is the returning in the case of the non-wise ones alone who have reached the Moon by the Pitryāna path, but in the case of the wise one, although he has reached the Moon, reaching the Moon by him who has died during the Dakṣiṇāyana and is desirous of going over to Brahman, is just for the sake of rest, on account of the remaining part of the passage

‘He, therefore, attains to greatness of Brahman’.

(Ma. Na. 24-2, 25-1)

Not here is stated in the Smṛti any acceptance of any specific time for death in respect of the dying; but, on the other hand, respecting the Yogins, expert in Yoga, Smārte—treated in the Smṛtis, to be remembered, these courses—the Devayāna and the Pitṛyāṇa in order that they may be remembered every day as a part of the Yoga (practice). To the same effect is the winding up—

‘No Yogin is at all bewildered, knowing these (two) paths, (O) Son of Pṛthā Therefore, at all times, be you addicted to Yoga, (O) Arjuna.’

(Gītā 8:27)

—By (the expressions in)

‘Fire, Flame’

(Gītā 8:24)

‘Smoke, Night’

(Gītā 8:25)

the Devayāna and the Pitṛyāṇa are recognised. And the word Kāla (time) in the introductory passage

‘At what time, however’

(Gītā 8:23)

refers to the guide, the supervising Deity of time, on account of the impossibility of Agni etc., being time. Therefore, in

‘They go to the Arcas’

(Br. 6:2:15)

the remembrance of the prescribed Devayāna is enjoined on those devoted to Vidyā; and no specific time for death in respect of the dying. ॥ 20 ॥

By the Arcirādi (path) on account of that being well-known ॥ 1 ॥

(Adhukarana 1, Sūtra 1)

[525] In the case of the wise one gone out by a specific Nādi, has been mentioned the beginning of the movement through the favour of the one (highest Purusa) in the heart . Now is being decided the path by which he goes . There various details about the paths are mentioned in the Sṛuti—in the Chāndogya, for the matter of that, beginning with

' As waters stick not to the lotus-leaf, similarly, the sinful deed sticks not to one who knows thus ' (Chā 6 14-3)

—after having taught the Brahma-vidyā, it is stated

' Now here indeed whether they perform funeral obsequies for him or not, they proceed on to Arcis itself, from Arcis to Day, from Day to the waxing Fortnight, from the waxing Fortnight to the six Months when (the Sun goes) to the north, from the Months to the Year, from the Year to the Sun from the Sun to the Moon from the Moon to the Lightning—then a non-human Person,—he takes those to Brahman—thus (is) the path of the Gods, the path of Brahman—those who proceed by this (path) return not to this human whirlpool, return not ' (Chā 4 15 5-6)

Likewise, here itself in the eighth Prapāthaka,

' He ascends up by these very rays '

(Chā 8 6 5)

— But the Kauṣītakins read the Devayāna path differently —

‘He having reached this Devayāna path comes to the Agniloka, he to the Vāyuloka, he to the Varuṇaloka, he to the Ādityaloka, he to the Indraloka, he to the Prajāpatiloka, he to the Brahmaloka’ (Kau 1.3)

— Likewise in the Bṛhadāranyaka

‘Those who know this thus, and who truly worship Śraddhā in the forest, they proceed on to the Arcis; from Arcis, to Day; from Day to the waxing Fortnight; from the waxing Fortnight to the six Months when the Sun goes northwards; from the Months to Devaloka; from Devaloka to the Sun, from the Sun to Lightning-loka; from Lightning-loka a non-human Person,—he, having come (there) takes (one) to the Brahmalokas’ (Br. 6.2.15) and there itself, in another way —

‘When, indeed, a person departs from this world, he comes to Vāyu; there he (Wind) opens out for him, like the hole of a chariot-wheel; by that he ascends up; he comes to the Sun; he opens out there, like the hole of a Dambara—by that he ascends up; he comes to the Moon; there he opens out for him, like the hole of a drum’ (Br. 5.10.1)

etc. There (arises the) doubt—Is only one path, Arcirādi, propounded by these Śruti passages, so that the wise one goes to Brahman by that alone; or, there are elsewhere paths other than that, so that he goes by them; or by

The Vājasaneyins, however, (read) Devaloka in between the same two, in

‘ From the Months to Devāloka, from Devaloka to the Sun ’

(Br. 6·2·15)

The path being the same even in both the recensions, both have got to be included in both. There, even though the order given in the Śruti denoted by the ablative case in the case of Samvatsara and Devaloka mentioned after Māsa—on account of the inclusion of each succeeding the other, of those of a greater period in those of a lesser period as in

‘ From Arcis to Day; from Day to the waxing Fortnight, from the waxing Fortnight to those six Months when (the Sun) goes northwards ’

(Chā 4·15·5, Br. 6·2·15)

the Samvatsara alone coming up to the mind after Māsa, it is ascertained that Samvatsara alone is to be found a place after Māsa,—and so, after that the world of Gods. Elsewhere the Vājasaneyins in

‘ When indeed, a person departs from this world, he comes to Vāyu, he (Vāyu) opens out for him there, like the hole in the wheel of a chariot, by that he ascends up, he comes to Āditya ’

(Br. 5·10·1)

read Vāyu prior to Āditya. The Kausitakins, however, read Vāyu after Arcis pointed out by the word Agniloka, in

‘ He, having reached the Devayāna path, comes to the Agniloka, he to the Vāyuloka ’

(Kau 1·3)

—There in the case of Vāyu who has to come after Arcis by virtue of the order of the reading of the Kausitakins, his introduction prior to Āditya is ascertained on account of the order given in the Śruti which is more powerful than the reading, pointed out by the word Ūrdhva in

Beyond Lightning, Varuṇa on account of connection ॥ 3 ॥

(Adhikaraṇa 3, Sūtra 3)

[527] In the case of the Kauṣītakin, in (the passage)

‘ Having reached this Devayāna path, he comes to Agniloka; he to Vāyuloka; he to Varuṇaloka; he to Ādityaloka; he to Indraloka; he to Prajāpatiloka; he to Brahma'oka ’

(Kau 1-3)

Agniloka being a synonym for Arcis, its being the first is not objectionable. And the inclusion of Vāyu after Sāmvatsara has been mentioned. And here in the case of Āditya also, there being a contradiction of the order of recital in

‘ From the Devaloka to Āditya, from Āditya to the Moon ’

(Br. 6-2-15)

the inclusion after Vāyu denoted by the word Devaloka on the strength of the order of recital mentioned by the Śruti of the Vājasaneyakas has been established. Now 'is coming up the consideration in respect of Varuṇa, Indra etc. — Have these — Varuṇa and others — got to be given 'a place after Vāyu, in accordance with the recital, or after Lightning? — This being the doubt — (it may be argued) — On account of the violation of the order in the Śruti viz.

पाप्यपिकणं समाप्तम् (१)

‘ By that he ascends up, he comes to Āditya ’ (Br. 5-10-1)

—Therefore, Devaloka and Vāyu find a place prior to Āditya and after Saṁvatsara.—There this is being considered—Are Devaloka and Vāyu two different entities which a wise one should go to in any order he pleases, or should he go to Vāyu being the Devaloka, after Saṁvatsara, they being not different entities? What proper? They being different entities, on account of these being well-known. And when they are regarded as different entities, on account of the word Ūrdhva and the ablative case, both finding a place in the order of the Śruti in between Saṁvatsara and Āditya, and on account of the absence of any special factor—This (prima facie view) being reached, that (the wise one should go) as he pleases——This is stated (in reply)—Vāyumabdāt—One should go to Vāyu after Saṁvatsara. Whence? Because Vāyu alone is pointed out Avīśeṣaviśeṣābhyām—both generally and particularly. The word Devaloka also in the form of the world of the Gods denotes Vāyu not particularly, that is, generally. The word Vāyu in

‘ He comes to Vāyu; there for him, he ’

(Br. 5-10-1)

denotes Vāyu specifically. So, because by the words Devaloka and Vāyu—general and particular, Vāyu alone is denoted, so, one should go to Vāyu alone after Saṁvatsara. And in the case of the Kausītakins, the word Vāyuloka like the word Agnuloka denotes Vāyu himself by virtue of the exposition—Vāyu, that is, the Loka. And elsewhere it is mentioned in the Śruti that Vāyu is the residence of the Gods,—

‘ This one who purifies, he is the household of the Gods. ’

(Br 62 15)

the inclusion after Vāyu denoted by the word Devaloka on the strength of the order of recital mentioned by the Sṛuti of the Vajasaneyakas has been established Now is coming up the consideration in respect of Varuna, Indra etc — Have these — Varuna and others — got to be given a place after Vāyu in accordance with the recital, or after Lightning ? — This being the doubt — (it may be argued) — On account of the violation of the order in the Sṛuti viz

‘ From Arcis to Day ’

(Cha 4 15 5, 5 10 1, Br 62 15)

(obtaining) in all (passages) beginning with Arcis, and on account of the statement in the Sṛuti of the Lightning man taking one to Brahman in (the passage) — beyond the Vidyut, there being no room anywhere, no place is there for them (Varuna etc ,) in order that the teaching might not be useless, Varuna has got to be given a place after Vāyu in accordance with the order of recital, there being necessarily a contradiction of some one, and because the order of Vāyu and Āditya is also contradicted, Indra and Prajāpati also have got to be given a place here itself — This (prima facie view) being reached, it is stated (in reply)—Taditodhi Varunah — Varuna has got to be given a place beyond (after) Lightning. Whence ? Sambandhāt — On account of the connection On account of the Lightning residing in the interior of the clouds its connection with Varuna is indeed well-known in the world and in the Vedas

This is what is intended to be said — When Varuna and others have got to be given a place somewhere in order that the instruction (in the Sṛuti) should not be useless the order of purport being more powerful than the order of recital, Varuna has got to be given a place after Lightning From that, it is apprehended that the non-human being the leader involves a break, and because that involves a break and as Indra and others mentioned have got to be given a place being mentioned after Varuna and as others not mentioned specifically have got to be given a place at the end, Indra and others have got to be included after Varuna ॥ 3 ॥

[528] Now, this is being considered—Are Arcis and others sign-posts on the way, or are they the places of enjoyment, or are they the guides for the wise ones desirous of reaching Brahman ? What then proper ? Sign-posts on the way. Whence ? On account of the instruction being of that nature; for, it is seen in the world, that in the case of travellers to towns, there is this kind of instruction by the instructors — Having gone out of this, going to a particular tree, a particular river, a particular hill-side, go to the particular town. Or, these may be the places of enjoyment, on account of the impropriety of day etc., which are well-known as meaning a particular period of time, being the signposts on the way, and on account of these not denoting any other thing which is a sign-post. And their being the place for enjoyment is appropriate on account of day etc., being mentioned as Lokas in (the passage) —

‘These alone are the Lokas what are days and nights, fortnights, months, seasons, years’.

For this very reason, the Kauṣṭakins read Arcis etc., as connected with the word Loka in (the passage)

‘He comes to Agniloka’

(Kau. 1.3)

etc. This (prima facie view) being reached, we say (in reply) —

Ātivāhikāḥ — These, Arcis and others, are particular deities, the guides appointed by the highest Puruṣa for guiding the wise ones. Whence ? Talliṅgāt — on account of the characteristic of guiling; for, Ātivahan means making the goers go. And that being mentioned in the Śruti in the concluding portion in points out that the same connection exists in the case of the preceding ones also, mentioned in a general way, by the Śruti. And the words Arcis etc. do denote the particular supervising deities which are the souls (i.e. masters) of Arcis and others, like

‘ The Earth said to him ’

(Tai. Sām. 5 6.2)

॥ 4 ॥

If it is so, because, (in the passage)

‘ That non-human person, he takes these to Brahman ’

(Chā. 4-15-5; 5-10-2)

only the man belonging to Lightning is mentioned as the guide towards Brahman, how can there be the connection as guides in the case of Varuna and others that come after Vidyut?—Therefore, says (the Sūtrakāra in reply)

By (the non-human being) belonging to the Lightning, after that, on account of the Śruti to that effect. ॥ 5 ॥

Tatah — After that, after Lightning. Vaidyutena — by the non-human guide himself belonging to Lightning there is the march of the wise upto the acquisition of Brahman. Whence? Tatchruteh — In the Śruti he alone is mentioned as the guide in

‘ He takes these to Brahman. ’

To Hiranyagarbha (Kārya)—so Bādari, because the course (to him) of this one is appropriate ॥ 6 ॥

(Adbikarana 5, Sūtras 6-15)

[529] It has been stated that the wise one goes by the Arcirādi path alone, that the host, beginning with Arcis and ending with the non-human being — the guide — takes the wise one to Brahman — Now this is being considered — Does this host beginning with Arcis take the worshippers of the Kārya Hiranyagarbha, or only the worshippers of the Highest Brahman, or the worshippers of the Parabrahman, and the worshippers of the inmost Ātman having Brahman as the Ātman?—Such a doubt being there, the preceptor Bādari thinks that he leads the worshipper, of the Kārya (Brahman) alone. Whence? On account of the propriety of going in the case of this one alone, who is the worshipper of Hiranyagarbha. Not, indeed, in the case of the worshipper of the Highest Brahman which is perfect allround, omniscient, all-pervading, the Ātman of all, is appropriate going to another region for attaining to it; for, that is already attained — For, the purpose of the Highest Vidyā is just the removal alone of Avidyā pertaining to the Highest Brahman which is already always secured. But in the case of one who worships the Kārya, Brahman of the form of Hiranyagarbha, going is justified for the sake of securing something that is to be secured, abiding in a limited region. Therefore, the host of guides beginning with Arcis takes him (to Hiranyagarbha) alone ॥ 6 ॥ by the word Loka and the plural number is specified that the non-human being takes only the worshipper of Hiranyagarbha for residing in a particular world. Furthermore in

‘ I reach the palace, the assembly-hall of Prajāpati ’

(Chā. 8.14.1)

(is stated that) the going near the Kārya Hiranyagarbha, one proceeding by the Arcirādi (path) accomplishes ॥ 7 ॥

I say (says the objector), the reference

‘ That non-human person, he takes these to Brahman ’

(Chā. 4.15.5 ; 5.10.2)

in that case, would not be appropriate; for, if he is to be taken to Hiranyagarbha, it should have been said — he takes these to Brahmadeva — So says (the Sūtrakāra)

But on account of proximity, that reference ॥ 8 ॥

[530] Because Hiranyagarbha is the first-born, (as) in

‘ Who creates Brahmadeva ’

(Śve. 6.18)

he is near Brahman, so there is the reference to him by the word Brahman,—this is ascertained by the aforesaid logical reasonings qualified by the impossibility of going etc.,—this (is) the sense ॥ 8 ॥

Now it may be (objected)—when one has reached Hiranyagarbha by the Arcirādi path, the reference to non-return owing to the acquisition of immortality is inappropriate in (the passages)

‘ This (is) the path of the Gods, the path of Brahman, those proceeding by this do not revolve about this human whirlpool. ’

‘The worlds right up to the world of Brahman do revolve again, (O) Arjuna’ returning again in the case of him who has reached Hīraṇyagarbha is unavoidable—There says (the Sūtrakāra)—

At the destruction of the Kārya (Brahmaloka) along with the presiding officer, beyond that on account of the statement.
॥ ९ ॥

At the destruction of the Kārya, viz. the world of Brahmadeva, Tadadhya-kṣaṇa — by Hīraṇyagarbha, the officer-in-charge whose office comes to an end, along with the wise one, himself also having secured enlightenment there, secures the Highest Brahman from this Kārya Brahmaloka — this is known from the mention of non-return on securing immortality in the case of one who has gone by the Arcirādi path, and also from the statement in

Therefore, the host Arcirādi etc., leads on the worshipper of the Kārya alone.—This is the view of Bādari. ॥ 10 ॥

[531] Here Jaimini stands up, championing another view—

The Highest, (says) Jaimini, on account of that being the primary (sense) ॥ 11 ॥

The preceptor Jaimini thinks that Arcirādi takes the worshippers to the Highest Brahman. Whence ? Mukhyatvāt—in (the passage)

‘That non-human person, he takes these to Brahman’

(Chā. 4.15.5, 5.10.2)

the word Brahman is used in the primary sense, the Highest Brahman itself, for, only when the nature of the Kārya is ascertained by another means of proof, a metaphorical use would be proper. The impossibility of going, again, cannot be the means of proof. Although the Highest Brahman is all-pervading, the Sāstra speaks of the cessation of Avidyā in the case of the wise one gone to a particular region alone. For, just as the rise of Vidyā standing in need of the duties of the castes and the Āśramas, purity, good conduct place, time, etc., is apprehended from the Sāstra—

‘To him, this one, in conformity with the teachings of the Veda’

(Br. 4.4.22)

—in the same way that the production also of Vidyā of the form of the complete turning away of Avidyā is dependent upon going to a particular region, is apprehended from the Sāstra describing (that) going. The denial of going out etc., in the case of the wise one, has already been refuted.

As to (the contention) again, that on account of being qualified by the word Loka and the plural number thereof, there is the apprehension of Hiranyagarbha, the Kārya, —that (is) not proper. Because here it is proper to take the compound only as Karmadhāraya (to be explained) as, Brahmaloka —Brahman itself, the Loka, after the maxim of ‘Niṣāda, the chief.’ And when the matter is ascertained to be one, the plural number can be accounted for, as being on par with —Aditi, fetters. On account of the authority of Śruti, Smṛti, Itihāsa and Purāṇa in the case of the Highest Brahman which is all-perfect, all-pervading, with thoughts fulfilled, it is not that the worlds imagined at its will, peculiar to itself, and extraordinary, exist not at all. ॥ 11 ॥

And on account of the Śruti ॥ 12 ॥

And the Śruti refers to the acquisition of the Highest Brahman by one gone by the Devayāna path, having gone out by the head —Nāḍī in (the passage)

‘This one, Saṃprasāda, having risen up from this body, having gone unto the highest Jyotis, attains to his own nature’

(Chā. 8.3.4)

॥ 12 ॥

[532] As to the statement — in

‘I reach the palace, the assembly-hall of Prajāpati’

(Chā. 8.14.1)

there is seen the aim towards the Kārya, of one who has gone by the Arcirādi path, there is the answer —

Not, indeed, towards the Kārya, the aim ॥ 13 ॥

Not, indeed, is this aim at the Kārya —Hiranyagarbha, but towards the Highest Brahman alone, because in the remaining passage

‘ यशोऽहं भवामि ब्राह्मणानाम् ’

(छा. ८।१४।१)

इति तस्याभिसंधातुः सर्वाविद्याविमोक्तपूर्वकसर्वात्मभावामिसंधानात् ।

‘ I am the glory of the Brāhmaṇas ’

(Chā. 8-14-1)

there is the reference to being the Ātman of all in the case of the meditator, preceded by freedom from all Avidyā, and on account of the Brahmaloка to be reached, being referred to as not being something effected, and on account of the freedom from all bondage being mentioned directly in the Śruti in ‘ Shaking off sin, like a horse, the (mane-) hair, getting out, like the Moon from the mouth of Rāhu, shaking off the body, not the effect, with the Ātman cleansed, I go unto Brahmaloका ’

(Chā. 8-13-1)

Thus, the view of Jaimini is that the guide-host, Arcirādi takes along the worshipper to the Highest Brahman itself ॥ 13 ॥

[533] Now again His Holiness Bādarāyaṇa states the conclusion according to his own view —

It takes those not clinging to the symbols — so Bādarāyaṇa, on account of the blemish in both ways, and that aim ॥ 14 ॥

Apratikālambanān—other than those who cling to the symbols—Nayati, the guide-host Arcirādi takes — so His Holiness Bādarāyaṇa thought. This is what is meant to be said—This view, that (Arcirādi) carries the worshippers to the Kārya, is not possible; neither is there the rule that it carries the worshippers to the Highest alone; nor again does ॥ carry even those clinging to the symbols; but those who worship the Highest Brahman and those who worship the Ātman divested of the Prakṛti having Brahman as the Ātman—it carries those of both kinds. Those again, who worship things like Name etc., that are included in the effects of Brahman by the superimposition of Brahman, like the superimposition of the lion etc., upon Devadatta etc., or merely those various entities—it does not take them. Therefore, it takes those who worship the Highest Brahman and worship the Ātman divested of Prakṛti, having Brahman as the Ātman. Whence? Ubhayathā ca dosāt — there being a blemish in both the cases. In the view viz. it takes the worshippers of the Kārya, the Śruti-passages

‘Having risen up from this body, having gone unto the highest Jyotis’

(Chā. ४-३-४; ४-१२-३)

etc., would be (taking offence,) violated. And if there be the rule (it takes) those who worship only the highest Brahman, the Śruti-passage saying that the Arcirādi-host takes the knowers of the Five-fires in ‘Then those who thus, and these who worship Śraddhā as Tapas in the forest, they go on to Arcis’

(Chā. ५-१०-१)

would be violated. Therefore, there would be a blemish in both the views. Therefore, it takes these both kinds of worshippers.

All this (the Sūtrakāra) says by Tatkratuśca — Tatkratuh — worshipping in that way, that is to say, he acquires that same, in accordance with the maxim — As in what way one worships, in

‘Of what will a person becomes in this world, so he becomes after having departed from here.’

(Chā. ३-१४-१)

—on account of the mention in the Śruti about the knower of the Five-fires going by the Arcirādi path, and on account of the mention in the Śruti of the acquisition of Brahman and non-return by one gone by the Arcirādi path. For this very reason, in accordance with the maxim about one’s own will, it is established that there is the meditation on the Ātman having Brahman as his Ātman, divested of Prakṛti. In the case of those clinging to the symbols, beginning with Name and ending with Prāṇa, however, there does not exist going by the Ārcirādi path, nor the acquisition of Brahman on account of the absence of the two-fold worship established in the Śruti, and on account of the maxim — in accordance with the will — if there is the worship of Cit-mixed ॥ 14 ॥

And this same particular feature, the Śruti itself points out — so says (the Sūtrakāra) —

And (the Śruti) shows the particularity ॥ 15 ॥

And the Śruti-passage

‘There as far as the Name goes, there he has movement at will’

(Chā. 7-1-5)

etc., points out in the case of the worshippers of symbols, beginning with Name and ending with Prāṇa, a specific limited fruit, no need for a movement. Therefore, those who worship the Acit-mixed or the pure Cit entity by the superimposition of Brahman or without that — it does not take them, but on the other hand, the guide-host takes the worshippers of the Highest Brahman and the worshippers of Ātman divested of Prakṛti, having Brahman as his Ātman — this is established ॥ 15 ॥

FOURTH QUARTER OF THE FOURTH CHAPTER

Manifestation on the merging, on account of the word
Svena ॥ 1 ॥

(Adhikarana 1, Sūtras 1-3)

[534] In the case of the worshippers of the Highest Brahman and the worshippers of Ātman with Brahman as the Ātman, divested of Prakṛti, going by the Arcirādi path characterised by non-return has been spoken of.
Now he (the Sūtrakāra) starts considering the mode of overlordship in the case of the Released souls.

This is what is stated in the Śruti—

‘Thus, verily, this Saṁprasāda, having risen up from this body, having gone unto the highest Jyotiḥ, he attains to his own form’ (Chā. 8-12-3)

—There being the doubt — Is it propounded by this passage that there is the association of one who has attained to the highest Light on arising from this body,—association with (some) form that is to be obtained, like the form of gods etc., or the manifestation of one's own natural form ? — It (is) proper (to hold that there is) the association of a form (yet) to be obtained; otherwise, the Śāstra dealing with salvation would not be enlightening one about the highest purpose in life, on account of one's own nature by itself, not being seen to be the highest purpose in life. Not indeed, in the deep-sleep-state when the operations of the body and the sense-organs cease, is पुरुषार्थसंबन्धो दृश्यते । न च दुःखनिवृत्तिमात्रं परं ज्योतिरूपसंपन्नस्य पुरुषार्थः, येन स्वरूपाविर्भाव एव मोक्ष इत्युच्येत,

‘स एको ब्रह्मण आनन्दः । श्रोत्रियस्य चाकामहतस्य’ (तै. ३।८)

‘स्वं ह्येषां लब्धवानन्दी भवति’ (तै. ३।७)

इत्यादिभ्यो मुक्तस्य सुखानन्त्यश्रवणात् । न चापरिच्छिन्नानन्दरूपचैतन्यमेवास्य स्वरूपम्, तच्च संसारदशायामविद्यातिरोहितं परं ज्योतिरूपसंपन्नस्याविर्भवतीति शक्यं वक्तुम्, ज्ञान-स्वरूपस्य तिरोधानासंभवात् । प्रकाशपर्यायस्य ज्ञानस्य तिरोधानं तद्विनाश एवेति हि पूर्वमेवोक्तम् । न च प्रकाशमात्रस्यानन्दता संभवति । सुखस्वरूपता ह्यानन्दस्वरूपता । सुख-स्वरूपत्वं चात्मनोऽनुकूलत्वम् । प्रकाशमात्रात्मवादिनः कस्य प्रकाशोऽनुकूलवेदनीयो भवेदिति प्रकाशमात्रात्मवादिनः कथंचिदप्यानन्दस्वरूपता इरुपपादा । स्वरूपापत्तिमात्रे च साध्ये स्वरूपस्य नित्यनिष्पत्त्यादुपसंपन्नस्य seen the connection of the human purpose in life, of the pure nature of Ātman. Nor again, can mere cessation of misery be the highest purpose in life, for one who has attained to the highest Light, so that it could be said that the manifestation itself of one's form is salvation; because there is the statement in the Śruti about the infinite bliss in the case of the Released one—

‘That alone is Brahman's Ānanda (bliss), and of the Brāhmaṇa, well-versed in the Vedas, not affected by longings’

(Tai. 2:8)

‘For, having secured the Rasa alone, he becomes full of Ānanda’

(Tai. 2:7)

etc. Nor again is it possible to say that his own nature is sentiency itself in the form of unlimited Ānanda, and that same veiled by Avidyā in the state of Samsāra becomes manifest in one who has attained to the highest Light, on account of the absence of any veiling in the case of one whose nature is knowledge. The veiling of knowledge with light as its synonym, is nothing but the destruction of that—this has already been stated. Nor again is it possible for mere Light to have the nature of Ānanda; for, to have the nature of Ānanda is to have the nature of happiness, and to have the nature of happiness is to be agreeable to the Ātman. As for one who holds (the Ātman) to be mere Light, to whom could the light be known as favourable? —(this being the difficulty), in the case of the one who holds that Ātman is mere Light, to have the nature of Ānanda can hardly be reasoned out. If the thing to be secured is merely assuming one's own nature, because one's own nature is always there attained, the statement in the Śruti, about one who has gone unto (the Parajyotis)

‘He becomes manifest in his own nature’

(Chā 8:3:4; 8:12:3)

would be (sheer) nonsense. Therefore, (the released Soul) is connected with a new form to be secured And in this way, the statement—is manifested — would have only the primary sense. The expression also—in his own nature—does harmonise with—is manifested—on account of the exclusive bliss peculiar to himself.

— This (prima facie view) being reached, we say (in reply) — Sampadyāvīrbhāvah — what particular state this inmost Ātman attains to, having gone unto the highest Light by the Arcirādi path, that is of the nature of the manifestation of one's own form, (and) not of the nature of the rise of a new form. Whence? Svenaśabdāt—that is to say, on account of the specific statement viz. — Svena rūpeṇa (in one's own form). If, there is the acceptance of a new body, indeed, the qualifying Svena rūpeṇa would have no significance. And because even if there is no specific attribute, his own nature is established in him. ॥ 1 ॥

[535] As to the statement that because one's own nature is always there, the expression—Having gone unto (the Parajyotis), becomes manifest—is meaningless—There (is) the answer —

Free, on account of the solemn declaration ॥ 2 ॥

Here (in the passage)

‘He becomes manifest by his own nature’ (Chā ६-12-3) is referred to, one stationed in his own natural form free from association with Karman and the body etc., caused by that. Therefore, the cessation of screening, in the case of one's own nature although always existing (and) concealed by the Ajyā of the form of Karman, is spoken of here as manifestation. Whence? Pratijñānāt — On account of the solemn declaration; for, that is solemnly declared as being propounded. Whence is this known? Because, in order to propound the inmost Ātman, the matter in hand,

‘य आत्मा’

‘Who the Ātman’

(Chā. 8·7·1)

who is free from the three states, waking etc., and free from the body produced by the Karman which is the cause of the agreeable and the disagreeable — after having again and again stated

‘Thus one alone, verily, I shall expound again’

(Chā. 8·9·3)

it is mentioned

‘Thus, verily, this one, the Sāmpṛasāda having risen up from this body, having gone unto the highest Jyotis, becomes manifest in his own form’

(Chā. 8·12·3)

Therefore, freedom of the form of the cessation of bondage, after attaining to the highest Light in the case of one who is tied down by the Karman, is spoken of as manifestation in one’s own form. The word Abhinisṛpatti is seen as denoting also the manifestation of one’s own form, in expressions like — This sense becomes manifest by logical reasoning, ॥ 2 ॥

[536] As to what again has been said — Because in the deep-sleep-state the nature of Ātman is not known as being the human purpose in life; that the Śāstra dealing with salvation could not be enlightening one about the human purpose in life when one’s own nature becomes manifest — considering this, Abhinisṛpatti is the acquisition of another state connected with happiness, like the state of gods etc.; — There (is) the answer —

The Ātman on account of the context ॥ 3 ॥

(शौनक-सि. ब्र.)

This Ātman in his own nature is known from the context, to be possessed of qualities beginning with, having the sins destroyed and ending with, having the thoughts fulfilled.

'Which Ātman, having the sins destroyed, ageless, deathless, bereft of grief, bereft of hunger, without thirst, having the desires fulfilled, having the thoughts fulfilled' (Chā. 8-7-1)

—this is the introductory part of Prajāpati's speech And that this topic refers to the inmost Ātman has been propounded here (in the Sūtra) —

'If on account of the later state—he has his nature manifested' (Bra. Sū. I. 3-18)

Therefore, this same Ātman, verily, possessed of his own nature as having the sins destroyed etc., with his own nature concealed by Avidyā known as Karman in the state of Samsāra, — having gone unto the highest Light has his own nature made manifest. Therefore, the natural qualities, having the sins destroyed etc., become manifest — not produced — in the case of the inmost Ātman who has gone unto the highest Light. As has been said by His Holiness Śaunaka also —

'Just as the lustre is not made (produced) by washing off the dust from the gem, in the same way the knowledge of the Ātman is not made (produced) by the abandonment of blemishes.

Just as the sky in the water is not made by the construction of a well, — what is already existent is made manifest; whence can there be the production of the non-existent?

In the same way, the qualities, enlightenment etc., are brought to light by the destruction of the qualities fit to be abandoned, not produced; for, they are the perpetual ones in the case of the Ātman.'

(Śaunaka Si. Tra.)

Avibhāgena — The Released one experiences himself as not separate from the Highest Brahman. Whence? Dr̥ṣṭatvāt — On account of one's own Ātman being seen in his real nature when the screening by the Avidyā ceases, owing to the attainment to the Highest Brahman.

‘That thou art’ (Chā. 6-8-7)

‘This Ātman, Brahman’ (Br. 2-5-19)

‘All this has this as the Ātman’ (Chā. 6-8-7)

‘All this, verily, Brahman’ (Chā. 3-14-1)

— Here (in these passages) has been propounded the nature of one's own Ātman by the references in case-co-ordination and by (the passages)

‘Who abiding in Ātman, within Ātman, whom knows not; whose body, Ātman; who controls the Ātman within — that your Ātman, the inner Controller, immortal’ (Śa. Brā. 14-6-30)

‘Entered within, the ruler of people, the Ātman of all’ (Tai. Ā. 3-11-2)

etc., as having the Paramātman as his Ātman, and being a mode of him, as his body, here (in the Sūtra)

‘On account of his abiding, so Kāśakṛtsna’ (Brā Sū. I. 4-22)

Therefore, he experiences himself as not divided, only as — I am Brahman. The reference to the equality and the possession of the same qualities, propounds the purity equal to that of Brahman by the abandonment of the ordinary forms of gods etc., because the nature of the inmost Ātman who is, verily, the mode of Brahman is equal to it. As for the Śruti-passage mentioning accompaniment, as it propounds the experience of the qualities of

(Adhikaraṇa 3, Sūtras 5-7)

[538] It has been said that in the case of the inmost Ātman from whom the veil has been removed on having gone unto the highest Jyotiṣ, there is the manifestation of his own form alone — There is now considered his nature — by which nature this Ātman becomes manifest on account of the variety of Śruti-passages — Because the nature of this one is only having the sins destroyed, etc., — does he become manifest by that form; or, because he is mere Vijñāna, by that form; or because there is no contradiction, in both the forms ? What then (is the prima facie view) reached ? By the nature of Brahman, — so thinks the preceptor Jaimini. Brāhmeṇa — that is to say,

ब्राह्मेण — अपहृतपाप्मत्वादिनेत्यर्थः । अपहृतपाप्मत्वादयो हि दहरवाक्ये ब्रह्मसंवन्धितया श्रुताः । ब्राह्मेणेति कुतोऽयमन्यते ? उपन्यासादिभ्यः — उपन्यस्यन्ते हि ब्रह्मगुणा अपहृतपाप्मत्वादयः प्रत्यगात्मनोऽपि प्रजापतिवाक्ये

by having the sins destroyed etc., for, having the sins destroyed etc., are mentioned in the Śruti as being connected with Brahman in the Dahara-passage. Whence is it known (that the manifestation is) Brāhmena? — Upanyāsādibhyah — for, the attributes of Brahman, — having the sins destroyed etc., are set forth in the case of the inmost Ātman also, in the Prajāpati-passage beginning with

‘Who, the Ātman having sins destroyed’

and ending with

‘Having thoughts fulfilled’

(Chā. 8-7-1)

—By the word Ādi are to be understood eating etc., depending upon the attributes, having thoughts fulfilled, etc., the practical dealings known from the passage

‘Eating, sporting, enjoying’

(Chā. 8-12-3)

etc. Therefore, on account of these statements in the introduction etc., it is not possible that the inmost Ātman should have merely Vijñāna as his nature — this (is) the view of Jaimini. ॥ 5 ॥

In pure consciousness, on account of being constituted of that — thus Auḍulomi ॥ 5 ॥

[539] The nature of this Ātman is pure consciousness alone, and so, he becomes manifest in that form — so thinks the preceptor Auḍulomi. Whence? Tadātmakatvāt — on account of this inmost Ātman being possessed of that much; on account of the emphatic statement (the use of Eva) in

‘He, — as a mass of salt, inside as well as outside, the whole of it is only a mass of Rasa, in the same way, dear one, this Ātman, inside as well as outside, the whole of him is a mass of Prajñāna alone’

(Br. 4-5-13)

—it is known that the nature of this one is pure Vijnāna alone. Therefore, on account of the absence of other qualities in his case, the words Apapa-tapāpma etc., are calculated to exclude the characteristics constituted of Avidyā, modification, happiness, misery etc., — and so, there is the manifestation in the form of pure consciousness itself — this (is) the view of Auḍulomi ॥ 6 ॥

[540] Now His Holiness Bādarāyaṇa makes the conclusive statement in his own view.

Even if thus on account of the introductory statement, on account of (the attributes) existing previously, no contradiction, (says) Bādarāyaṇa ॥ 7 ॥

Evamāpi — even though there be the propounding of the nature being pure Vijnāna, the preceptor Bādarāyaṇa thinks that there is no contradiction with the attributes — with desires fulfilled etc., that are already mentioned.
Whence? Upanyāsātpūrvabhāvāt — On account of the existence of—having the sins destroyed, having the desires fulfilled etc., (mentioned) before — these existing, being present on account of the authority viz. the introductory statements in the Upanisads such as—

'Who the Ātman, having sins destroyed' (Chā. 8-7-1) etc., that is to say, in the case of equal authority, stultification of the one by the other is not right. Nor again is it right those with that — having sins destroyed etc., are superimposed by Avidyā, on account of the contradiction with the nature of things, on account of the maxim — When there is no distinction, there could be no opposite any way—for, when there is equal power, it is but proper that an impossible emphatic statement should be construed as referring to another. Having understood there is thus no contradiction, saying that only pure knowledge is his nature, nothing else exists.

—this is not propounded by (the Sruti - passage).

माहाधिकरणं समाप्तम् (१)

‘A mass of Viśṇāna alone’

(Br. 2-4-12)

etc.;—this is what (Bādarāyaṇa) opines.

What then is the purport of the emphatic statement (Eva) in

‘A mass of Viśṇāna alone’

(Br. 2-4-12)

—Even this entire Ātman other than the non-sentient, self-illuminating—there is not the smallest region with its light dependent upon something—this sense is quite manifest from the passage itself—

‘He, as a mass of salt, inside as well as outside, the whole of it is a mass of Rasa alone,—thus, verily, dear one, this Ātman, inside as well as outside, the whole of him, is a mass of Praśṇāna alone’

(Br. 4-5-13)

—Nor again is thereby contradicted the association with the attributes, having sins destroyed, having desires fulfilled etc., known from other passages, even though this inmost Ātman with the nature of one possessed of attributes, be a massed Viśṇāna in entirety. Just as the mass of salt, even though a mass of Rasa in its entirety is known from the sense-organ of Rasa, (the qualities), form, hardness etc., known from the eye etc., are not contradicted. This is the purport of the passage here—Just as though there is the difference of the flavour on account of the difference of regions such as the outside bark etc., in the case of the juicy mango-fruit etc., there is oneness of Rasa everywhere in the case of the mass of salt; in the same way in the case of the Ātman also everywhere there is the nature of Viśṇāna, that is to say, self-illuminating nature. ॥ 7 ॥

From the thought itself, on account of that Śruti ॥ 8 ॥

(Adhikaraṇa 4, Sūtras 8-9)

[541] It has been stated that the released (Soul) having attained to the Highest Brahman becomes manifest with Jñāna as his nature and with attributes beginning with having the sins destroyed, etc., and ending with—having thoughts fulfilled. Referring to him are mentioned in the Śruti, the practical dealings prompted by having thoughts fulfilled etc.—

' He moves about there eating, sporting, enjoying, with women or with vehicles or with kinsmen '

(Chā. 8-12-3)

—There being the doubt—Is his acquisition of kinsmen etc., dependent upon another effort or does it come from the mere thought, as in the case of the highest Purusa ? — Because in the world, in the case of kings and others who are spoken of as having their thoughts fulfilled, there is seen the need of a fresh effort to produce the effect in question; in the case of this one also, there is the need of that (fresh effort) — This (prima facie view) being reached, it is said (in reply) —

Samkalpādeva . Whence ? Tatcchruतेः — for, in (the passage)

' If he is desirous of the Pitrloka, through mere thought, his Manes rise '

(Chā. 8-2-1)

the rise of the Manes etc., is mentioned in the Śruti as from thought alone.
Not again, is seen another Śruti-passage mentioning the need of another effort, so that there would be the adjustment made of the emphatic statement — from thought alone—as in the case of

' A mass of Viñāna '

(Br. 2-4-12)

And for this very reason, has none else as the overlord

॥ 9 ॥

Because the Released one has his thoughts fulfilled, therefore he has also no other overlord. Having some one else as the overlord, indeed, means fitness for being subject to injunction and prohibition; for, only when there is fitness for being subject to injunction and prohibition, there would be the state of thoughts being obstructed. Therefore, by the Śruti referring to having thoughts fulfilled itself, is established the state of having no other overlord.
For this very reason, it is stated

‘ He becomes the self-ruler ’.

(Adhikarana 5, Sūtras, 10-16)

[542] There being the doubt—Are there not in the case of the Released one, body and sense-organs, or are they there, or are they there or not there, according to his thought ?—The preceptor Bādari thinks that there is the absence of body and sense-organs. Whence ? Āha hyevam —for, the Śruti speaks of the Released having no body in (the passage)

‘ Not indeed, in the case of one being with a body, is the destruction of the agreeable and the disagreeable; him, verily, being without a body, touch not the agreeable and the disagreeable ’

‘ Having risen up from this body, having gone unto the highest Jyoti he becomes manifest in his own nature ’ (Chā. 8-12-3)

॥ 10 ॥

Existence, so Jaimini, on account of the mention of variety. ॥ 11 ॥

[543] The preceptor Jaimini thinks that there is the existence of the body, sense-organs etc., in the case of the Released one. Whence ? Vikalpāmananāt — Vikalpa is the varied nature, that is to say, variety, on account of the Śruti (passage)

‘ He becomes of one form, becomes three-fold, five-fold, seven-fold ’ (Chā. 7-26-2)

etc. On account of the impossibility of the one indivisible Ātman existing in various ways, it is known that his being three-fold etc, depends upon the body. The statement about not being possessed of a body, however, refers to the absence of the body due to Karman; for, that body alone is the cause of the agreeable and the disagreeable. ॥ 11 ॥

[544] His Holiness Bādarāyaṇa however, states the conclusive view in accordance with his own opinion —

Like the Dvādaśāha, twofold — So Bādarāyaṇa, from that ॥ 12 ॥

By the word Atah is the reference to Saṅkalpādeva. For this very reason, — from the thought — His Holiness Bādarāyaṇa thinks the Released one to be Ubhayavidha (two-fold), — having a body and having no body. And thus the two-fold Śruti would be appropriate. Dvādaśāhavat — like the Dvādaśāha (sacrifice). Just as in ‘द्वादशाहमृदिकामा उपेयुः’

(ता. प्रा. २३।२३।१)

(का. २।१।८)

‘Those desirous of prosperity should perform the Dvādaśāha’ (sacrifice). ‘One should make one desirous of progeny sacrifice by the Dvādaśāha’

(Tāndya Brā. 23 23-1)

—by the injunctive expressions Upaiti—performs and Yajati—sacrifices the sacrifice becomes in conformity with the difference in aim, a long sacrifice and a day-sacrifice. ॥ 12 ॥

When in his case, there is the possession of accessories like the body etc., then there is no definite rule that those accessories body etc., are created by himself—Thus says (the Sūtrakāra)

In the absence of the body, as in dream (enjoyment) possible ॥ 13 ॥

When there is the absence of accessories such as the created body etc., by himself, although he has his thoughts fulfilled, he himself does not create because enjoyment is possible with the accessories created by the highest Purusa. Just as in a dream, in accordance with (the passage) beginning with

‘Then he creates the chariots and horses yoked to the chariots’

‘Then he creates mansions, lotus-ponds and flowing rivers, for he (is) the doer’

(Br 4-3-10)

[545] When there are the accessories Pitṛloka etc., and the created body etc., from his own thought itself, the Released one enjoys the pleasure of the sportive action, like the enjoyment by a waking person. Just as even the Paramapuruṣa for (mere) sport, having created from himself Daśaratha, Vasudeva etc., and the Pitṛloka etc., enjoys the pleasure of enjoyment in acting like a human being through them; in the same way He himself sometimes creates Pitṛloka etc., in the case of the Released souls for his own sport. And sometimes the Released souls of their own accord create their own Pitṛloka etc., included within the sport of the Paramapuruṣa on account of their thoughts coming to be fulfilled — so everything is all right. ॥ 14 ॥

[546] I say (says the objector) — It has been stated that Ātman is atomic in size. How can there be the possibility of one atom regarding himself as the Ātman in many bodies ?—(The Sūtrakāra) says in this connection—

Occupying like the lamp; to the same effect the Śruti shows ॥ 15 ॥

Just as the one lamp staying in one region occupies (extends over) another region by its lustre, in the same way it is not impossible that Ātman although residing in one region himself, occupies the whole of the body by consciousness in the form of his lustre. And just as in the case of (the atomic Ātman) — residing only in one region — heart etc., in one and the same body, there is the acknowledgement of the Ātman in the whole of the body, on account of the pervasion of consciousness — like that. (But) this (is) the difference —

अमुक्तस्य कर्मणा संकुचितज्ञानस्य देहान्तरेष्व्वात्माभिमानानुगुणा व्याप्तिर्न संभवति । मुक्तस्य त्वसंकुचितज्ञानस्य यथासंकल्पमात्माभिमानानुगुणा व्याप्तिरिदमिति ग्रहणानुगुणा च नानुपपन्ना । तथाहि दर्शयति

‘बालाग्रजतभागस्य ज्ञनया कल्पितस्य च ।

(श्रे ५।९)

इति । अमुक्तस्य कर्म नियामकं मुक्तस्य तु स्वेच्छेति विज्ञेयः ॥ १५ ॥

[547] ननु परं ब्रह्म प्राप्तस्यान्तरवाह्यज्ञानलोपं दर्शयति श्रुतिः

‘ब्राह्मेनात्मना संपरिष्वक्तो न नाह्य किञ्चन वेद नान्तरम्’ (तृ ४।३।२१)

रित्युक्तम् । संपत्तिश्च मरणम्

‘वाद्मनसि सपद्यते’

(छा ६।८।९)

In the case of the non-Released one whose knowledge is contracted on account of the Karman, the pervasion pertaining to the acknowledgement of the Atman in other bodies is not possible. In the case of the Released one, however, with his knowledge without contraction, the pervasion pertaining to the acknowledgement of the Atman at his own will, and capable of (understanding) grasping in the form of — this — is not impossible. To the same effect shows the Śruti —

‘That Jīva should be known as (having a dimension of) the portion, the hundredth part of the tip of the hair cut into a hundred bits, he is earmarked for eternity’ (Śve. 59)

In the case of the non-Released one, Karman is the controlling factor, but in the case of the Released one it is his free will—this (is) the distinction. ॥ 15 ॥

[547] I say (says the objector)—In the case of one who has attained to the Highest Brahman, the Śruti describes (shows) the absence of internal and external knowledge —

‘Closely contacted with the Prājña Ātman, he knows neither anything outside, nor inside’ (Br 4.3.21)

— So, how is the omniscience spoken of in the case of the Released one ? — There (is this) answer—

Referring to either of (the two) deep sleep (and) death; for, that is disclosed (by the Śruti) ॥ 16 ॥

Not (indeed) is this statement about the Released one, but referring to either of the two, the deep-sleep-state and death. It has been stated— Svāpyaya is deep sleep, and Sampatti is death, on account of the statement beginning with

‘The Vāk goes unto the mind’

‘The Tejas unto the highest Deity’

—And in those two states there does exist the attainment to Prājñā and absence of all consciousness. Therefore, this statement refers to either of the two, for it is disclosed by the Sruti, the absence of consciousness in deep sleep and death and the omniscience of the Released one. Having spoken of the absence of all consciousness at the time of deep sleep,

‘Not indeed this one thus knows the Ātman—now here, I am he, not indeed these beings, he goes un’to destruction itself—I do not see here any object of enjoyment’

(Chā 8 11 1)

—in that same passage is spoken of omniscience referring to the Released one,

‘He, verily, this one, seeing these desires by the divine eye, by the mind, enjoys, what these are in the Brahmaloka’

(Chā 8 12 5-6)

—similarly, in (the passage)

‘The seer, indeed, sees everything, secures everything in all ways’

(Chā 7 26 2)

the omniscience is spoken of very clearly —Similarly, in death also the absence of all consciousness is spoken of in ‘Having risen up from these elements, he perishes after them alone’

(Br 2 4 12)

Vinasyati — that is to say, does not see. Therefore the statement Prājñena Ātmanā refers to either of (the two) — deep sleep and death ॥ 16 ॥

Barring the operation about the world, on account of the context, and on account of his not being present ॥ 17 ॥

(Adhikaraṇa 6, Sūtras 17-22)

[548] There is (the) doubt — Is the glory of the Released one the state of being the overlord also, peculiar to the Paramapurusa, involving the creation of the world etc., or, is it devoid of that, confined to the experience of only the Paramapurusa ? What proper ? The overlordship of the world also. Whence ? On account of the mention in the Sruti of the attainment to the maximum similarity with the highest Purusa in (the passage)

‘ Free from stains, he attains to the maximum similarity ’

(Mu. 3.1.3)

and also on account of the Sruti referring to his having his thoughts fulfilled. Not, indeed, would be appropriate extreme resemblance and having the thoughts fulfilled, without the control of the world in the form of operations in connection with the world, peculiar to the all-Lord. Therefore, to account for having the thoughts fulfilled and the maximum resemblance, the wealth of glory of the Released one is also of the form of the entire world-control. — This (prima facie view) being reached, we say (in reply) —

Jagadvyāpāraṇam. — Jagadvyāpārah — Operation in connection with the world (is) the control of the diverse nature, stability and activity of the entire sentient and non-sentient entities. Barring that, is the wealth of glory of the Released one with the entire veil completely taken off, having the form of realisation of the pure Brahman. Whence ? Prakaraṇāt — On account of the context; for, the control of the entire world is mentioned, referring to the Highest Brahman in ‘ यतो वा इमानि भूतानि जायन्ते । येन जातानि जीवन्ति । यत्प्रपन्त्यमिसं-

‘ आत्मा वा इदमेक एवाग्र आसीन्नान्यत्किंचन भिन्नं तस्यैक्षत लोकास्तु

‘ From which indeed are originated these beings, by which they live, when born, which they go to, (and) which they go into; know that; that (is) Brahman ’ (Tai. 3-1).

If this control of the entire world were to be common to the Released ones also, then this characteristic of Brahman, of the form of being the overlord of the world would not go well, for, only a peculiar characteristic can be a defining factor. Similarly,

‘ Sat alone, dear one, was this at the beginning, one alone, without a second; it reflected — May I be many, may I procreate,
— it created Tejas ’ (Chā. 6-2 2-3)

‘ Brahman, verily, was this at the beginning, one alone. That, being one, did not become modified, it super-created the form of the highest good, the Ksatra (caste), what are the Ksatras among gods, — Indra, Varuna, Soma, Rudra, Parjanya, Yama, Mrtyu, (death), Īśāna ’ (Br. 1-4-11)

‘ Ātman verily, this one, was one alone at the beginning, nothing else, blinking; he reflected — May I indeed create the worlds — he created these worlds, ’ (At. 1-1-2)

— In

‘ One alone, verily, was Nārāyana, nor Brahmadeva, nor Īśāna (Śiva); nor these, heaven and the earth; nor the stars, nor the waters, nor fire, nor Soma, nor the Sun; alone he enjoys not, of him engaged in meditation, one daughter, ten sense-

Not so, on account of the direct teaching (we say) — No on account the mention (of the enjoyments) within the jurisdiction of the appointed officers ॥ 18 ॥

‘सो वे सः । रसं ह्येषायं लब्ध्वानन्दी भवति’

(तै. २।७)

etc., The sense is that the Released one with his knowledge not stultified by Karman, having enjoyed the modified worlds that are the manifestations of the Lord, becomes gratified at his own will. Therefore, by this sentence is thus conveyed (that the Released one) enjoys all enjoyments coming within the jurisdiction of the appointed officers and abiding within the modifications, which are the glory of Brahman, not the world-operation ॥ 18 ॥

[550] If like the Soul in the Samsāra, even the Released one enjoys the enjoyments abiding within the modifications, then as in the case of the Bound one, in the case of the Released one also, the store of objects fit for enjoyment will surely have an end and would be just scanty — There says (the Sūtrakāra)

Not abiding in the modifications, to the same effect the Śruti describes the state ॥ 19 ॥

Vikāre — In the modification — in birth etc., does not exist — Vikārāvartī — The Released one realises the Highest Brahman with its manifestations, with all the modifications shaken away, of a uniformly auspicious nature opposed to everything fit to be abandoned, possessing an excessive bliss, and having all auspicious qualities. The worlds although within the modification are fit for being enjoyed by the Released one, as they are included in the manifestations of that. To explain the same — The Śruti explains the Released one as abiding as the realiser, in the Highest Brahman without modification, possessing unlimited excessive bliss —

‘When indeed this one, verily, secures stability, freedom from fear, in this imperceptible, non-body, undefinable, without abode, then he goes to freedom from fear’

‘एष सर्वेभ्य एव भूताधिपतिरेव भूतपाल एष सेतुर्विषय एषां लोकानाम-

(बृ. ४।४।२२)

etc. And the world which is its manifestation exists there, itself in accordance with the Śruti —

‘In that are all the worlds resorting; no one goes beyond it’

(Kā. 5.8)

Therefore, by (the passage)

‘In all the worlds, free movement at will’ (Chā. 7.25.2) etc., is stated that (the Released one) realising Brahman with all its manifestations enjoys the enjoyments also within the jurisdiction of the appointed officers abiding within the modifications; and not the operation with the world by the Released one. ॥ 19 ॥

And thus show the Śruti and the Smṛti ॥ 20 ॥

[551] It has been stated that in the case of this Released inmost self who is subject to control, is not possible the control involving the operation of the world, peculiar to the Paramapurusa who is the Controller. The Śruti and the Smṛti show that the operation of the nature of the control of the entire world is peculiar to the Paramapurusa,

‘Through fear from him, the wind blows on; through fear rises the Sun; through fear from him, Agni and Indra; Death runs as the fifth’

(Tāi. 2.6)

‘Under the direction, verily, of this Akṣara (O) Gārgi, the Sun and the Moon, stay on supported’

(Br. 3.8.9)

ect.,—similarly the Śruti (passage)

‘This one, the over-lord of all; this one the supreme master of beings; this one, the protector of Bhūtas; this one the bridge, the support, for the non-breaking of these worlds.’ (Br. 4.4.22)

पुरुषस्यैतन्नित्यताया नित्येष्टत्वान्नित्यतया वर्तत इति न कश्चिद्विरोधः । एवमेव परमपुरुष

So also, the Smṛti —

‘By me, the presiding authority, the Prakṛti produces (everything) along with the movable and immovable; by this as the cause, (O) son of Kuntī, the world revolves on’ (Gitā 9-10)

‘Having enveloped all this world, by a portion (of mine)
I stay on’ (Gitā 10-42)

Similarly, the Śruti and the Smṛti passages show that the Paramapurusa is the only cause of bliss in the case of the Released one who has already the attributes, — having the thoughts fulfilled etc.

‘This one alone causes Ānanda indeed’ (Tai. 2.7)

And who serves me, with single-minded Bhaktiyoga, he, having gone beyond these Guṇas, is fit for becoming Brahman

For, I am the base (stability) of Brahman which is immortal and immutable, and of the eternal Dharma, and of the exclusive happiness.’ (Gitā 14-26-27)

Although the host of qualities beginning with—having the sins destroyed etc., and ending with having the thoughts fulfilled, is manifested as being natural in the case of the inmost Atman, still that (host of qualities) being only of that nature depends upon the Paramapurusa and its permanent stay is dependent upon him. And as the Paramapurusa always desires to have this permanent state (of the guṇagana), this continues to remain permanent — so, there is no contradiction. And in the same way, being the instrument of the enjoyment by the Paramapurusa and the instruments created in sport known from the Sāstra as being permanent, are always desired by the Paramapurusa and so they stay on in that way — this is known from the Sāstra Therefore, having the thoughts fulfilled and extreme resemblance with the Paramapurusa in the case of the Released one (exist), barring dealing with the world ॥ 20 ॥

And on account of the characteristic about the resemblance confined only to enjoyment ॥ 21 ॥

[552] And from the characteristic — viz the propounding in the case of the Released one, resemblance with Brahman, confined only to the enjoyment of the form of realisation of Brahman as it is — is apprehended (that the Sāmā is), barring the dealing with the world, as in

‘He enjoys all desires along with the wise Brahman

(Ta: 21)

Therefore, resemblance with the Paramapurusa, and having the thoughts fulfilled, in the case of the Released one — this is to be described in accordance with the Sruti pointing out to the control of the entire world peculiar to the Paramapurusa — and so the wealth of glory of the Released one is there, barring only the dealing with the world ॥ 21 ॥

[553] If the wealth of glory of the Released one is dependent upon the Paramapurusa, then because he (Paramapurusa) is independent, there is the doubt viz the possibility of the Released one returning to the Samsāra, if He thinks that way — So here (the Sūtrakāra) says

Non-return, on account of the Word, non-return, on account of the Word ॥ 22 ॥

Just as it is known from the Word (Sruti) that there is the Paramapurusa called Parabrahman — uniformly auspicious, the rival (opposite) of everything fit to be abandoned, the cause of the origination etc., of the world, different from all entities omniscient, with thoughts fulfilled, the one ocean of affection for those resorting (to him), extremely merciful, in whose case the possibility of any one equal or superior is out of question, — similarly it is known from the Word (Sruti) itself, that he does not cause the worshippers to return (to this Samsāra), pleased with the propitiation in the form of his worship fortified by the (proper observance of the) duties of the Varnas and Āśramas performed day after day, having turned away the Avidyā of the form of the heap of Karmans, unlimited and difficult to cross, starting from times immemorial, and having made them attain to excessive bliss of the form of the realisation of himself as he is — And the Word (is)

‘He, indeed, acting in this way, as long as he lives, attains to the Brahmaloка and returns not again’ (Cha. 8.15.1)

‘Having attained to me, the high-souled ones, having secured supreme perfection, do not go in for birth again, the impermanent abode of misery’

‘The worlds right up to Brahmaloка, are revolving ones, (O) Arjuna, but on attaining to me, re-birth exists not’

(Gītā 8.15-16)

‘For, I am exceedingly dear to him who knows, and he is also (exceedingly) dear to me

All these are good (noble) ones, but the one who knows is my very Ātman,—thus is my view; for, he with controlled mind abides in me alone, the highest Destination.

The third Quarter of the Second Adhyāya deals with the origination (and dissolution) of the elements, the non-origination of the Soul his nature freedom of the will etc

[328] The first Adhikarana comprises nine Sūtras (1-9), Pūrva-pakṣa-Sūtras are 1, 3 and 4, the Siddhanta-Sūtras are 2, 5-9

(Sūtra 1) The Pūrva-pakṣin says — Ākāśa is not originated, because there is no Sruti to that effect The Chāndogya speaks of Tejas being produced from तद् (Brahman), and Ākāśa is not mentioned The Sruti can only state what is possible the Mundaka Sruti where Ākāśa is said to be produced should be rejected, as a निरवयव entity cannot possibly be created

[329] (Sūtra 2) The Siddhāntin says—The objector's contention is wrong we have actually the Mundaka-passage (एतमाजायते य वायु) before us the Sruti is not always bound down by any Laukika Pramāṇa it can certainly take note of some other Sruti and make the necessary adjustment (निरवयवत्वादि-हेतु Anumāna would be नियत् नियम्, निरवयवत्वात् परमाशुबद्, विद्यत्, नित्यम् विद्युत्वात् आत्मनः).

[330-31] (Sūtras 3 and 4) The Pūrva-pakṣin again argues — The Mundaka-passage must not be interpreted literally, but only metaphorically, as it comes into conflict with the Chāndogya-passage which speaks of Tejas being created first and further Vīyat or Ākāśa is described by the Sruti as Amṛta

It may be objected by some admirers of the सिद्धान्तिन् that such an interpretation of the Sruti passage एतमादात्मन आकाशं समूतं, वायोरग्निं (समूतं) would mean that the same word समूत has to be taken metaphorically with Ākāśa, and understood literally in respect of Vāyu, Tejas etc This is surely strange The answer by the Pūrva-pakṣin is—This is not an uncommon procedure The same word Brahman is used metaphorically to denote Pradhāna in the Mundaka, and primarily to mean Brahman, and this is not objected to by any one.

गोष्पममदात् and दग्धमाग्निं are read as separate Sūtras by Sankara Bhāskara etc , Nimbārka, Śrīkaṇṭha, Baladeva etc , follow Rāmānuja

[331 A] (Sūtras 5-9) The Siddhāntin replies— (Sūtra 5) The Srutis mentioning the origination of Ākāśa cannot be dismissed as being metaphorical, for that would mean that the एकविज्ञानेन सर्वविज्ञानम् emphasised in the Chāndogya would be futile This declaration can be justified only if everything else including Ākāśa is the product of Brahman

Rāmānuja splits प्रतिज्ञाहानि as प्रतिज्ञा + अहानि Baladeva reads the Sūtra as प्रतिज्ञाहानिव्यतिरेकात्

आकाश is definitely said to be ब्रह्मसर्वं (as the मृत्पिण्ड illustration shows) the Jīvas are not different from Brahman, because they are ब्रह्मसर्वं

(Sūtra 6) The Chāndogya also definitely speaks of everything as Brahmakārya, in stating एकमेवाद्वितीयम्, ऐतदात्म्यमिदं सर्वम् etc तत्तेजोऽसृजत simply means Brahman created Tejas not that Tejas was the first to be created and has no power to nullify other Śrutis that speak of Ākāśa and Vāyu as being created by Brahman before Tejas

Most Bhāṣyakāras read 5 and 6 as one Sūtra

(Sūtra 7) Ākāśa is a विकार of Brahman and so, it must be a product (निर्माण उत्पत्ति) of Brahman

लोकवत् is explained by Rāmānuja as follows —When a general statement is made—here are the sons of Devadatta—and only some of them are actually introduced, it is understood that the remaining also are Devadatta's sons

Other interpretations of लोकवत् are—

यावद्विकृतिविकारजात इत्यन्ते तावानेष विभागो लोके दृश्यते । (शङ्कर)

आकाशमपि विकृतम्, लौकिकव्यवहारविषयत्वात् । (वाचस्पति)

लोकव्यवहारानुसारेणैव — यथा लोके दार्वादी सूक्ष्मान्यादेर्निर्मथनादिनाभिभ्यज्यमानानां विकाराणां मेवोत्पत्तिर्भावयिष्यते, तथैव सूक्ष्मावशादाभिव्यक्तस्य कार्याकार्यसंबन्धोत्पत्तिः श्रुतप्रसूयवह्यते । (विज्ञानभिक्षु)

Baladeva reads the Sūtra as यावद्विकारस्तु

अमृतत्वं, as in the case of Gods means only विकारत्वव्यापित्वं, when spoken of in connection with Ākāśa Sankara also remarks — अमृतत्वमुक्तिस्तत्त्वद्विषयत्वमूला इव दिवौक्ता इति वदद्दृष्टव्या । 'आकाशवत्सर्वगतस्य नित्य' इत्यपि प्रसिद्धमहत्त्वेनारशिनोपमानं क्रियते निरतिशयं महत्त्वाय नाकाशसमत्वाय । यथेष्टुरिषं सविता यावतीति क्षिप्रगतिरित्यप्युच्यते नेपुण्यगतिरित्याय, तद्वत् ।

[332] (Sūtra 8) Sankara takes this Sūtra as forming a separate Adhikarāṇa and remarks अतिदेशोऽयम्

योग means सूत्र here Rāmānuja says that this Sūtra is put in to show that Vāyu also like Ākāśa, is originated, and to give Vāyu his due importance

(मातरिश्वन् — Vāyu the Nirukta derives the word as मातरि, अन्तरिक्षे श्वसति मातरि, आद्य अनिति व, मातरि श्वसति वर्धते ।)

If no Sūtra had been there independently referring to Vāyu, in Sūtra 10 below the expression अतः would mean that Tejas has both Ākāśa and Vāyu as its originators but only Vāyu is the cause of Tejas

(Sūtra 9) Brahman cannot be originated there would be no एकविज्ञानेन सर्वविज्ञानम्, if Brahman itself were to be the कार्य of something else

[333] (Sūtra 10) According to Rāmānuja Sūtras 10-17 form one Adhikarāṇa Sūtras 10-13 (12 and 13 are read as one Sūtra by Sankara and others) form the Pūrvapakṣa and Sūtra 14 is the Siddhānta According to Sankara Sūtras 10-12 and Sūtras 13-15, each form three separate Adhikarāṇas

The Pūrvapakṣa arises in this way — The origination of the various elements is mentioned Is one to understand that the succeeding entity is produced from the preceding one only, or is it from Brahman itself taking that form? The Pūrvapakṣin says — the origination is from the केवलतत्त्वस्तु

(Sūtras 11-12) Tejas comes from Vāyu; waters come from Tejas (Agni), and Prithivī (Anna) from waters.

[334] (Sūtra 13) It might be argued that the Chāndogya speaks of Anna as coming from waters; how is it that Anna means Pṛthivī?

The answer is as follows :—

(1) The context (अधिकार) shows that the elements are the subject-matter.

(2) Everything that is fit to be eaten is the विकार of पृथिवी; so there is nothing wrong in referring to the कारण (पृथिवी) by the word (अन्न) denoting the Kārya.

(3) The colour of Agni is red; that of water's is white the colour of Anna is given as dark, so the dark colour must refer to some सजातीय like the Pṛthivī.

(4) Other Śruti-passages actually say मद्भ्यः पृथिवी.

The Śruti says अकाशाद्वायुः and not that Vāyu is produced from Brahman with Ākāśa as its body; so the various elements can be said to come from Brahman परंपरया.

Rāmānuja gives no convincing reason as to why there should be a Pūrvapakṣa at this stage. One should first have a definite statement that the elements are originated, and then the question could have been mooted, whether it is Brahman or Puruṣa that causes the origination, and the answer could come in Sūtra 14.

[335] (Sūtra 14) The Siddhānta is :— The Paramapuruṣa is the real originator everywhere. He creates the world by his own Saṁkalpa, as the Śruti tells us. Everything forms his body, and he is the inner Controller.

It is true that the Śruti does not speak directly of Iksaṇa in the case of Mahat etc., as it does in the case of Tejas etc., but that does not matter, as Mahat etc., are on a par with Tejas etc., both being the परमपुरुषाक्षरी.

[336] (Sūtra 15) the objector points out that the passage,

एतस्मान्जायते प्राणो मनः सर्वेन्द्रियाणि च ।

सं वायुर्ज्योतिरापः पृथिवी विश्वस्य धारिणी ॥

must be taken to mean that the creation takes place in a particular order.

The answer would be :— The Śruti speaks of two क्रमः — आनन्तर्यक्रम as in the above passage and the परंपरया कारणक्रम as in the series, मद्द् — अद्देकार — आकारा etc. In order to reconcile the Śruti-passages, it should be admitted that the different Kāryas originate from Brahman taking the different forms. It must be remembered also that Ākāśa etc., actually denote Brahman itself which is their Ātman. The objector seems to take एतस्मान्जायते as connected with only Prāṇa, but there is no reason why it should not be connected with Manas and Indriyas as well. Thus the passage does not describe the उत्पत्तिक्रम but only the extent of the jurisdiction of Brahman.

Rāmānuja takes विपर्यय to mean ' difference ', and says that the Sūtra corroborates what the previous Sūtra has stated, and thus the Śruti-passages are properly reconciled.

[Rāmānuja's interpretation is not convincing. Śāṅkara and others understand विपर्यय to mean re-absorption, and explain the Sūtra to mean—the process of re-absorption is appropriately the reverse of that seen in the creation, पृथिवी merges into waters, waters into Tejas etc. Śāṅkara remarks—विपर्ययेण तु प्रलयक्रमोऽत उत्पत्तिक्रमाद्भितुमर्हति । तथा हि लोके दृश्यते — येन क्रमेण संपानमाहृतस्ततो विपरीतैः क्रमेणावरोहतीति । Why Rāmānuja should have thought it necessary to give his complicated interpretation is not clear. Perhaps he thought the प्रलयक्रम reference was out of order, when उत्पत्तिक्रम was the matter in hand.

(Sūtra 16) The objector again points out that in the second half of the passage एतस्माज्जायते...the correct उत्पत्तिक्रम of the elements is given (ख, वायु, अथोत्तिष्, अप् and पृथिवी), it is reasonable therefore to suppose that there is उत्पत्तिक्रम in the first half as well (प्राण, मनस् and इन्द्रिय) and so the Śruti need not be understood as referring to direct origination from Brahman.

The answer is — The Śruti refers to all entities, from प्राण right up to पृथिवी and there could be no discrimination, and the different Śruti-passages have to be reconciled as best as possible.

विज्ञान refers to Indriyas as they are the means of विज्ञान.

Śāṅkara's interpretation of this Sūtra appears to be more natural and convincing. According to him, the question is—Where in the order of origination are to be accommodated Manas (Buddhi) and Indriyas which are definitely mentioned in some Śrutis? In the Mundaka, for instance, the Karanas come in between the Ātman and the elements. The Siddhānta is—Actually this need not worry any one much, whatever view about the sense-organs etc., is taken. If they are constituted of the elements, the order is not disturbed (sometimes the elements and sense-organs are mentioned separately but that is to be explained in accordance with the ब्राह्मणपरिब्राजस्वयय—though the परिव्राजक are also Brāhmaṇas, their separate mention is intended to draw special attention to them, when one says ब्राह्मणपरिव्राजस्वयय भोजय); if they are not भौतिक, the order remains undisturbed, whether the Karanas are originated first, or the elements. So, we must understand that in the Mundaka-passage, there is the समावृत्त्यक्रम (the order for recital) and not the उत्पत्तिक्रम.

[337] (Sūtra 17) Śāṅkara takes this Sūtra as forming a separate Adhikarana.

The Pūrvapakṣin says — If all words directly denote Brahman, how can we explain that different words are used by people to denote different entities, both movable and immovable ?

The answer is :—

(A) Really such a reference (व्यपदेश) is भासत (एकदेशे भज्यते, इति) or partial, as it refers only to the प्रसर (while Brahman is the प्रसारिन्) prior to the realisation of the Prakārin

(B) Or, if we read अमात्रः (सुखः), then the sense is — The चराचराचि- शब्द primarily points out to Brahman; for, the denotative power of all words is dependent upon Brahman.

Rāmānuja's interpretation is far-fetched and confusing. According to Śaṅkara, the Sūtra refers to the popular ideas about the उत्पत्ति and प्रलय of the Jīva, and points out that उत्पत्ति and प्रलय affect only the स्थावरजद्रूप bodies, and are caused by the connection with, and separation from the body.

[338] (Sūtra 18) The third Adhikaraṇa has only one Sūtra and the point discussed is, whether the Jīva is born (originated).

The objector says — The प्रतिज्ञा in the Śruti, एकविज्ञानेन सर्वविज्ञानम् which is without any reservations, can be true if everything else than Brahman, including the Jīva, is created.

The answer is — The Jīva or Ātman is not created (Rāmānuja reads न, आत्मा श्रुतेः), as the Śruti says न जायते म्रियते, and other Śruti-passages describe him as Nitya which implies अतृप्तत्वं. The प्रतिज्ञा — एकविज्ञानेन सर्वविज्ञानम् — can still hold good; Jīva can be said to be a Kārya due to ज्ञानसंकीर्तयितृत्वात्; he is not a Kārya involving any change in his nature. Brahman has the Cit and Acit entities as its body. नानात्व and एकत्व are really नामरूपविभागभाव and नामरूपविभागाभाव respectively.

[339] This position is in a sense accepted by the Advaitins as well — The Advaitins regard

(A) the nature of Jīva, as due to Avidyā (but this would mean that Brahman itself is affected by Avidyā),

(B) or, as due to some Upādhi

(but this means that Brahman is affected by the Upādhis),

(C) or that the सनातन Brahman remains three-fold as भोक्तृ (Jīva), भोग्य (the Acit) and नियन्तृ (Paramēśvara)

(but thus Brahman becomes subject to modification).

But the views of the Advaitins are thus associated with some blemish or other. Rāmānuja adds that the Viśiṣṭādvaita view is free from blemish; for, Brahman, even in the कारणवस्था and कारोदस्था (that is, स्थूलसूक्ष्मादस्था, with Cit and Acit as its body) remains the same, possessing all कल्याणगुणः. (Rāmānuja conveniently forgets that the Advaitins would regard the concept of a composite Brahman with Cit and Acit as its body, as the biggest blemish in his system of Viśiṣṭādvaita).

Most Bhāṣyakāras read नामा, अभ्युतेः which is certainly a better arrangement. Besides being on a par with the Sūtra न नियन्तृ, अभ्युतेः the force of न (in नियन्तृत्वात् तावत्) is more properly brought home thereby, the meaning being — Not only is there no Śruti declaring Ātman to be originated, but on the contrary there are scores of Śruti-passages declaring that Ātman is Nitya — thus Ātmasvarūpa is made clear both positively and negatively.

[340] (Sūtra 19) The fourth Adhikaraṇa comprises as many as 14 Sūtras.

Sūtra 19 discusses the nature of Jīva who has been already proved to be non-originated —

(1) Is Jīva Cinmātra (as held by some Bauddhas and Sāmkhyas)?

(2) Is Jīva Acitsvarūpa, having Caitanya as an adventitious (Āgantuka) quality (as held by the Vaiśeṣikas)?

(3) Is Jīva Jñātṛsvarūpa?

The Pūrvapakṣin says—Ātman is Cinmātra as the Śruti says यो विज्ञानेन तिष्ठन् (A Jñātṛ or knower cannot abide in Jñāna); also विज्ञानं यज्ञं तनुते (here Vi-jñāna has obviously the nature of the Agent, performing the sacrifice). This means that neither Jñāna nor Jñātṛtva can be the Svarūpa or nature of Ātman, for in that case, these would be perception at all time everywhere. But we see that there is the absence of Jñāna in the Susupti or Mokṣa state (न प्रेत्य संज्ञास्ति says the Śruti). Caitanya must there be only an Āgantuka quality and Ātman is by nature Jada.

[341] The Siddhāntin says:—The Śrutis make it abundantly clear that Ātman is ज्ञातृस्वरूप; e. g. यो वेदेद् जिघ्राषीति ॥ आत्मन्...कामान्पश्यन् रमते, नोपजनं ह्मन्...; विज्ञानमयः (abounding in ज्ञान), इष्टा, श्रोता --विज्ञानात्मा पुण्य, etc.

Śāṅkara explains ज्ञा as नियच्चैतन्यः, as Jīva is really Brahman itself associated with Upādhis and Brahman is well-known as possessed of Nityacaitanya. In the state of deep sleep, there is not the absence of Caitanya, but only the absence of objects of sense; the sense-organs are useful in bringing out the particular features of the objects; that is all.

Śāṅkara's interpretation of Jñā as Jñānasvarūpa is criticised adversely by many. It is pointed out that Jñā (जानातीति ज्ञः) must mean 'a knower' and not 'knowledge'. We think that even the most bitter critic of Śāṅkara would hesitate to question Śāṅkara's acquaintance with Sanskrit Grammar. The Jīva is often described as विज्ञातृष्वन or ज्ञातृष्वन by the Śruti, and Śāṅkara in conformity with Śruti describes the nature of Jīva as Jñāna. One who is ज्ञानस्वरूप must have, as a matter of course, the power to know. The state of a knower is conditioned by the presence of objects of knowledge etc., one cannot be a knower in a vacuum. So, Śāṅkara emphasises the ज्ञानस्वरूप here. Philosophically, there is hardly any difference between one who is a knower and one who is ज्ञानस्वरूप.

Śāṅkara and others read this Sūtra as ॥ separate Adhikaraṇa, thus giving it its due importance.

[342] (Sūtra 20) According to Rāmānuja, this and the following Sūtras answer the objection:—If Jīva is a knower by nature, there would be perception by him always everywhere as he is all-pervading.

The Siddhāntin says:—Jīva is not विग्रह; he is atomic (अणु) in size; for, the Śruti speaks of Jīva's

(A) departure from the body,

(B) movement towards the Moon, and

(C) return to this world.

These movements are not possible in the case of a Vibhu (all-pervading) entity.

(Sūtra 21) Departure from the body can be explained metaphorically as meaning absence of connection with the body, but the other two movements must be understood as being real.

[343] (Sūtra 22) The Śruti sometimes says महादेव अज आत्मा; but the context shows that the reference there is to the Prājña or Paramātmā.

अनुवित्त means उपास्य or प्राप्य.

(Sūtra 23) The Śruti actually uses the word अणु (atomic) to describe Jīva, and his dimension (Unmāna — उद्गम्य मानम्) is spoken of as the edge of an awl or a hundredth part of a hundredth part of a single hair-end.

[344] (Sūtra 24) It may be objected that if Jīva is Aṇu, how can he experience pain as pervading the whole body ? — The answer is — Just as a drop of sandal-oil, although placed on a small part of the body, gives a pleasurable sensation to the whole body, the Jīva although atomic can have a sensation pervading the whole body,

(Sūtra 25) The objector says that the Candana-illustration is faulty, because while the location of the Candana-oil is actually perceived, no location for the atomic Jīva is available. The answer is — The Śruti gives the heart as the local habitation of the Jīva and so the illustration is quite an apt one,

देशविशेष — the vital parts, eye, ear, nose, heart etc.

(Sūtra 26) Rāmānuja takes this Sūtra as propounding the Siddhānta. There does not exist sufficient justification for this. In that case, a new Adhikaraṇa should have been started with the next Sūtra; but Rāmānuja does not do that though he seems to have begun a new topic with the next Sūtra—how can ज्ञान, ज्ञातुगुण be separate from the ज्ञातृ ?

The Jīva pervades the whole body by his Jñānagūṇa, as the gem or the Sun pervades a wide space by the आलोक (lustre)-गुण, although located in one small place.

Saṅkara along with others reads the Sūtra as गुणद्वया लोकेषु (द्वे द्वय— as in the world, from the popular point of view, and refers to the नानैकानुच्छेदम्).

[345] (Sūtra 27) Jñāna can be separate from Jñātṛ as is certified by the Śruti जानान्येवार्थं पुरः । A Guṇa can remain separate from the Guṇin, as for instance, the Kusuma-gandha (the fragrance of the flower) is experienced far apart from the place where the flower is (But is this not due to the Gandha being wafted along with the minute particles of the flower ?)

Saṅkara and others read तथा च दर्शयति as a separate Sūtra, referring to the passage आ लोभस्य आ नराप्रेमस्य:

(Sūtra 28) The Śruti distinctly says that विज्ञानं is separate from विज्ञातृ (न हि विज्ञातृविज्ञातोर्विपरिलोपो विद्यते). ~~Saṅkara refers to the Śruti~~ विज्ञानमादाय.

There is no material difference about the interpretation of Sūtras 20-28, individually, given by the Bhāṣyakāras. The Sūtrakāra makes use of three analogies, चन्दनवत्, आलोक (or लोक) वत् and गन्धवत्. But the most important or vital difference is that Sankara takes all these Sūtras as giving the view of the Pūrva-pakṣin (Sūtra 29 gives the Siddhānta view). According to Rāmānuja the whole discussion centres on the problem — how can one avoid the contingency of सर्वत्रोपलब्धि if the Jīva is all-pervading and not atomic? This does not appear to be natural as the question about उपलब्धि and अनुपलब्धि is premature here and is discussed separately in Sūtra 32.

Sankara's comments are more to the point. After describing the nature of the Jīva, the Sūtrakāra turns to the question about the dimension of the Jīva. Now the dimension of the Jīva can be one of the three — (१) अणु (२) देहपरिमाण, and (३) विभु. देहपरिमाण is out of question as it cannot exist in a नित्य entity. Jīva is admitted to be नित्य by all (Besides, that view has already been refuted, when the Jaina doctrine was discussed in II 232-34). The Pūrva-pakṣin favours the अणुपरिमाण according to Sankara. It is true that the Pūrva-pakṣa becomes a long one in that case, and is given great importance. But this is not a strong argument to question Sankara's arrangement, possibly the Sūtrakāra wants to give as long a rope as possible to the Pūrva-pakṣin to secure greater glory for the Siddhāntin.

[346] (Sūtra 29) This is a very important Sūtra. Rāmānuja understands the Sūtra as answering the query—How is it that the Ātman is designated as Jñāna (विज्ञान यज्ञ तनुते), although he is the knower (ज्ञातृ) ?

तत्-विज्ञान विज्ञानगुणसारत्वादात्मनो विज्ञानव्यपदेश is the answer. प्राज्ञवत्—As Prājña is designated Ānanda, as Ānanda is his सारभूत-गुण. Rāmānuja connects this discussion with the Sūtra ज्ञोऽत एव which stands at the beginning of this Adhikarāṇa (ज्ञोऽत एव as has been already remarked, is taken as forming a separate Adhikarāṇa by many)

It would be seen that तत् is used twice in the Sūtra (तद्गुण and तद्व्यपदेश). It is reasonable to hold that तत् must mean the same thing in both places, and तत् must also have been referred to before. The interpretations by the various Bhāṣyakāras would have to be judged accordingly —

(1) Sankara — तस्या, बुद्धेर्युगलं नार प्रधान यस्यात्मन सत्सारित्वे सभवाति स तद्गुणसार । तस्य भाव बुद्धिपरिमाणेन, अस्य परिमाण (अणुत्वादि) व्यपदेश । that is (Sankara takes the first तत् to refer to बुद्धि and the second तत् to अणुत्व) There is apparent discrepancy here. Sankara could have stopped at explaining the first तत् as अणुत्व but he chooses to give the additional information that अणुत्व is specially associated with Buddha which is often spoken of as extremely subtle (सूक्ष्म)

(2) Bhāskara on the whole follows Sankara

(3) Nimbārka — विद्युत्त्वगुणत्वानित्य विद्यमिति व्यपदिष्ट (that is, the point at issue is — If Ātman is अणु why is he called विभु, नित्य etc ?

(4) Srikantha — ज्ञानगुणसारत्वादात्मनो ज्ञानव्यपदेश ।

(5) Vijñānabhikṣu :— उपाधिमूलादणुगुणसारत्वात्, अणुगुणव्यपदेशो जीवे (this is practically the same as Śaṅkara's) यथा प्राज्ञ ईश्वरे मायापरमाण्वणुपाधिगुणसारत्वेन मायादिगुणव्यपदेशः ।

(6) Vallabha :—तस्य ब्रह्मणो गुणः प्रज्ञादृष्टत्वादयस्त एवात्र जीवे सार इति जीवे भगवद्व्यपदेशः ।

That अणुत्व of the Jīva is the matter in hand here is most probable. Interpretations of तद्व्यपदेशः as विद्यु-ज्ञान-भगवद्व्यपदेशः, are not therefore acceptable.

Vijñānabhikṣu's interpretation is the best, as he explicitly takes both the तत् words to mean Aṇu. Śaṅkara means the same thing, but he does not make it explicit in so many words that बुद्धिगुण is the same as अणुगुण.

Another important point which seems to have been missed is that the Sūtrakāra uses the expression तद्व्यपदेशः (that designation or designation by that); that is to say, that the Jīva is called or designated अणु, not that he is अणु. This definitely corroborates Śaṅkara's position. व्यपदेश does not refer to the actual Svarūpa or nature of a thing, but something metaphorical. Rome is called 'The Eternal city' but is not eternal; the Lord is often called 'Father and mother' which cannot be understood literally.

प्राज्ञवत् — This illustration is not to be understood in the ordinary sense of a Dīpānta. The Sūtrakāra wants simply to point out that the Paramātmā also, like the Jīva, is designated in various ways (Ānanda, Vijñāna etc.).

[347] (Sūtra 30) There is no harm in describing Jīva as Vijñāna, as it is a life-long attribute of the Jīva, just as गोत्व is the special (स्वरूपनिरूपणधर्म) attribute of a bull, persisting as long as the गो exists. Rāmānuja adds, यकारादात्मनोऽपि स्वप्रकाशत्वेन ज्ञानमिति व्यपदेशो 'न दोष' इति समुच्चिनोति. Jñāna and Ātman, both are स्वप्रकाश, so, Ātman can be designated as Jñāna. Rāmānuja here does not take तद्दर्शनात् as referring to any Śruti-passage. दर्शन usually refers to some Śruti.

Śaṅkara understands योऽयं विज्ञानमयः, etc., as referred to by तद्दर्शनात्, and remarks यावदयमात्मा संसारी भवति. यावदस्य सम्यग्दर्शनेन संसारिणश्च न निवर्तते तावदस्य धुदया संयोगो न क्षाम्यति ।

Nimbārka — जीवस्य गुणनिरूपणो विधुत्वव्यपदेशो न विरुद्धः 'त हि विज्ञातुर्विज्ञातेर्विपरिलोपो दृश्यते' इति तद्दर्शनात् ।

Vijñānabhikṣu — उपाधेरुक्तः करणस्य यावदात्मावस्थित्यवस्थानात्, नित्यत्वादिति यावत् । तद्दर्शनात्...कर्मणि विज्ञानमयश्च, आत्मा इत्यादिभित्त्यर्थः ।

(Sūtra 31) The objector says — How is it that there is the absence of Jñāna in the state of deep sleep etc.? The answer is that Jñāna is there latent or dormant, just as the virile power is latent in a child, but is manifested only in youth. Expressions like न त्रैलोक्यं संज्ञास्ति do not speak of the absence of Jñāna in the Released, but only that of जन्मनाशादिदर्शन.

The seven Dhātus are :— तक्, अयक्, मांश्, जेदस्, अस्मि, मज्जा and धातु.

The three Malas are :— बात, पित्त and कफ.

[348] (Sūtra 32) If Ātman is only Jñāna and Sarvagata (all-pervading), the following blemishes are inevitable :—

(1) There would be always Upalabdhi and Anupalabdhi.

(2) There would be only Upalabdhi, or only Anupalabdhi.

(3) Even if Upalabdhi and Anupalabdhi are admitted to be dependent on the Karaṇas (sense-organs), as the Ātman is Sarvagata, he would always be connected with the sense-organs, and the above blemishes would still be there.

Śaṅkara :— Antaḥkaraṇa must be admitted to be the Upādhi of Ātman to avoid Nityopalabdhi and Nityānupalabdhi—

अन्यतरस्य, आत्मनः, इन्द्रियस्य वा श्रुतप्रतिबन्धोऽभ्युपगन्तव्यः ।

Bhāskara :— अन्यथा, आत्मोन्द्रियविद्ययाणां संनिधौ नित्योपलब्धिः स्यात्, नित्यं चानुपलब्धिप्रसङ्ग अन्यतरनियमो वा ...

Nimbārka :— सर्वगततामवादे...बन्धमोक्षयोर्नित्यं प्रसङ्गः स्यात्, नित्यबद्धो वा नित्यमुपलब्धिं वाप्स्यति, इत्यन्यतरनियमो वा स्यात् ।

[349] (Sūtra 33) The fifth Adhikaraṇa comprises eight Sūtras (Śaṅkara takes Sūtra 40, यथा च तक्षोभयथा, as constituting a separate Adhikaraṇa).

The question discussed is :— To whom does the Kartṛtva belong — to the Jīva, or to the Guṇas (as held by the Sāṅkhyas who regard the Puruṣa as a non-doer) ?

The Pūrvapakṣin says :— The Kartṛtva does not belong to the Jīva; the Kātha expressly says नायं हन्ति न हन्यते. The Gītā says that Kartṛtva belongs to the Prakṛti, and Bhokṛtva to the Puruṣa.

The Siddhānta is :—The Śāstric injunctions यजेत स्वर्गकामः etc., obviously refer to the Jīva, who being Cetana is in a position to act according to the dictates of the Śāstra. The Acetana Prakṛti or the Guṇas cannot do this. The Gītā simply wants to say that the Kartṛtva of the Jīva is not due to the nature of the Jīva, but due to the association of the Guṇas and is also dependent upon the permission of the Paramātmā.

(Sūtra 34) Śaṅkara and others read this Sūtra as two Sūtras विहारोपदेशाच्च and उपादानाच्च ।

The Bṛhadāraṇyaka tells us that the Jīva catching hold of the Prāṇas sports on in the body at will.

(Sūtra 35) In the passage विज्ञानं यज्ञं तनुते, विज्ञान cannot mean Buddhi or Antaḥkaraṇa which is but a Karaṇa (instrument); if that was the sense, the expression विज्ञानेन (not विज्ञानम्) would have been used. विज्ञान here means Jīva.

Madhva :— आत्मानमेव लोकमुपासीतेति क्रियायां व्यपदेशाच्च, अन्यथा तेनैव लोकमिति व्यपदेशः स्यात् ।

Vijñānabhikṣu :— 'मनसा संकल्पयति' इत्यादिषु शब्देनैव क्रियायां कर्तृत्वव्यपदेशाच्च, न चेज्जीवः कर्ता किं त्विन्द्रियस्य कारणमेव स, तदा संकल्पत दृश्यादिरूपो निर्देशस्तत्र विपर्यय एव स्यात्, सुश्रूतेत्यर्थः ।

(Sūtra 36) If Prakṛti were the doer or Agent (Kartṛ) and not the Ātman, all Karmans would be enjoyable by all Ātmans, as Prakṛti is common to all, or, no one would enjoy anything as was pointed out in the case of Ātman (if Ātman were सर्वगत, there would be नित्योपलब्धिः and नित्यानुपलब्धिः) in Sūtra 32 above. There would be no Niyama in the case of Antaḥkaraṇa etc., as well.

Śaṅkara :— यथायमात्मोपलब्धिः प्रति स्वतन्त्रोऽप्यनियमेनेष्टमानिष्टं चोपलभते, एवमनियमेनैवेष्टमानिष्टं च संपादयिष्यति ।

Madhva :— यथा ज्ञाने, इदं शास्त्रासीत्यनियमः प्रतीयते, एवं कर्मण्यपि जीवस्य ।

Śrīkara :— यथा पुण्डितस्य शिष्यस्यानिध्यामावे तद्विद्यप्रवचननियमकर्तृत्वशक्तिसंश्लेषवत् तथा जीवस्य स्वान्तःकरणसमायोगेन सर्वकर्तृत्वम् । सर्वशालककर्तृत्वानियमो न संभवति ।

Vijñānabhikṣu :— तस्य च कर्तृत्वस्योपलब्धिवदनियमो नास्ति । यथा जीयस्याग्न्याध्यव्यवैतन्यं नियतं यावद्द्रव्यभावि चेत् कर्तृत्वं भवतीत्यर्थः ।

(Sūtra 37) If Buddhi is the agent, it would have to be the enjoyer as well, which means that Ātman would no longer possess his भोक्तृत्वदायित्वम्.

Nimbārka — बुद्धेः कर्तृत्वे करणशक्तिर्ह्येतत्, कर्तृशक्तिः स्यात्, अतो जीवः कर्ता ।

Vijñānabhikṣu — आमदातजभ्रीकृतस्य गमनादिशक्तिरित्यर्थान्, सामर्थ्यस्याप्यभावाद् ।

(Sūtra 38) Samādhi is recommended as means to secure Mokṣa; if Buddhi were the agent, it could not possibly have the knowledge in the Samādhi state, in the form 'I am different from the Prakṛti.' Only Ātman can be the agent (Kartṛ) therefore.

Vijñānabhikṣu — आत्मनो नित्यकर्तृत्वे समाधेर्व्यापारोपसमस्याभावप्रसङ्गाच्च न नियम इत्यर्थः ।

(Sūtra 39) Just as a carpenter, although in possession of the tools of his trade, works or works not, according to his will, so the Ātman is engaged in activity according to his will—This disposes of the contention that if Ātman is Kartṛ, his Kartṛtva would be constant.

This is an important Sūtra and Śaṅkara gives it the status of an Adhikaraṇa. According to Śaṅkara, this Sūtra shows the Kartṛtva of the Jīva in its proper perspective. कर्तृत्व depends upon the Upādhis superimposed upon the Ātman in the Vyavahārāvasthā. The activity of a carpenter depends upon his being possessed of his tools and his pleasure or pain depends upon how far he identifies himself with his tools. Śaṅkara takes च to mean 'but', and comments on the Sūtra as follows— त्वर्थं चार्थं चः पठितः । यथा तु तक्षा लोके वात्स्यादिकरणहस्तो दुःखी भवति, विमुक्तवात्स्यादिकरणः सुखी भवति, एवमविद्याप्रत्युपस्थापितद्वैतसंश्लेषात् आत्मा दुःखी भवति, परं ब्रह्म प्रविश्य सुखी भवति ।

Bhāskara — यथा च तक्षा वात्स्यादिकरणयुक्तः कर्ता तद्विमुक्तश्चाकर्तोति ।

Nimbārka — आत्मेच्छया यथा तक्षा करोति, न करोति, इत्युभयथा व्यवस्था सिध्यति, बुद्धेः कर्तृत्वे, इच्छाभावाद् व्यवस्थाभावः ।

Vallabha — कर्तृभोक्तृत्वयोर्भेदो भविष्यतीति चेत्, न । यथा तक्षा रथं निर्माय तत्रारटो विहरति पीठं वा । स्वतो वा न व्याप्रियते वात्स्यादिद्वारेण वा ।

Vijñānabhikṣu — यथैकरूप एव तक्षा वात्स्याद्युत्कर्षादिमानुषाधिबलान्, स्वतस्तु परमार्थतत्त्वद्वैतः, इत्युभयथा भवति, एवं जीवो बुद्धिकर्तृत्वादेवोपाधिबलान् कर्ता ।

[350] (Sūtra 40) The sixth Adhikaraṇa comprises two Sūtras.

The Śruti-passages make it quite clear that the Kartṛtva (or the freedom of the will) of the Jīva is under the direction of the Paramātmān who is the Antaryāmin staying in the heart of the Jīva.

[351] (Sūtra 41) The Paramātmān makes the Jīva act, not arbitrarily, but in accordance with the effort put forth by the Jīva himself. The Paramātmān creates in the Jīva interest in certain acts, according to the deserts of the Jīva who alone enjoys the fruit of his Karman.

The case of the Jīva is similar to that of A and B who are the joint owners of some property. A with the consent of B presents a portion of the property to the king who rewards him duly. Though B's consent plays an important part in the transaction, it is A alone who enjoys the reward.

वैयर्थ्यादि — By आदि, Rāmānuja understands अनुग्रह, निग्रह etc.

Vijñānabhikṣu — अनिमोक्षादिप्रसङ्गादयम् ।

[352] The seventh Adhikaraṇa comprises eleven Sūtras and brings the third Quarter to a close.

(Sūtra 42) According to Rāmānuja, the question is —

(1) Is the Jīva quite different from the Highest Brahman (because the Śruti speaks of Bheda between Jīva and Brahman the Śruti-passages speaking of Abheda can be explained metaphorically) ?

(2) Is Jīva Brahman itself under illusion (because तत्त्वमसि etc., definitely show that the Jīva really has Brahman as his Ātman the नानात्ववृत्तिs only describe not the real state of things, but what is known from the Pratyakṣa etc.,) ?

(3) Is Jīva Brahman associated with the Upādhis (because the arrangement about Bandha and Mokṣa in the case of the Jīva can be properly explained only if the Upādhis come into the picture) ?

(4) Is Jīva a portion of Brahman ?

[353] The Siddhānta is — Jīva is a portion of Brahman.

Jīva is described as both identical with and different from Brahman, some recluses actually describe Brahman as being Dāśa, Kṛtāva etc., (that is, pervading all Jīvas).

It is absurd to talk of Nānātva - Śrutis as referring to what is popularly known from the Pramāṇas, Pratyakṣa etc.

It is more absurd to speak of Brahman as Bhrānta (subject to illusion), when the Śruti actually describes the sentient Brahman as creating the world by its Saṃkalpa and controlling the Jīva as the inner Controller.

Jīva cannot be Brahman associated with the Upādhis either, for, in that case the description of Brahman as the Niyāntr, and Jīva as the Niyāmya would be meaningless.

So, we must admit Jīva to be a portion of Brahman to account for both Ekatva and Nānātva.

Sankara explains अक्ष as अक्ष इवाक्षो न हि निर्वयवस्य मुख्योऽयं समवति । Sankara is naturally criticised for taking अक्ष to mean अक्ष इव. Rāmānuja also quietly takes अक्ष to mean विशेषणम्. It appears that the Sūtrakāra finding it impossible to reconcile the two opposite views Ekatva and Nānātva actually mentioned in the Śruti makes no attempt to reconcile them (as in the case of the Sūtra श्रुतेस्तु दादृक्त्वत् II. 1-27). The Sūtrakāra does not say अंश इव, nor does he say that Brahman has Jīva for its शरीर. Both Rāmānuja and Saṅkara try to point out to a solution out of the difficulty.

[354] (Sūtra 43) The Mantra पादोऽस्य विश्वा भूतानि confirms that Jīva is an अंश (पाद means अंश, the singular number अंशः is जात्यभिप्रायम्, that is, it means 'portions' also, as the Jīvas are many).

Saṅkara reads the Sūtra as मन्त्रवर्णाच्च.

(Sūtra 44) The Gītā says the same thing (ममेवांशो...).

Saṅkara reads the Sūtra as अपि च स्मर्यते.

Vijñānabhikṣu understands by स्मर्यते ' एकः छद्मोऽक्षरो नित्यः ' इति विष्णुपुराणगीतामोक्ष-धर्मादिष्वित्यर्थः ।

[355] (Sūtra 45) Saṅkara reads the Sūtra as प्रकाशादिवत्त्वे च परः, that is, without तु.

If it is pointed out that if Jīva is a portion of Brahman, the blemishes of the Jīva would affect Brahman as well—the answer is:—The Highest Brahman cannot be so affected; for, in the case of two entities involving विशेषविशेषणभाव (same as अंशित्व-अंश) स्वभावचैतन्य is actually seen. It appears that Rāmānuja takes the प्रकाशादि illustration as proving that Jīva is a portion of Brahman, like प्रकाश, of Agni, the Sun etc., or गोत्र, of गोव्यभिः; or the body, of the one possessed of a body. (But this has already been proved in Sūtra 42) नैव परः is explained as यथाभूतो जीवो न तथाभूतः परः — Jīva and Para are not affected in the same way; but immediately in the next sentence, Rāmānuja again refers to the Para (Ātmān) as being different from Jīva (Ātmā) making use of the Prabhā-illustration (just as Prabhā is different from the entity possessing Prabhā) All this unnecessarily has led to the absence of clarity. Other Bhāṣyakāras give a more natural interpretation which is easy to understand:—

Saṅkara :— यथा जीवः संस्कारदुःखमनुभवति, नैव पर ईश्वरोऽनुभवतीति... प्रकाशादिवादिनि निर्दोषो-पन्यासः । यथा प्रकाशः सौरधाम्द्रमसी वा विद्यद्व्याप्यावतिष्ठमानोऽनुत्पत्त्याद्युपाधिसंबन्धात्, तेष्वनुवन्नादिभावं प्रतिपद्यमानेषु तत्तद्भावमिव प्रतिपद्यमानोऽपि न परमार्थस्तद्भावं प्रतिपद्यते । (Saṅkara also explains the आदि in प्रकाशादि as referring to the घटाक्षरा and सूर्यप्रतिविम्ब illustrations).

Nimbārka :— जीवस्य परमपुष्टाक्षिन्वे, अंशो सुसदृशं नानुभवति यथा प्रकाशादिः स्वादिगतगुण-दोषवर्जितो भवति ।

Śrīkara :— प्रकाशविशिष्टानां मणिप्रभृतीनां प्रकाशो विशिष्टैरदृशो यथावास्तद्वत् । आदिशब्दाद्विशेष-विशेषणैकस्वभावा जातिगुणादयो गृह्यन्ते ।

Vijñānabhikṣu :— अंशित्वेऽपि परः कारणं ब्रह्म जीवश्च भवति । प्रकाशादिवत् । यथा प्रकाश-शालोक आकाशवाय्वादयश्चाक्षिन्, चक्षुःश्रोत्रत्वगादीनां स्पर्शानामुपघातादिदोषवत्त्वेऽपि नोपहताः कदापि भवन्ति, तथैवेत्यर्थः ।

(Sūtra 46) Parāśara and others, in the Viṣṇupurāṇa etc., speak of the अंशशिभाव of Jagat and Brahman, so also the Śruti passages. Why Rāmānuja refers to the Viṣṇupurāṇa-passages which speak of the अंशशिभाव of Brahman and Jagat, when the discussion in this Adhikaraṇa centres round the relation of Brahman and Jīva, is not clear.

Saṅkara, Bhāṣkara and Vijñānabhikṣu say — स्मरन्ति च व्याख्यदयः ।

[356] (Sūtra 47) If the objection is raised — if all the Jivas are equally portions of Brahman, why do the Sāstras enjoin different duties for different castes ? — the answer is — The injunctions and prohibitory regulations concern the bodies of the Jivas though Agni is the same everywhere, the fire from the fire-sanctuary is to be regarded as sacred, not the fire from the cemetery food is permitted to be taken only from a Brāhmaṇa well-versed in the Vedas, not from one who is notorious for his bad behaviour

अभिहारः — One who commits adultery.

Sankara — ' ऋतौ भार्यामुपेयात् ' इत्यनुज्ञा । ' शुर्वद्वन्ना नोपगच्छेत् ' इति परिहारः । यथा ज्योतिष एतत्वेऽपि अग्निं कन्यात् परिह्रियते, नेतर । यथा च प्रकाश एतस्यापि सवितुरमेध्यदेशसंबद्ध परिह्रियते, नेतर इच्छिभूमिष्ठ । यथा भौमा प्रदेशा वज्रवैद्युदादय उपादीयन्ते, भौमा अपि सन्तो नरकलेवरादय परिह्रियन्ते । यथा क्षत्रपुरीष गवां पवित्रतया परिह्रियन्ते, तदेव जात्यन्तरे परिवर्ज्यते, तद्वत् ।

(Sūtra 48) असंतति — The state of not being all-pervading, that is, अष्टव व्यतिकर — भोगव्यतिकरः .

Even though all Jivas are a portion of Brahman, there would not be any confusion about the enjoyment on their part as the Jivas are atomic and mutually different

Sankara takes असंतति to mean — there is no contact of the Ātman with all the bodies, as the Jiva is restricted in his function by the Upādhis, so no कर्मव्यतिकर or फलव्यतिकर is possible

Vijñānabhikṣu — अव्यतिकरः, असङ्ग इत्यर्थः । सतति कार्यं विकार इति, अविकारित्वादित्यर्थः ।

[357] (Sūtra 49) Bhāskara reads the Sūtra as आभासा एव वा (Rāmānuja also takes cognisance of this reading) According to Rāmānuja आभास means हेतुआभास

If the objector argues that the भोगव्यवस्था can also be explained as being due to the Upādhis, the answer is — The syllogism अखण्डैरसंप्रकाशमात्रस्वरूपे प्रकाशि जीवभोगव्यवस्थोपपद्यते, स्वरूपव्यतिरोधानपूर्वकोपाधिसत्त्वात् । which might be put forth by the objector to prove his contention, is obviously fallacious It has been pointed out before that the प्रकाशस्वरूपव्यतिरोधान is nothing but प्रकाशनास itself Besides, there is श्रुतिविरोधः as well

Even if the Upādhis are regarded as unreal, so long as the nature of Brahman screened by the Upādhis is regarded as the same, the भोगव्यतिकर is bound to persist

[358] (Sūtra 50) The objector says — I regard the Upādhis as real, and hold that the भोगभोगव्यवस्था is due to the beginningless Adṛṣṭa or 'Unseen'

The answer is — This does not improve the objector's position for, the Adṛṣṭa, like the Upādhis, cannot affect the real nature of Brahman and the Anyama would still be there.

(Sūtra 51) Meditation etc, which are the cause of Adṛṣṭa are also unhelpful in accounting for the भोगभोगव्यवस्था for the same reason as above

[359] (Sūtra 52) If it be argued that the भोगव्यवस्था is possible, because the Upādhis can affect the various portions (Pradeśas) in one and the same Brahman, the answer is — The Vyatikara cannot be prevented in that way; for, all the Pradeśas are actually included in the Upādhis; everything is Brahmapradeśa, and this would make Brahman experience grief connected with the Pradeśa.

Rāmānuja adds that the Sūtras आमास एव च etc., point out to the blemishes in the doctrine of the आत्मैकवादिन् who believe in the Vedas; while the Sūtras नित्योपलब्धि... (II. 3. 32), उपलब्धिबन्धनियमः (II-336) refer to the blemishes in the doctrine of the सर्वगतजीवादिन् who do not admit the authority of the Vedas.

The important Sūtra in this Adhikaraṇa is undoubtedly आमास एव च.

Rāmānuja, Nimbārka and Śrīkantha take Ābhāsa to mean Hetvābhāsa. Vijñānabhikṣu gives two interpretations—प्रकृत आत्मा जीवो हेत्वाभास इवेत्यर्थः । अथवा, स च जीवो ब्रह्मवदाभासमानः प्रकाशमात्राधिष्ठातृ एवेत्यर्थः । Vallabha—आमास एव जीवः, आनन्ददास्य तिरोहितत्वात् ।

The interpretation of Ābhāsa as Hetvābhāsa can safely be rejected. Ābhāsa means usually 'appearance', 'reflection' and that meaning certainly suits the context. Vijñānabhikṣu's second interpretation (ब्रह्मवदाभासमानः प्रकाशमानः) is also worth considering. This Sūtra apparently gives the considered opinion of the Sūtrakāra that the Jīva is Ābhāsa, which more or less corroborates Śaṅkara's view. The Sūtrakāra has implicit faith in the Śruti and does not attempt to explain away the contradictions, as the Bhāṣyakāras do.

This Quarter deals at length with the question of the size of the Soul. Rāmānuja believes in the plurality of Souls and regards them as atomic in size. The Sūtra तद्व्यपारस्तस्य तद्व्यपदेशः (II. 3. 29), however, cannot be taken as supporting Rāmānuja as Anu is said to be the Vyapadeśa of the Soul. There is not much of a difference of opinion among the Bhāṣyakāras, about the freedom of the will, the enjoyment of the fruit of the Karman etc. But one cannot resist the impression that Śaṅkara's interpretation of the Sūtras as a whole is, by and large, the only one that explains the Śruti-passages satisfactorily.

II. 4

This Quarter deals with the origination of sense-organs and Prāṇa.

The first Adhikaraṇa comprises three Sūtras. Śaṅkara and Nimbārka read the second Sūtra as two Sūtras; Madhva adds one more Sūtra प्रतिज्ञानुरोपाय before Sūtra 3, and makes three Adhikaraṇas out of the Sūtras.

[360] (Sūtra 1) The Pūrvapakṣin says :— तया refers to जीव-यथा जीवो नोत्पद्यते, तया प्राणाः (इन्द्रियाणि) नोत्पद्यन्ते. The Śruti says — प्राणा वाक् श्रवणः which means that these Rṣis existed prior to the creation of the world.

The Siddhānta is — तया must refer to वियदादि, and the meaning is — Just as Ākāśa etc., are originated, so are the sense-organs, because only Ātman was there prior to creation.

The word Prāṇa often means Paramātman and the word Rṣi also appropriately gives the sense, the Omniscient.

[361] (Sūtra 2) The plural number प्राणाः, श्रवणः, must be understood as just metaphorical, or indicates respect (आदरायै).

(Sūtra 3) An additional reason to prove that the word Prāṇa denotes the Paramātmā is that नामयेय etc., the province of वाक् etc., are spoken of as being there before the creation of Ākāśa etc.

The first Sūtra तथा प्राणाः raises an important issue—तथा presupposes some thing यथा, some Upamāna. As Śaṅkara rightly points out, the preceding Sūtras (in II. 3) refer to सर्वगतः बहुलः सः which can not be the Upamāna, as there is no सादृश्य; Adṛṣṭa can not be the Upamāna either, as once देहानियम is pointed out, there is no point in referring to Adṛṣṭa again, Jīva can not be the Upamāna, as Jīva is unborn, and here the Prāṇas are obviously to be described as originated. Śaṅkara therefore suggests that the Upamāna should be sought after in some Dṛṣṭānta in the Śruti (एतन्मादात्मनः सर्वे प्राणाः सर्वे लोकाः सर्वे देवाः सर्वाणि भूतानि द्युचरन्ति), the sense being—Just as the different Lokas etc., are originated from the Highest Brahman, so also are originated the Prāṇas. Or, it is permitted (Jaimini III. 4 15 पानव्याप्य तद्वत्) that an Upamāna far away (व्यवहित) can be made use of. So here, the Viyat etc., mentioned at the beginning of the last Quarter could be taken as the Upamāna intended—

It appears that all the Sūtras here should have come immediately after Sūtra 15 in the last Quarter, so as to bring all the originated entities together. In that case, the whole discussion about the Soul, his size etc., could be relegated to this Quarter; or, we may suppose that the points regarding the Soul are stated inter alia or by way of parenthesis (this, however, would make those points rather unimportant). Apparently the Bhāṣyakāras dared not to question the arrangement of the Sūtras by the Sūtrakāra, and discuss the matter in conformity with the maxim स्थितस्य गतिविन्तनीया.

Vallabha, curiously enough, holds that the Prāṇas are unborn like the Jivas; the Prāṇas are just like the Jivas, only lacking in the चिदज्ञा; they have the Utkrānti literally and do exist prior to creation. Vallabha stands alone among the Bhāṣyakāras, to give this interpretation.

Rāmānuja takes गोण्यसंभवात्, as गोणी, असंभवात्; Śaṅkara dissolves the expression as गोण्याः, असंभवात् and remarks:—विशदयिकरणे हि 'गोण्यसंभवात्' इति पूर्वपक्षमुच्यत्वात्, गोणी जन्मद्युतिरसंभवादिति व्याख्यातम्. प्रतिज्ञाहान्या च तत्र सिद्धान्तोपभेदितः। इह तु सिद्धान्तमुच्यत्वात्, गोण्या जन्मद्युतेरसंभवादिति व्याख्यातम्. तदनुपपेक्षेन त्विहापि गोणी जन्मद्युतिरसंभवादिति व्याचक्षणाः प्रतिज्ञाहानिरपेक्षिता स्यात्।

Rāmānuja sticks to the interpretation rejected by Śaṅkara, and refers the असंभव to वदुर्ग, which is not convincing.

[362] (Sūtra 4) The second Adhikaraṇa comprises two Sūtras.

The question discussed is :—How many Prāṇas (Indriyas) are there ?

The Pūrvapakṣin says—The Prāṇas are seven in number, because only seven are said to be moving out etc., and they are particularly specified in the Śruti (5 Jñānendriyas, and Manas and Buddhi).

Some take Prāṇas to be eight (अष्टौ ग्रहाः, hand being added to the above seven; they are called ग्रहाः, because they grasp the objects); some take them to be nine (7 associated with the head — 2 eyes, 2 ears, 2 nostrils and 1 mouth;)

and two more, Pāyu and Upastha that are lower down, the organ of evacuation and the organ of generation.)

[363] (Sūtra 5) The Siddhāntin's view is — The Prāṇas are eleven. Both hands and feet, being the instruments of enjoyment (Bhogopakaraṇa), must be included. Manas itself is described in some places as Buddhi, Ahaṁkāra and Citta, and Ātman as Manas. In the Smṛtis also 5 Karmendriyas + 5 Jñānendriyas + Manas — eleven Indriyas are described.

Nābhi is mentioned separately by some, and some would like the number to be fourteen. There is general agreement about the number eleven; any higher number can be explained away as referring to Kāryabheda or Vṛttibheda.

Śaṅkara understands गति to mean both अङ्गति and movement, and remarks कार्यजातवशात्, स्वेकादशत्वात्प्राज्ञं प्राणनिपत्यं प्रमाणमिति स्थितम् ।... तस्मात्, एकादशैव प्राणाः शब्दतः कार्यैतद्वेति सिद्धम् ।

[364] (Sūtra 6) The third Adhikaraṇa contains two Sūtras.

The Prāṇas are atomic in size, as they are not perceptible and are capable of movement, Utkrānti etc. they are no doubt called Ananta, but Ānantya in their case does not mean Vibhutva or being all-pervading, but refers to their Kāryabāhulya or manifold activity.

Śaṅkara takes this Sūtra as forming an Adhikaraṇa by itself.

(Sūtra 7) The Chief Prāṇa referred to in the passage आनीत्, अवात् etc., is originated as there is no passage condemning its origination. The passage आनीत्...refers to the Paramātmā as the expression अवात् (which shows that the state of things described is one existing before the Vāta, one of the Mahābhūtas, was created) points out.

[365] (Sūtra 8) The fourth Adhikaraṇa comprises four Sūtras.

The question is—Is the Chief Prāṇa

- (1) the second Mahābhūta Vāyu, or
- (2) merely the Spandakriyā, or
- (3) Vāyu in a particular state ?

The Pūrvapakṣin says—The Chief Prāṇa is Vāyu, as the passage अवात् स वायुः mentions that fact in so many words; or the Chief Prāṇa may be just the Vāyukriyā, as the Prāṇa is more widely known for some Kriyā, expiration etc.

The Siddhāntin says—Both the above views are wrong. The Śruti describes Prāṇa as distinct from Vāyu, and Vāyukriyā cannot be regarded as separate from Vāyu. Prāṇa denotes a substance possessed of Kriyā, not merely Kriyā.

[366] (Sūtra 9) The Chief Prāṇa is just an Upakaraṇa of the Jīva, like the eye etc., this is obvious from the fact that the Prāṇa is mentioned in the Śruti along with the eye etc. It is well known that only Sajātiya entities are mentioned together.

[367] (Sūtra 10) The objector says —If the Prāṇa is an Upakaraṇa, you must point out the particular activity or help for which Prāṇa is responsible. This you cannot do.

The Siddhāntin's reply is — It is true that the Prāṇa actually does not do anything. But the very fact that, when the Prāṇa goes out, the sense-organs cease to function, shows that the Prāṇa does oblige the Jīva, by supporting the body and the sense-organs.

[368] (Sūtra 11) The objector says — If your contention viz' Nāma-bheda and Kārya-bheda (different name and different activity) entitle an entity to be regarded as an independent one, then the five divisions of Prāṇa—Prāṇa, Apāṇa, Vyāṇa, Udāna and Samāna — ought to be classed as independent entities.

The Siddhāntin's reply is — Prāṇa, Apāṇa etc., are merely Vṛttivīśeṣas (different functions) of Prāṇa, which is clear from the Śruti-statement एतत्सर्वं प्राण एव. Similarly, the Śruti describes as Manas itself the various Vṛttis of Manas—Kāma, Saṁkalpa, Vicikitsā, Śraddhā, Aśraddhā, Dhṛti, Adhṛti, Hī, Dhī and Bhī.

[369] (Sūtra 12) The fifth Adhikaraṇa comprises only one Sūtra.

The Chief Prāṇa is Aṇu (subtle), as Uktānti etc., are associated with him. Passages like सर्वं प्राणे प्रतिष्ठितम् which show Prāṇa to be all-pervading are to be understood as merely glorifying Prāṇa on whom the stability of everything depends.

[370] (Sūtra 13) The sixth Adhikaraṇa comprises two Sūtras.

प्राणवृत्ता इत्यत्र is read by Sahkara as a separate Sūtra.

Jīva is the Adhiṣṭhāna of Prāṇa etc., which are his means for enjoyment; the Śruti also speaks of Agni and other Deities as presiding over the sense-organs (Agni presides over Vāk; Āditya over the eye; Vāyu over the Prāṇa; Quarters over the ear; Herbs and plants over the hair; the Moon over the mind; Death over the Apāṇa; Waters over the semen).

The question is—Is this Adhiṣṭhāna of the Jīva (and the Deities) dependent on himself, or dependent on the Paramātmān ?

प्राणवृत्ता—जीवेन; Rāmānuja, it appears, speaks of two Adhiṣṭhānas—one of the Jīva, and the other of the Deities. This does not seem to be intended.

Nimbārka—वागादिकरणजातम्. अग्न्यादिदेवताभेरितं कार्यं प्रवर्तते ।

Vijñānabhikṣu—प्रकृतस्य ब्रह्मणो ज्योतिरादिषु विराडदेहबीजेषु मूलमहेषु, अधिष्ठानप्रदेशोऽस्ति । कुतः ? तदामननात्—'यदिदं किञ्च...अनुप्राविशत्' इत्यादिश्रुतिषु ।

The Siddhāntin's answer is—The Adhiṣṭhāna is dependent upon the will (Saṁkalpa) of the Lord, as the Śruti tells us (आत्मनम्—आभिमुख्येन मननम्... परमात्मनः संकल्पादेव).

(Sūtra 14) This परमात्माधिष्ठितत्वं in the case of all is always there.

Sahkara—तस्य च आगिरस्यास्मिञ्चशरे मोक्षत्वेन नित्यत्वम् (न देवतानाम्) ।

Bhāskara—तस्य करणज्ञातस्य शरीरं प्रति नियतत्वात् ।

Vijñānabhikṣu—तस्य च प्राणततो जीवस्य नित्यत्वाद्, अनेन जीवेन, इति शब्दः सिद्धयद्, निर्दिशति, इत्यर्थः ।

[371] (Sūtra 15) The seventh Adhikaraṇa comprises two Sūtras.

The question is whether the Indriyas (pointed out by the word Prāṇa) include the Chief Prāṇa or not.

The Siddhānta is that the Chief Prāṇa is distinct from the Indriyas, as the Śruti uses the word Indriya specifically in the case of the eye etc., and Manas.

(Sūtra 16) The Śruti एतस्माच्चायते प्राणो मनः सर्वेन्द्रियाणि च mentions Prāṇas as distinct from the Indriyas (Manas is included among the Indriyas by the Gītā मनःपद्मानीन्द्रियाणि). That the Indriyas are different from Prāṇa is reasonable, on account of the difference in their working—

- (1) Prāṇa functions in the state of deep sleep; the sense-organs etc., do not.
- (2) Prāṇa acts as the support of the body and the Indriyas; the Indriyas and Manas are the means for perception and activity.
- (3) All activity depends on Prāṇa.

[372] (Sūtra 17) The eighth Adhikaraṇa contains three Sūtras.

संज्ञा-सूक्ति-कल्पमि is the same as नाम-रूप-व्याकरण.

त्रिवृत्करण is the Tri-partite modification of पृथिवी, अप् and तेजस्.

The question is — Is the creation involving नामरूप-व्याकरण due to Hiraṇyagarbha (Brahmadeva) or to the Highest Brahman with Hiraṇyagarbha as its body ?

The Pūrvapakṣin says — The creation is by Hiraṇyagarbha. The expression अनेन जीवेन, आत्मना, अनुप्रविश्य नामरूपे व्याकरवाणि shows that the Jīva is the Karta; the Parā Devatā could act only by her portion, the Jīva. व्याकरवाणि cannot be taken as being used in a metaphorical sense; for, the अनुप्रवेश and व्याकरण are possible in the Jīva who is a portion of the Highest. (In the expression like चारेणानुप्रविश्य परमले संकलयामि uttered by a king, the अनुप्रवेश and संकलयन have to be explained metaphorically in the case of the king, as there is a distinct difference of nature (Svarūpabheda) between the king and spy; in the present case, there is no Svarūpabheda between the Jīva and the Paramātmā). To take अनेन जीवेन to mean 'along with this Jīva' is unfair to the instrumental case (जीवेन) which has a Kāraka-sense. Nor again is the Jīva the chief operative instrument of Brahman. We cannot divide the two functions अनुप्रवेश and व्याकरण between Jīva and Brahman, as the gerund अयुग्रविद्य shows that both the functions belong to one and the same agent. So, Hiraṇyagarbha must be regarded as being responsible for नामरूपव्याकरण, as is clearly stated in the Viṣṇupurāṇa.

[373] The Siddhānta is — नामरूपव्याकरण is carried out by the Highest Brahman that first effected the tri-partite modification. The Trivṛt-karaṇa could not have been effected by Brahmadeva who was within the Egg that was originated by the three elements Tejas, Ap, and Anna made three-fold, आत्मना जीवेन — this Sāmānādhikarānya shows that by Jīva we must understand the Highest Brahman with Jīva as its body. Thus would both Anupraveśa and Vyākaraṇa be understood in their primary sense.

[374] The objector points out that it is possible to argue that Trivṛt-karaṇa is possible in the case of Jīva. The Śruti itself says that after the creation of the Egg, the food eaten becomes three-fold — Excretion, flesh and mind; the Trivṛt-karaṇa is also spoken of in the case of Agni, the Sun, the Moon, and the Lightning.'

[375] (Sūtra 18) The objector's view may be elaborated as follows :—

The Śruti says अन्नमक्षितं त्रेधा भवति (त्रेधा भवति is but त्रिवृत्करण). Anna becomes three-fold after being eaten (it was not Trivṛt already) in the form of (1) Puriṣa (Pṛthivīrūpa), (2) Māmsa which is less solid (Jalarūpa) and (3) Manas still more subtle (Tejorūpa).

आपः पीताः — Waters drunk become three-fold in the form of (1) Urine (Pṛthivīrūpa), (2) Blood (Jalarūpa) and (3) Prāṇa (Tejorūpa).

अक्षितं तेजस् — Tejas becomes three-fold when consumed in the form of (1) Asthi, bones (Pṛthivīrūpa), (2) Marrow (Jalarūpa) and (3) Vāk (Tejorūpa).

Thus, Food, Water and Tejas become each mixed with the other two elements later and become Trivṛt.

The Siddhāntin says — The objector's view is open to objection. If that view is accepted, Māmsa and Manas would have to be regarded as watery and constituted of Tejas respectively, Mūtra and Prāṇa also as constituted of Pṛthivī and Tejas respectively. But no one understands the position like that.

Māmsa and Manas are Pārthiva like the Puriṣa; that is, all the three are modifications of Pṛthivī; Urine, Blood and Prāṇa are modifications of water; Bones, Marrow and Vāk are modifications of Tejas. In this way passages like अन्नमयं हि सोम्य मनः can be properly explained. The elements prior to going through the Trivṛt-karaṇa cannot function; their activity commences only when they are mixed or compounded together.

The Trivṛt-karaṇa in the case of Agni, Āditya etc, which were within the Egg is referred to, to teach Śvetaketu who was himself within the Egg, and hence unable to understand the Trivṛt-karaṇa obtaining in entities outside the Egg.

[376] (Sūtra 19) The objector asks—If every entity is thus a compound of three elements, how is it that we name some entities as only Pṛthivī or Ap, or Tejas ?

The answer is—Entities are named in accordance with the Ādhikya or preponderance of the element constituting them. An entity is called Pārthiva, if half of it is constituted of Pṛthivī; Ap, if half of it is constituted of Water; Tejas, if half of it is constituted of Tejas (this is what is implied in the Trivṛt-karaṇa process).

The Second Adhyāya is called अङ्गोपपत्त्य, where is shown how the different Śruti and Smṛti passages (that are in conformity with the Sruti) could be harmonised.

The First Quarter shows how the Sāṅkhya, Yoga and Vaiśeṣika doctrines are faulty and the inferences drawn from them are untrustworthy. The relation of cause and effect (Kāryakāraṇabhāva) is shown in its proper light, and the exact part played by Īśvara is pointed out.

The Second Quarter deals with the Sāṅkhya, Vaiśeṣika, Buddhist, Jaina, Pāśupata and Pāncarātra doctrines. This is usually called Tarkapāda, but the Sūtrakāra does not hesitate to invoke the aid of Śruti, when he is in a tight corner. One gets the impression that the Sūtrakāra is content to stand by the contradictory Śruti (e. g., the Niravayavatva of Brahman, and still the ability of Brahman to create without undergoing any change) and makes no attempt to suggest some solution, as is done by Rāmānuja and Śaṅkara.

The Third Quarter deals with the origination and dissolution of the elements and discusses very important matters like the origination, size freedom of the will etc., of the Individual Soul. In spite of Rāmānuja's efforts to prove to the contrary, the Individual Soul does not appear to be atomic in size, according to the Sūtrakāra. Here also, it is clearly seen that the Sūtrakāra is more concerned with putting forth the opposing views, and giving suitable analogies, rather than declaring his own view in an emphatic manner.

The Fourth Quarter deals with the origination of the Liṅgāśarīra (the sense-organs, mind etc.), and the Trivṛt-karaṇa.

The views of the different Bhāṣyakāras have been given in their own words, on various points, in order to enable the reader to judge for himself what interpretation would be the most probable. Śaṅkara's views have been frequently drawn upon, as Rāmānuja is particularly anxious to measure swords with him in season and out of season. It is no doubt difficult to find out exactly what was in the mind of the Sūtrakāra, but the student is furnished with sufficient material to ponder the matter in a judicial spirit.

III. 1

The Third Adhyāya is called Sādhana as it deals with the means etc., of securing Mokṣa ultimately.

The First Quarter describes the departure of the Soul to the Moon, and his return to this world to take another body, in the case of those who have only Karmans, good or evil, to their credit. The whole discussion is calculated to create a feeling of Vairāgya in a person desirous of salvation.

[377] (Sūtra 1) The first Adhikaraṇa contains seven Sūtras.

The passage discussed is from the Chāndogya, where Pravāhaṇa asks questions about the path taken by the Karmins after death and how they return to this world, to which Śvetaketu gives appropriate answers (one would have expected that the path (Pitṛyāṇa) of the Karmins after death would be dealt with first, but the Sūtras refer to the return-journey. The Pitṛyāṇa path is described later).

The question asked is—How do the waters offered, become fit to be called the Purusa at the fifth offering ?

The answer gives details about the five offerings, culminating into the emergence of the Soul on the earth thus—

(1) The Devas offer Śraddhā (Waters) in the Fire (Dyuloka), and out of that emerges King Soma. (देवा.—प्राणाः; भद्रा—आपः; सोमो राजा—the immortal Soma or refulgent body-).

(2) The second offering is that of Soma in the Fire (Parjanya) and Rain comes into being.

(3) The third offering is that of Rain in the Fire (Pṛthivī) and Food comes out of it.

(4) The fourth offering is that of Food in the Fire (Puruṣa) and Semen comes out of it.

(5) The fifth offering is that of Semen in the Fire (Woman) and the embryo comes into being.

Thus at the fifth offering, waters become transformed into a human being.

It is true that the waters are actually mentioned only at the fifth offering, but they are there in a subtle form throughout and so, the Jīva is accompanied by the subtle elements which would be at hand for forming up a new body. (The objector's contention was that the subtle elements were available anywhere, and so the Jīva need not carry any additional burden with him, when departing from the body. The Siddhāntin's view is that it is certainly better to be forearmed always.)

[378] (Sūtra 2) The objector argues—The Sruti-passage speaks of waters only; we should legitimately conclude therefore that only the water-element accompanies the Jīva. How can we refer to all the three elements then?

The answer is—It is true that the Trivṛt-karaṇa process refers to three elements, Pṛthivī, Ap and Tejas. But here only Ap is mentioned, as water is the major constituent of the human body.

(Sūtra 3) Further, the Śruti speaks of all the Prāṇas (sense-organs) as going out when the Chief Prāṇa goes out. The Prāṇas must have some resort which can only be the subtle elements.

[379] (Sūtra 4) The objector says—There is another Śruti which speaks of Vāk, Prāṇa and Cakṣus as being merged into Fire, Wind and Āditya respectively. This shows that the subtle elements do not accompany the Jīva.

The Siddhāntin—The merging referred to is metaphorical only, as is clear from the fact that the description of soft hair entering into the herbs and other hair into trees, in the same passage, must not be understood literally, as no such experience can be had. Therefore, the Śruti describing the merging refers to the withdrawal of the Deities presiding over the eye etc.

[380] (Sūtra 5) The objector argues—The waters are specifically mentioned in the last Homa, while only Śraddhā is mentioned in the first Homa. How are we to reconcile this?

The answer is—It is sufficiently clear that the question and the answer refer to the waters specifically mentioned in the fifth Homa; so, we shall have to take Śraddhā to mean 'waters' for the sake of consistency. Śraddhā, Somarāja, Varṣa, Anna and Retas are the forms successively assumed by the waters before they could be Puruṣavacas. In the Vedic literature we actually read अद्वा वा अपः, and waters are said to have the form of Soma, [381] (Sūtra 6) The objector points out that in the above description, there is no reference to the Jīva; only Śraddhā etc., are described as being offered; nowhere is it stated that the Jīva is enveloped by them.

The Siddhāntin—If the objector looks carefully into the passages further on, and takes into account the context, he would see that the performers of sacrificial and pious deeds (इष्टवृत्त—इष्ट is the performance of sacrifices as ordained by the Sāstras; वृत्त—the construction of wells, Dharmasālas etc.,) are described as going to the Moon and returning therefrom after their Karmans have ceased giving their fruit. The सोमहवदेह really points out to the Jīva.

[382] (Sūtra 7) The objector points out that the passage तं देवा भक्षयन्ति shows that the Jīva cannot be referred to here by तं, as Jīva cannot be eaten.

*वापीवृत्तदग्गादिदेयतायतनानि च । अन्नप्रदानमारामाः पूर्वमर्थाः प्रचक्षते ॥
एकानिर्गन्धवर्गं त्रेतायां यच्च हृयते ।
अन्तर्येषां च यद्वातमिदं तदभिधीयते ॥

The Siddhāntin—The Jīvas who have to their credit only Iṣṭa and Pūrta not having realised the Ātman are metaphorically described as the food for the Gods (The eating by the gods means only the satisfaction of the gods) The Gītā also supports the view that the Ātman-knowers alone attain to Brahman, and the Anātmavādis are देवभोग्य

Madhva explains भातृत्वम् as partly

[383] (Sūtra 8) The second Adhikarana comprises four Sūtras

The question discussed is—The Jīvas who have to their credit Iṣṭa and Pūrta works travel by the Pitṛyāna path to the Moon and return again to this world—Do these returning Jīvas come back with some remainder of their Karmans or not ?

The Pūrvapakṣin says that the Jīvas are entitled to stay with the Moon till all their Karmans are fully exhausted the expression यावत्संपातमु देवा (संपात means Karman) points out to the enjoyment of the entire Karman . So it is clear that the Jīvas return without any residue of the Karman accompanying them

[384] The Siddhāntin says—Both the Sruti and Smṛti make it quite clear that some Anuśaya (remainder) of the Karman accompanies the Jīvas The Jīvas have to take up another body on their return and this is possible if some Karman has remained to give its fruit We are told that रमणीयचरण Jīvas secure a रमणीय body, and so forth those who observe carefully the duties of the Varnas and the Āsramas, attain to a birth in some good family etc यावत्संपातम् does not refer to the entire Karman, but only to what is ready to give its fruit (The ascent to the Moon is by way of Dhūma, Rātri the Dark fortnight Dakṣināyana six months Pitṛloka Ākāśa and the Moon the descent from the Moon is by way of Ākāśa Vayu Smoke Cloud and Rain cloud)

Madhva splits the Sūtra into two Sūtras forming two Adhikaranas (यद्यत्तन्मन्त्र च is made an independent Sūtra)

[385] (Sūtra 9) The objector says that the Sruti uses the expression रमणीयचरणा Carana means 'conduct', 'character' not Karman in the Taittirīya Āraṇyaka Carana and Karman are shown as distinct So according to the Sruti it is Carana and not Anuśaya of the Karman that enables the Jīva to take up another body

Kārsnājini thus answers the objection—Happiness and misery are the fruits of Karman (in the form of merit and demerit) and do not arise from mere Ācāra (conduct) So the Carana Sruti must be taken to refer ultimately to Karman

[386] (Sūtra 10) Ācāra enjoined by the Smṛtis is not useless it must be scrupulously adhered to for meritorious Karman depends upon it It is obvious that only persons who have good conduct to their credit, can perform meritorious acts

(Sūtra 11) Bādarī is of opinion that the word Carana itself means Karman (पुण्य कर्म चरति) It is unnecessary to arrive at that meaning indirectly as Kārsnājini does Rāmānuja adds that the Sūtrakāra agrees with Bādari.

[387] (Sūtra 12) The third Adhukarāna comprises ten Sūtras.

Rāmānuja takes Sūtras 12-16 as forming the Pūrvapakṣa. According to Saṅkara, Sūtra 12 alone advocates the Pūrvapakṣa.

The objector taking his stand on the passage ये ते के चाहमात्मेकात्मयान्ति चन्द्रमसमेव ते सर्वे गच्छन्ति, says that all—इष्टकारिन् and अनिष्ट (पाप) कारिन् go to the Moon.

(Sūtra 13) The अनिष्टकारिन्, however, first go to Saṃyamana, the capital of Yama to experience the fruit of their evil deeds.

(Sūtra 14) The Viṣṇupurāṇa and other Smṛtis speak of all these coming under the jurisdiction of Yama.

(Sūtra 15) Seven bells (Raurava and others) are mentioned in this connection.

(Sūtra 16) Under the orders of Yama, the अनिष्टकारिन् go to different hells,

The अनिष्टकारिन् then go to the Moon and then descend down to the Earth.

Sūtra 13 contains the expression आरोहवरोहो. The objector takes आरोह to mean ascent to the Moon; as hells are usually understood to be in the nether regions, the Pūrvapakṣin has no alternative but to make the अनिष्टकारिन् go to the Moon, before they descend down to the Earth. But there is no authority for all this.

No point is gained by Rāmānuja in taking 12-16 as Pūrvapakṣa-sūtras. The Sūtrakāra seems to have referred to the fate of the अनिष्टकारिन् in passing, to have the record complete, so to speak (ज्ञानिन् or वरुन् go by the Devayāna path; इष्टाकारिन् to the Moon by the Pitṛyāna, and the अनिष्टाकारिन् to the Yamaloka). Rāmānuja really ought not to have any objection to the mention of hells and Yamaloka, gruesome descriptions of which are given in the Purāṇas. The Sūtrakāra apparently bows to the widely prevalent belief in Yamaloka etc., and finds room for such ideas in the Sūtras.

It appears that the use of आरोह and अवरोह in Sūtra 13, shows that Yamaloka was believed to have been somewhere in the heavens (not necessarily in the nether regions, which idea became fixed up later).

[388] (Sūtra 17) The Siddhāntin thus refutes the Pūrvapakṣa view —

The context shows that the Śruti deals with only two classes of Jīvas, and two paths—those having Vidyā to their credit go by the Devayāna path; and those having good Karman to their credit go by the Pitṛyāna. There is no question here as to what happens in the case of the अनिष्टकारिन्. The expression ये वै के च means ' all those without exception, who are इष्टाकारिन् '.

[389] (Sūtra 18) The objector queries—In that case, how can the अनिष्टकारिन् secure a new body? The Śruti speaks of the new body as a result of the fifth Ahuti, which presupposes going to the Moon.

The Sūtrakāra's answer is—The Sruti says पश्यन्मातुतो, not पश्यन्मातुतो एव, which shows that the शरीरारम्भ is not due to the fifth Āhuti alone

The अनित्यकारिणः go to the 'Third place' (where there is no need for the fifth Āhuti) which rules out going to, and coming back from the Dyuloka

(Sūtra 19) It is well-known that Draupadī, Dhṛṣṭadyumna and others (who are Ayoniya) did not go through the fifth Āhuti for their birth

(Sūtra 20) The Sruti also speaks of three kinds of beings—Anḍaja Jivaja, and Udbhijja, where the Udbhijja (trees, plants etc.) do not require the fifth Āhuti

(Sūtra 21) Udbhijja includes the Samskajaja or Svedajaja beings as well

Thus it is established that the पापकारिणः do not go to the Moon for no purpose is served thereby

[390] (Sūtra 22) The fourth Adhikarana contains only one Sūtra

The question is—When it is said that the Jiva on his way back to this world becomes Ākāśa, Vāyu, Dhūma, Abhra and Megha—does it mean that the Jiva secures the nature of these, or is there merely सादृश्यादिभावः ?

The Siddhānta is—The Jiva becomes only similar to these, there is no तद्भावः as there is no scope here for the experience of happiness and misery

Śaṅkara reads साभाव्यापत्तिः for तत्साभाव्यापत्तिः

[391] (Sūtra 23) The fifth Adhikarana contains only one Sūtra

The transition from Ākāśa to Varsa (rain) takes place quickly, it is only after the Jiva has secured ब्रीहिसामान्यः, the transition is a laborious process

दुर्निष्पत्तरम् is Vedic for दुर्निष्पत्ततरम् (one is elided).

[392] (Sūtra 24) The sixth Adhikarana contains four Sūtras

The objector argues—The Sruti says त इह ब्रीहियवा जायन्ते which obviously means that the Souls are born with Vrihi etc., as their bodies (जायन्ते must be taken in the primary sense), and become enjoyers

The Siddhānta is—The Vrihi, Yava etc., are merely in contact with the Jivas as in the case of the series from Ākāśa to Megha जायन्ते is just metaphorical, for, there is no fruit of the Karman to be enjoyed here by the Jiva [393] (Sūtra 25) The objector says—There is some Hetu (reason) for the Jiva being an enjoyer here also. The performance of sacrifices etc. involves Himsā, and so is mixed with some sin, and the activity about the sacrifice, like any other Karman, must be taken to be caused by attachment to the fruit accruing from the same. It is better, therefore to hold that the Jivas experience the fruit of the impure Karman, on being reduced to the state of Vrihi etc.

The answer is—Himsā sanctioned by the Sāstras is no Himsā, and there can be no impurity involved in the performance of a sacrifice. Actually according to the Sāstras, the victim in the sacrifice is quite uninjured (though suffering somewhat and goes to the Gods, (Sūtra 26) The emergence of Jīva as Vṛīhi etc., is metaphorical; if Vṛīhyādibhāva is real, when Vṛīhi etc., are being boiled and cooked, the Jīvas also would have to go through that ordeal ! Besides, it is only after the Vṛīhyādibhāva, that the ejection of the semen (which causes birth of some entity) is mentioned in connection with the eater of food etc.

(Sūtra 27) There can not be any body constituted of Vṛīhi etc., for the Jīva; a body can come into being only after the connection with the Strīyoni.

According to Madhva, the Parameśvara is the Director of the Jīvas even in hell where there is only misery experienced. The word Śabda in Sūtra 21 refers to swoon; and an additional Sūtra स्मरणाय is there after Sūtra 21,

III. 2

This Quarter deals with the different states — Waking, Dream, Deep-sleep and Swoon—associated with the Jīva, and the nature of Brahman.

The first Adhikaraṇa contains six Sūtras (the first two Sūtras give the Pūrvapakṣa).

[394] (Sūtra 1) The objector says—The Śruti says that the Jīva creates chariots, horses etc., in a dream; this is reasonable, as it is the Jīva who sees the dream (the word Saṁdhyā means the dream-state).

(Sūtra 2) Some recensions go still further and say that the Jīva is the creator of all objects, sons etc., liked by him, in dream. So, Jīva is the creator, and not Īśvara, in the dream-state.

[395] (Sūtra 3) The Siddhānta is — The dream-creation is an extraordinary wonderful (Māyā) creation, which can be attributed only to the Paramapuruṣa. Māyāmātram thus can only mean 'created by the Paramapuruṣa '. It is true that the Jīva also is Satyaśaṁkalpa, but that nature of his is not fully manifested in the Samsāra state, and so, Jīva can not be the creator of the objects in dream. The Śruti also further says that all the worlds resort to Brahman alone. From a proper consideration of the Upakrama and the Upasaṁhāra of the passages in question, it is clear that the Paramapuruṣa is the creator of dream-objects.

Madhva takes मायामात्रम् to mean स्वेच्छामात्रम्.

[396] (Sūtra 4) The natural auspicious form (कल्याणरूप) of the Jīva is obscured and so, the qualities, having the sins destroyed etc., are not manifested so long as the Jīva is not Mukta, owing to the will (Abhidhyāna) of the Paramapuruṣa.

(Sūtra 5) The Tirobhāva of the natural attributes of the Jīva, can be explained also by the Jīva's association with the body (at the time of creation) or the association with the subtle Acit-element (at the time of Pralaya).

(Sūtra 6) The interpreters of dreams tell us, that the dreams do indicate auspicious and inauspicious future events. Such an indication is not possible if the dreams were to depend upon the Śaṁkalpa of the Jīva. So, Īśvara is the creator of the dream-creation.

Rāmānuja's interpretation of this Adhikaraṇa is far from convincing :—

(1) The Śruti specifically says that the Jīva is the creator; it is unfair therefore to regard this as the Pūrvapakṣa, that the Paramapuruṣa is ultimately the creator is not relevant here. '

(2) Rāmānuja, strangely enough speaks of Jīva's natural form as being सत्यसंकररूप and कल्याणरूप.

(3) The Sūtra सूचय्य etc., is read by him as the last Sūtra in this Adhikaraṇa, as he holds the view that the dream-creation is real (Śaṅkara and others read the Sūtra as coming immediately after Sūtra 3, मायामात्रं etc).

(4) Rāmānuja takes माया to mean आशय and makes matters worse by adding परमपुष्टमिति; if everything according to Rāmānuja is परमपुष्टमिति, there is no point in referring to that here. The trend of the wording of the Sūtra does not justify the conclusion that the Jīva could not create the dream-creation as he does not manifest his full powers then. The natural meaning appears to be—The Arthajāta in the dream is Māyā, because the nature of the Arthajāta is not fully manifested as in a real creation; that is, the Anabhivyaktasvarūpa belongs to the Arthajāta, and not to the Jīva. A wonderful feat would require the fullest manifestation of all powers possessed by one. Rāmānuja knows this and adds तथाविधा (मायामात्र) सृष्टिर्जीवस्य नोपपद्यते as he ascribes the Anabhivyaktasvarūpa to Jīva.

On the other hand, Śaṅkara's interpretation appears to be more natural and appropriate. According to Śaṅkara, the question is whether the dream-creation is real or not.

The Pūrvapakṣa is that it is real.

The Siddhānta is that the dream-creation is not real as it does not show देशकालनिमित्तसंपत्ति and अथाव which distinguish a real creation from an unreal one—

(1) In a dream, one can travel hundreds of miles, though the body remains at the same place (thus there is देशविराग).

(2) There is कालविराग — Though asleep at night time, the dreamer dreams that it is day time (रत्नगो मुक्तो वासरं भारते वर्षे मम्यते — Śaṅkara is aware that night time in Bhārata may be day time in some other continent or Varṣa. Hundreds of years can be passed in a dream lasting for only a Mubūrta.

(3) There is निमित्तविराग — No material is required to create in a dream and things change over quickly or disappear altogether.

All this shows that the creation in a dream is mere illusion which, however, can indicate some real future event. The powers of the Jīva are screened by Avidyā etc., and become manifest only by the grace of the Highest due to meditation. Bondage and salvation depend on the Lord. The ज्ञानेश्वर्यतिरोभाव in the case of the Jīva is due to his association with the body, mind, sense-organs etc. (एवमविद्यादिप्रत्युत्पापितनामरः स्मृतदेहाद्युपाधियोगात्तदविशेषकमकृतो जीवस्य ज्ञानेश्वर्यतिरोभावः)

[397] (Sūtra 7) The second Adhikaraṇa contains two Sūtras and deals with Suṣupti.

In the Suṣupti-state, the Jīva stays in the Ātman, via the Nāḍīs and the Purītat (the Nāḍī which goes right up to the heart). The Nāḍīs, Purītat and Ātman are not three different places, though the Śruti speaks of the three as Suṣupti-sthānas, as one can say—he sleeps on the bed on the cot in the palace.

Śaṅkara says—द्वारमात्रं नाड्यः पुरीतच. ब्रह्मैव त्वेकं सुषुप्तिस्थानम् । नाडीद्वारापि ब्रह्मोपसर्गं ह्यस एव नाडीषु भवति । यो गच्छत्या सागरं गच्छति यत एव स गच्छत्या भवति ।

(Sūtra 8) The awakening of the Jīva takes place when he comes out of Brahman where he had slept.

[398] (Sūtra 9) The third Adhikaraṇa contains only one Sūtra.

The question is—Is the awakened Jīva the same who had slept, or some one else ? For, it is possible to argue that the sleeper merged into Brahman is as good as one Released, and has no connection further with his sense-organs etc.

The Siddhānta is—The Jīva who was asleep and the Jīva who was awakened later must be one and the same :—

(1) The fruit of the Karman performed by the Jīva has to be experienced by him alone.

(2) On awakening, the Jīva remembers that he is the same one who was asleep.

(3) The Sruti says that whatsoever forms those in the state of Suṣupti had before, of a tiger, wolf etc.,—the same they secure after being awakened.

(4) Injunctions given in the Sāstras would be meaningless, if the awakened Jīva is different from the one asleep.

[399] (Sūtra 10) The fourth Adhikaraṇa contains only one Sūtra.

The question discussed is whether the state of swoon is a distinct state or not.

The Siddhānta is that Swoon (Murchā) is a distinct state; it is half-way towards Death. It cannot be the state of waking or dreaming; for, there is no consciousness of any thing in Swoon. Besides, the swoon is caused generally by some visible agency like a blow on the head, and is characterised by contortions of the body, which is not the case with Deep-sleep or Death. So, it is better to regard the swoon state as a distinct state heading towards death.

[400] (Sūtra 11) The fifth Adhikaraṇa comprises 15 Sūtras, and is an important one dealing with the real nature of Brahman. The Sūtras are variously interpreted by the different Bhāṣyakāras, to secure support for their own doctrines.

According to Rāmānuja, the question dealt with is — Do the blemishes of the Jīva in the different states of waking, dreaming, deep-sleep and swoon, affect the Highest Brahman, the inner Controller ?

The Pūrvapakṣin argues that the Antaryāmin, though not subject to Karman, is bound to be affected by the contact with the impure body etc., dealing with Apuruṣārtha.

[401] The Siddhānta is—There cannot be any tinge of Apuruṣārtha in Brahman, even when there is the association with different states; for, the Sruti everywhere speaks of two-fold characteristics of Brahman, viz. the complete expulsion of all blemishes, and being the mine of all auspicious qualities.

Rāmānuja apparently takes न स्थनेतासि परस्य in the Sūtra, as complete in itself and takes उभयलिङ्ग to mean निर्दोषत्वं and कल्याणगुणारत्नत्वं. This way of splitting the Sūtra makes अपि almost lose its force: for, the आकाङ्क्षा raised by अपि remains unfulfilled — Even if the different states are fully taken into account,—one surely wants to know what happens to the पर. Anyway उभयलिङ्गत्व cannot be divorced from पर.

Śaṅkara's interpretation is more convincing; he takes न स्थानतोऽपि परस्वोभयलिङ्गम् as complete in itself. The two-fold nature of Brahman as Nirviśeṣa and Saviśeṣa (which brings out the contrast more effectively) can not be justified even by taking into consideration the different states mentioned before; for, everywhere Brahman is said to be of one form, rather having no form at all, अरूपवदेव (Sūtra 14).

[402-403] (Sūtra 12) Wherever the Antaryāmin is spoken of as distinct from the Jīva, he is described as Amṛta, which shows that he could have no truck with Apuruṣārtha; only Jīva, being subject to Karman, is liable to be associated with things leading to Apuruṣārtha.

(Sūtra 13) Some recensions specifically say the Jīva alone is the enjoyer, while the Para is possessed of Dīpti depending upon his own glory as the over-lord.

[404] (Sūtra 14) The Sruti describes Brahman as producing name and form, on entering into the elements with the Living Self; this does not mean that Brahman is connected with the bodies of men, gods etc., or shares in the name and form.

Rāmānuja explains अरूपवत् as रूपहितुष्य; Brahman, being not subject to Karman, only completes the name and form, and so, is as good as not having any form.

Śaṅkara takes अरूपवत् to mean निर्विशिष्ट (this is obviously a more natural interpretation). Being without a form is the principal nature of Brahman; passages describing any form of diversity in Brahman must be regarded as being subordinated to those that describe its Nirviśeṣatva.

Madhva takes अरूपवत् to mean प्राकृतरूपहीन.

[405] (Sūtra 15) Just as Brahman is taken to be प्रकाशवत् (possessed of light or intelligence), so that the Sruti-passages सत्यं ज्ञानमनन्तं... etc., may not be meaningless, we must understand passages describing Brahman to be सत्यमन्तरूप etc., also in a literal sense. Thus Brahman is Ubhayalinga.

There is no doubt that Rāmānuja's interpretation of प्रकाशवत् is not acceptable. प्रकाशवत् must mean 'like light', that is, प्रकाश furnishes a similar instance, if we take into account similar expressions in the Sūtras.

Śaṅkara's interpretation is more convincing — Just as light seems to assume different forms under different conditions, Brahman appears as Saviśeṣa, owing to the Upādhis; in this way Saviśeṣa passages can be properly explained away.

(Sūtra 16) The passage सत्यं ज्ञानं... merely points out to the प्रकाशस्वरूपता of Brahman; it has no power to repudiate other attributes referred to in other passages.

Saṅkara takes तन्मात्र to mean 'निर्दिशेत् only'.

(Sūtra 17) The Śruti and Smṛti refer to the presence of auspicious qualities and the absence of blemishes in Brahman.

Saṅkara — Both Śruti and Smṛti emphasise the निर्दिशेत् of Brahman.

(Sūtra 18) Because Brahman is not contaminated by the blemishes associated with the different states, the Sūryaka (Sun's reflection) and पटाकाश illustrations are appropriately cited in this connection. (The Sun and the Ākāśa are not affected by the changes in their Upādhis).

According to Saṅkara, the Sūryaka-illustration shows the unreal nature of the manifestations.

[406] (Sūtra 19) The objector objects to the Sūryaka illustration, as the Sun is wrongly apprehended as being in water, while Brahman does really stay in Pṛthivī etc.

Madhva explains अम्युवदग्रहणात् as अम्युवत् स्नेहेन ग्रहणं ज्ञाने भक्तिं विना.

(Sūtra 20) The Siddhāntin says that the illustration simply shows that Brahman does not participate in the changes, increase, decrease etc., seen in the different places or states, and is not contaminated by the blemishes thereof.

In this way, both the illustrations, Sūryaka and Ghaṭākāśa (given in the Yājñavalkya-smṛti) are appropriate. Expressions like 'Mānavaka is a lion' are significant likewise (Usually दर्शनात्, दर्शयति etc., refer to some Śruti passage, and not to popular sayings like सिंहो माणवकः).

Saṅkara says — The reflections of the Sun participate in the increase and decrease of the water etc., while the Sun remains quite unaffected; similarly Brahman remains unaffected by the Upādhis that alone undergo any changes—thus there is the appropriate nature of both Dīṣṭānta and Dārṣṭāntika.

Saṅkara reads दर्शनाच्च as a separate Sūtra referring to the Śruti पुरश्चक्रे द्विपदः पुरश्चक्रे चतुष्पदः ... (Bṛhadāraṇyaka).

Saṅkara here criticises in detail the view of those who divide the above Sūtras into two Adhikaraṇas, and justifies his position in regarding all the Sūtras as referring to one topic :—

अत्र केचिद् द्वे अधिकरणे कल्पयन्ति—प्रथमे तावत्, किं प्रत्यस्तमितोपपन्नप्रपञ्चेकाकारं ब्रह्म, उत प्रपञ्चवदने-कारोपेतम्, इति । द्वितीयं तु, प्रत्यस्तमितप्रपञ्चत्वे, किं सत्क्षणं ब्रह्म : उत बोधलक्षणम् ; उत, उभयलक्षणम्, इति । अत्र वयं वदामः—सर्वेष्वप्यनर्थक्यमाधिकरणान्तरारम्भस्य, इति । यदि तावदनेकलक्षणत्वं परस्य ब्रह्मणो निराकृतव्यम्, इत्ययं प्रयासः, तत्पूर्वमेव 'न स्थानतोऽपि' इत्यन्तेनार्थिकरणेन निराकृतमित्युत्तरमाधिकरणं 'प्रकाशानच्च' एतद् व्यर्थमेव भवेत् । न च सत्क्षणमेव ब्रह्म, न बोधलक्षणम्, इति शक्यं वक्तुम्, विज्ञानपद एवेयादिश्रुतिवैयर्थ्यप्रसङ्गात् । ... तस्मादस्मद्वक्त एव विभाग आकरवदनाकारोपदेशानां युस्ततर इति ।

[407] (Sūtra 21) Saṅkara begins a new Adhikaraṇa here, presumably because the well-known passage वयात् आदेशो नेति नेति deserves to be treated with great respect. (Nimbārka does the same).

Rāmānuja says that नेति नेति denies only the limited nature of the attributes mentioned in the passage, as is clear from the fact that more attributes are spoken of as possessed by Brahman.

Śaṅkara says that only the Mūrta and Amūrta are repudiated, as Brahman is beyond these forms. Rāmānuja condemns this interpretation by Śaṅkara, remarking that it is ridiculous to say that the Śruti which itself mentions the attributes (which cannot be known from any other Pramāṇa) should have done so, simply to repudiate them afterwards. Only प्रकृत्येवज्ञापयिष्य is meant here.

[408] (Sūtra 22) The Śāstra describes Brahman as Avyakta (unmanifest).

(Sūtra 23) Both Śruti and Smṛti say that Brahman is realised in Samrādhana (devout meditation or contemplation).

[409] (Sūtra 24) Just as Vāmadeva and others realised Brahman as possessing Prakāśa (light, intelligence) as its nature, they realised also Brahman as characterised by Mūrtāmurtādi-prapañca. The repeated practice of Samrādhana enables one to realise Brahman's nature (संराधने—कर्मणि संराधनात्मके).

Śaṅkara—This Sūtra refutes the objection that, if संराध्यसंराधकम् च is admitted, the Highest and the Ātman would be different—just as light etc., (प्रकाश is taken as an illustration) appear to be Saviśeṣa, owing to the Upādhis (the intervention of the finger etc.,) without giving up their original nature, the Ātmabheda is due to the Upādhis (कर्मणि—उपाधिषु). अभ्यासात्—वेदान्तेष्वभ्यासेन, असङ्ख्य, जीवप्राज्ञयोरभेदः प्रतिपाद्यते ।

(Sūtra 25) Brahman is possessed of infinite auspicious qualities also, and so, it is Ubhayalinga.

Rāmānuja explains अनन्तेन as कल्याणगुणगणेन, and लिङ्गम् as उभयलिङ्गम्. This is hardly satisfactory.

Śaṅkara explains अनन्तेन as ग्राप्तेनात्मना (एकत्वं गच्छति जीवः). Nimbārka agrees with Śaṅkara. लिङ्ग refers to the Śruti passage न यो ह वै तत्परमं ब्रह्म वेद, ब्रह्मैव भवति etc.

Nimbārka explains प्रकाशादिबन् as follows:—Just as the Sun etc., become manifest only to persons who have mastery over the Mantras, Brahman is realised only by those who practise Samrādhana. Nimbārka's explanation does not appear to be satisfactory.

Madhva takes कर्मणि to mean विषयभूते तस्मिन् ब्रह्मणि, and प्रकाश, as साक्षात्कार. He also takes Sūtra 22 as forming an independent Adhikaraṇa. अनन्तेन is taken to mean अपरिमितसामर्थ्येनान्वितस्य प्रसादात्. Jīva by himself is incapable of securing Sākṣātkāra; he can achieve his purpose only by the grace of Brahman.

On the whole, it appears that Rāmānuja's interpretation of this Adhikaraṇa cannot carry conviction. The virtual splitting of the Sūtra as न स्थानोऽपि and परस्मै, is unwarranted, if we evaluate the context properly; the interpretation of अक्षयवदेन, तन्मयानत्वात् and तन्मात्रम् is unsatisfactory; प्रकाशवत् and प्रकाशादिबन् should have been understood as involving a Dṛṣṭānta; अनन्तेन cannot in any case refer to कल्याणगुणगण and so forth.

[410] (Sūtra 26) Rāmānuja takes Sūtras 26-29 as comprising a new Adhikaraṇa, while Śāṅkara takes them as a continuation of the last Adhikaraṇa.

The question discussed is — What is the relation between Brahman and the Acit — whether it is in accordance with the Ahikunḍala-nyāya, or with the Ekajātiyoga (प्रमा and प्रमान्) or, अंशांशिमन् (विशेषणतया)? The doubt arises because there are Śruti passages referring to difference and non-difference.

The Pūrvapakṣin says — The relation is that of the serpent and the coil, that is, the Acit is merely a संस्थानविशेष (particular arrangement) of Brahman.

(Sūtra 27) वा in the Sūtra repudiates the above view (Śāṅkara says the view in this Sūtra is not Sūtrakāra's)—Just as the light and its resort, though different, are one in so far as they are Tejas, there is तादात्म्य between Brahman and the अचिद्वस्तु.

(Sūtra 28) The word वा in the Sūtra here repudiates both the above views. The first (अहिकुण्डलवन्) is wrong: the next view which emphasises the एकजातियोग, is also wrong, because Brahman is said to be everything (though द्रव्यत्वं is the genus in पृथिवी, जल etc., we cannot call them एतद् or सर्वम्). The third view—Just as Jīva was spoken of before (अंशो नानाव्यपदेशात्, II, 3.42; प्रकाशादिवस्तु II, 3.45) as a portion of Brahman, the Acit also is a portion of Brahman—is the correct one.

(Sūtra 29) As the Śruti repudiates the attributes of Acit in Brahman, we have to admit अंशांशिमन् (due to the विशेषणविशेष्य relation) between the Acit and Brahman.

According to Śāṅkara पूर्ववत् refers to Sūtra 25 above (प्रकाशादिवस्तुविशेष्यम्). The प्रतिषेध refers to the repudiation of Prapañca as apart from Brahman.

Nimbārka holds that the relation between Brahman and Acit, is one of भेदाभेद as illustrated by the illustration of the serpent and the coil. Sūtra 27 प्रकाशादिवस्तु refers to the same relation between Jīva and Brahman. पूर्ववद् refers to श्रुतेस्तु शब्दमूलत्वात् (II-1.27) which asks us to rely on the Śruti alone, and not to discuss questions like how Brahman which is impartite could undergo any modification. प्रतिषेधाच्च repudiates the existence of any blemishes in Brahman, as is clear from the Śruti, न लिप्यते लोभदुःखेन etc.

According to Madhva, the question is whether Brahman is both bliss, and one possessed of bliss. Brahman can be both like the serpent and the coil, or light and its resort, or like time which is both the characteristic (like the word तूँ) and the thing characterised.

According to Vallabha पूर्ववत् refers to Sūtras 14-18 above, showing Brahman to have no attributes. Brahman is also Ubhaya rūpa.

It appears to us more probable that the Sūtrakāra does not show any preference for any particular view. He mentions the different views being on the same level. Both Rāmānuja and Nimbārka ignore or attach no importance to वा in Sūtras 27 and 28. पूर्ववत् seems to refer to प्रकाशादिवस्तु (as Śaṅkara says) rather than to a Sūtra in the second Pāda, as Nimbārka suggests.

[411] (Sūtra 30) The seventh Adhikaraṇa comprises seven Sūtras.

The question discussed is whether there is anything beyond Brahman, as certain Śruti-expressions point out to that contingency. Thus—

(1) Brahman is called Setu (dam, bridge); this implies 'that there is something beyond the bridge, which is to be secured or reached.

(2) Brahman is described as having some Unmāna (limited measure) and is called Catuṣpāt, Ṣoḍaśakala etc.

(3) There is the relation of प्राप्य and प्रापक between सेतुम् and सेतु.

(4) The expression परात्पर shows that there is some पर beyond पर.

[412] (Sūtra 31) The Siddhānta is :—

There is nothing beyond Brahman; the expression Setu is used in a general sense, meaning ' what prevents any commixture '. सेतुं तोलौ often means ' having secured the Setu ' (तोलौ means प्राप्य).

(Sūtra 32) Expressions like Catuṣpāt etc., applied to Brahman are meant for Upāśanā, and not for indicating any measure which is impossible in the case of the limitless Brahman.

[413] (Sūtra 33) Just as light can be measured as associated with a window, jar etc., Brahman can be measured by its Upādhis.

(Sūtra 34) That there should be nothing beyond the पर Brahman is proper, because the प्राप्यपरमपुरुष is himself the cause of securing the Jīva for him (यमेवैव दृष्टते तेन लभ्यः); no other agency is required as there is no other पर.

[414] (Sūtra 35) Whenever expressions like परात्पर are used, there the Śruti hastens to add तेनान्यपरमस्ति; the पर alone is the cause of the world and is called महद्यदा; (because no one can lord it over पर). All this shows that there is nothing beyond the पर.

ततो यदुत्तरतरम् — This must be interpreted in accordance with the context. सतः means हेतुतः, not ' beyond '. परात्परः — The omniscient Paramapuruṣa who is beyond the समष्टिपुरुष.

आपः प्रदुधे — here अप् means Pṛthivī.

Śaṅkara refers to the Śruti स्वमपीतो भवति which shows that any relation with Brahman must be due to the Upādhis, as one's own nature can never be extinct. Passages like स एवावस्ताव, नेह नानास्ति किंचन show that nothing exists as apart for Brahman.

(Sūtra 36) That Brahman is all-pervading is clear from the use of words like Āyāma. अनेन—ब्रह्मणा; Śaṅkara explains अनेन as सेत्वादिभ्यपदेशनिराकरणेन, अन्यप्रतिषेधसमाश्रयणेन च, and refers to श्रुतिस्मृतित्याय pointed out by आकाशवायुसर्वगतश्च नित्यः, ज्यायान्दिवः, नित्यः सर्वगतः स्यात्पुरुषलोऽयं सनातनः etc.

[415] (Sūtra 37) The eighth Adhikaraṇa contains four Sūtras.

The fruit aimed at—Mokṣa, as well as Aibika (belonging to this world) and Āmuṣkika (belonging to heaven etc.,)—comes from the Supreme Lord alone. The evanescent Acetana Karman can not possibly be in a position to make this award.

(Sūtra 38) The Sruti actually says that the Paramātman is Annāda (Vedic form for Annada) Vasudāna etc., and is also the giver of Ānanda (Apavarga).

[416] (Sūtra 39) Jaimini holds the view that it is more appropriate to conclude that Karman gives the fruit; agricultural operations, the giving of gifts etc., are actually seen giving their fruit directly or indirectly. The sacrificial Karman as ordained by the Sāstras gives the fruit through the Apūrva which subsists even when the Karman has come to an end. So, no objection need be taken to this view.

[417] (Sūtra 40) Bādarāyaṇa, however, says that the fruit ought to come from the Lord. (The Sūtrakāra apparently agrees with Bādarāyaṇa; some think that Bādarāyaṇa himself is the Sūtrakāra). Without His will, nothing can happen. Even in the case of the sacrificial acts, the Śruti speaks of the different Deities to whom offerings are given, as the hetus (causes) of the different fruits desired. The root यज् means 'to worship the Gods.' The injunctions in connection with the sacrifices do point out how the fruit is to be obtained; as for instance, in the injunction वायव्यं श्वेतमालम्बेत भूतिकामः, it is clear that the Deity Vāyu is ultimately responsible for the prosperity (Bhūti) that the sacrificer in question wants to secure. So, when the Sruti itself points out to the source of the fruit, it is ridiculous to postulate any Apūrva not mentioned by the Śruti, as capable of giving the fruit. Of course, the Sruti and the Smṛti make it clear that as the Deities have the Paramapurusa as their Ātman, it is the grace of the Lord that is responsible for the fruit. Even in the popular illustration of the agriculturist securing his crops from the agricultural operations, it is possible to say that it is the King, in the ultimate analysis, who gives the fruit, when he or his officers are satisfied with the proper discharge of his duties by the farmer.

III. 3

The third Quarter is called Guṇopasaṁhāra, as it discusses the question whether the details, different attributes etc., mentioned in the various Brahmavidyās scattered throughout the different recensions, are to be taken together for the purpose of meditation or Upāsana; and if so, under what conditions.

Certain Vidyās, though called by the same name, differ in their format, number of attributes, fruit etc., in different texts. If meditation is to be carried on properly, an authoritative decision in this connection is necessary.

Though the subject discussed here may be purely academic from the point of view of a modern student, the discussion is carried on meticulously in conformity with the Mīmāṃsā rules of interpretation, in a judicial manner, and the reader is bound to be impressed by the way the various criteria are ultimately formulated. In the case of sacrificial acts which are Sādhya (while the Vidyās deal with Siddha propositions), no such consideration is necessary, as all one has to do here is to follow the procedure strictly as laid down by the Śāstras.

According to Vallabha, this Quarter deals with the incarnations of Viṣṇu, and Madhva understands the Vedas, and not the Upaniṣads by the term Vedāntapratyaya.

Some critics hold that the very discussion of the Brahmavidyās shows that the Sūtrakāra could not have been an Advaitin, and Śaṅkara, according to whom only Brahman is real and Nirviśeṣa, had no business to discuss this topic at all. Such criticism betrays a total lack of proper appraisal of the Advaita. The critics should have gone further still, and objected to Śaṅkara's description of the world and its cause etc., the nature of rebirth and so forth, so that Śaṅkara could be accused of wasting his energy in writing a commentary on the Brahmasūtras and the Upaniṣads! Time and again, Śaṅkara has made it quite clear that sacrificial acts, meditation etc., are quite useful in producing Cittaśuddhi in one aspiring for Mokṣa. From the Vyāvahārika point of view, Saguṇa or Saviśeṣa Brahman does exist, and its Upāsana enables one to realise the Highest Brahman in course of time.

[418] The first Adhikaraṇa comprises five Sūtras.

(Sūtra 1) The question discussed is whether the Vidyās, Vaiśvānara-Vidyā and others, mentioned in different recensions under the same name, are to be regarded as identical or different.

[419] The Pūrvapakṣin says that (1) a different context, and (2) the repetition of the same matter in different Śākhās point out to विषेयभेद (difference of procedure). The विषेयभेद must lead to विद्याभेद. The followers of Atharvaveda have to observe the Śirovratā (carrying the vessel containing the sacred fire on their head) when they are being taught the Brahnavidyā. This implies that the Vidyā taught to them is different; if the Vidyā were to be same, the Sirovrata would have to be observed by students of other Vedas or recensions also.

The Siddhānta is :—The Vaiśvānara-Vidyā referred to is the same; for, (1) the injunctions उपासीत, विद्यात्, (2) the connection with the fruit Brahmaprāpti, (3) the general form and (4) the name, are the same pointing out to the Vaiśvānara-Vidyā being recognised as the same one described in the various recensions.

(Sūtra 2) विधेयभेद due to पुनर्ब्रुति and प्रकरणान्तर is not the deciding factor to prove विद्याभेद; for, repetition and another context can exist in one and the same Vidyā, when the Pratipattis (learners) are different; when the learner is the same, विधेयभेद has to be understood as pointing out to विद्याभेद, there being no other alternative.

[420] (Sūtra 3) The Śirovrata is associated with the study of the Vedic section; it is a वेदनत (not विद्याव्रत); this is made clear in the Samācāra (nothing is known about a work of this name), and competency (Adhikāra) also corroborates this view. Similarly, the different sacrifices (सप्त सोमोदयः शतौदनपर्यन्तः) are associated with the Ātharvaṇa fire called Ekaśī, and not with the Tretā fires, in conformity with the context. In short, ब्रह्मविद्या means वेदविद्या here.

(Sūtra 4) All the Vedāntas speak of the worship or Upāsana. The Paramātman possessed of eight attributes अपहृतपाप्मत्वं etc., is mentioned in the Chāndogya and is referred to in the Taittiriya.

So, it is established that the Vidyā referred to in another recension is the same, owing to the attributes being considered together.

According to Śaṅkara, though Brahman is one and Ekarūpa, the question about Vidyābheda arises, because the Vidyās are concerned with Saguṇa Brahman and Prāṇa.

विद्याभेद is caused by (1) नामभेद, (2) रूपभेद, (3) कर्मभेद, and (4) धर्मविशेष. The भेदभेद is understood from (1) चोदना, (2) प्रयोजनसंयोग, (3) रूप and (4) समाख्या.

But, asks the objector, what are we to do when the Vājasaneyins mention the sixth fire in the यजामि विद्या, while the Chandogas stick to the five fires? The answer is — It is possible to have गुणभेद in one and the same Vidyā; for instance, the Atirātra sacrifice does not become different, because the Śoḍaśī offering is gone through by some, and not by others. The Vidyā is recognised to be the same easily enough.

The Śirovrata is a स्वाध्यायधर्म as described in the Samācāra; it is not a विद्याधर्म, as the seven Savas (Saurya and others) are concerned only with the Ātharvaṇa fire and not with the Tretā fires which are connected with the स्वाध्यायविशेष in other recensions.

Passages like सर्वे वेदा यत्परमामन्त्रिन्ति show that the various Upāsahās do contain a censure of भेद, and विद्यैक्य is the theme of Vedāntas in general.

(Sūtra 5) Though the Upāsana as such is the same in all Vedāntas, the attributes in different recensions have to be considered together, as they serve the purpose of elucidating the Vidyā, just as the injunction does. च is used in the sense of अवधारण.

Sāhaka takes this Sūtra as constituting a separate Adhikaraṇa, calling it प्रयोजनसूत्र. Just as the Agnihotra-attributes are taken together, because the Agnihotra-Karman is the same; so, the विद्यागुण also, obliging the same Vidyā must be made applicable to the Vidyā.

[420 A] (Sūtra 6) The second Adhikaraṇa comprises five Sūtras.

Udgīthavidyā is the matter under discussion. Both the Bṛhadāraṇyaka and the Chāndogya deal with it.

(1) The Vājins enjoin प्राणदष्टि upon the Udgītha for securing the defeat of the enemies. The Chāndogya do the same. (2) There is no explicit injunction here like उपासीत, विद्यात् etc., but वेदः which is described as the means for the fruit, serves the purpose of the injunction.

The Pūrvapakṣin says—The Vidyās in the two recensions are one and same, because—

(1) there is the same प्राणदष्टि on the Udgītha which is the object of worship.

(2) the injunction is the same.

(3) the fruit viz. the defeat of the enemies, and

(4) the name Udgīthavidyā are the same.

It is wrong to say that the Vidyās are different on account of Rūpabheda —In the Bṛha the प्राणदष्टि is on the singer of the Udgītha; in the Chāndogya, it is on the उद्गातकर्मन् —for, the Upakrama refers to the defeat of the enemies in both. We can understand उद्गातकर्मन् as showing सोकये, as the expression ओदनः पच्यते (where the Karman is described as the Kartṛ) does. All this shows that the Vidyās in the two recensions are the same.

(उद्गीथ is the second part of the five-fold Sāman which is to be sung by the Udgātṛ. But in the present context, Udgītha must be taken to mean Udgātṛ, the singer himself, as the expression त्वं न उद्गाय repeated several times clearly shows.

The gods successively approached Vāk, Prāṇa, Cakṣus, Srotra and Manas to perform the duties of the Udgātṛ. The Asuras in order to frustrate the designs of the gods managed to make Vāk etc., associated with sin (by rendering Vāk obscene, false etc., that is, the सुवृता वाक् which alone would have yielded the desired fruit, was converted into राक्षसी वाक्). The gods ultimately secured the Chief Prāṇa (आसन्नपद्म-आस्थे सवम्, residing in the mouth) to discharge the functions of the Udgātṛ and were victorious).

आखनं—a clod of earth, आखन्यते, इति, what is dug out (the form is Vedic, आखनं would be the correct form according to Pāṇini).

The Bṛha says तेभ्य एष प्राण उद्गायात्, here Prāṇa is definitely the Kartṛ, but in view of the Upakrama, Udgītha has to be taken to be the Kartṛ.

[422] (Sūtra 7) The Siddhānta is :—

The Vidyās are different, because the context is different. The Chāndogya advocates the worship of Pranava (Omkāra) as part of the Udgītha, while the Br̥ha advocates the worship of the entire Udgītha; difference of context necessitates the difference of Vidheya, and Rūpabheda follows as a corollary. The Upāśya for the Chandogas is the Praṇava; for the Vājins, it is the Udgātr (the singer of the Udgītha). There is no contradiction here in respect of the Upakrama, because the Udgātr implies the Udgāna-Karman which gives the fruit, the defeat of the enemies. Thus, though the injunction is the same, Rūpabheda involves Vidyābheda.

Even in one and the same recension, though there is Vidhānasāmya, the injunction advocating हिरण्यपुरुषहृदि is regarded as different from the injunction advocating हृदि on the Paramātman, characterised by the attributes, — higher than the best (वरीयसां परः — परोवरीयः) etc.

(Sūtra 8) The sameness of the name Udgīthavidyā does not count for much, as it can be there even if Vidheyabheda exists; for instance, the name Agnihotra is applicable to the daily fire-sacrifice, and also to the Ayanāgnihotra (lasting for a month) of the Kuṇḍapāyins (who employ a Kuṇḍa, bowl for drinking). The expression Udgīthavidyā is used in the Chāndogya to refer to several Vidyās in the first chapter.

(Sūtra 9) In the first chapter of the Chāndogya, the Upāśya Praṇava introduced first, is the same described in the later Vidyās; so, it is fair to say that the Udgītha which comes in the middle of the Section should refer to the Praṇava (a part of the Udgītha). It is usual to use a समुदायशब्द in the sense of part; दग्धः पटः is used even when only a portion of the piece of cloth is burnt.

In the Br̥ha, the Upāśya is the Udgātr who is the Katṛ in respect of the entire Udgītha.

Therefore, the two Vidyās are different.

According to Sāhaka, Sūtras 6-8 form the third Adhikaraṇa. He explains प्रकरणभेदात् as प्रक्रमभेदात्.

His comments on Sūtra 8 are :—

प्रसिद्धभेदानाप्यभिद्वेष्टदोषपूर्णमासादीनां काठकैः प्रन्यपठितानां काठकसंज्ञैस्त्वं दृश्यते, तथेहापि भविष्यति यत्र तु नास्ति कश्चिद्वेदजातीयको भेदस्तु तत्र भन्तु मन्त्रेययाज्ञैश्चैस्त्वं यथा संवर्गविषादिषु ।

Sāhaka takes Sūtra 9 as forming a separate Adhikaraṇa. The passage discussed is ओमित्येतदक्षरमुद्गीयमुपासीत. Four explanations are possible in the case of the सामानाधिकरण्य of ओम् and उद्गीथ — (1) अघ्यास, (2) अपवाद, (3) एकत्व, and (4) विशेषणत्व. The Siddhānta is that the विशेषणत्व is the right one to be accepted — च शब्दोऽयं तु स्थाननिवेशी पक्षत्रयव्यावर्तनप्रयोजनः । ... व्याप्तेः सर्ववेदसाधारण्यात् । सर्वव्याप्यक्षरमिह मा प्रसञ्जीत्यत्र उद्गीथशब्देनाक्षरं विशेष्यते, कथं नामोद्गीथावयवमूलं ओंकारो यथेति । ... समुदायेषु प्रयुक्ताः शब्दा अवयवेष्वपि प्रवर्तमाना दृष्टाः पटप्रासादिषु । अतश्च व्याप्तेर्हेतोरमित्येतदक्षरमित्येतत्सामोद्गीथमित्येतद्विशेषणमिति समञ्जसमेतत् ... ।

[423] (Sūtra 10) This Adhikaraṇa contains only one Sūtra.

In the Prāṇa-Vidyā described in the Chāndogya and Bṛha, Prāṇa is credited with the possession of the attributes ज्येष्ठ (being the eldest) and श्रेष्ठ (being the most eminent), and also वसिष्ठ (being the richest) etc., connected with the sense-organs. The Kauṣītaki does not so describe Vasīṣṭhatva etc.

The objector says that here is obviously Rūpabheda; therefore, the Vidyās are different.

The Siddhānta is—We must understand the attributes Vasīṣṭhatva etc. as being connected with the Prāṇavidyā in the Kauṣītaki, because the entire sat up of the Prāṇa-episode in the same—the quarrel amongst the Prāṇas; the withdrawal of Vāk etc., one by one; the helplessness of the sense-organs on the departure of Prāṇa from the body, and the pronouncement that Prāṇa was the best etc. The Kauṣītaki mentions Vasīṣṭhatva as belonging to Vāk and others, to prove the pre-eminent nature of Prāṇa. It does not expressly describe Vasīṣṭhatva etc., as associated with Prāṇa, but that is obvious, as Prāṇa is the cause of Vāk and others possessing those attributes.

[Prāṇa is there in the womb from the very beginning, the sense-organs come into existence later; so Prāṇa is Jyēṣṭha, and also Śreṣṭha as the functions of the sense-organs depend upon him.

Vāk has Vasīṣṭhatva; it is generally conceded that a good speaker becomes successful in the world.

Cakṣus has Pratiṣṭhā, as the eye is equally at home, while looking on high and low ground.

Srotra has Saṃpat, as the ear has the good fortune of being able to listen to the Vedas and to appreciate their meaning.

Manas is the Āyatana, as it alone enjoys the knowledge derived from the various sense-organs.

The sense-organs being dependent on Prāṇa candidly admitted that their functions were really the work of Prāṇa and acknowledged his supremacy].

So, the Vidyās are not different.

Śaṅkara remarks — एतस्यापि हि ज्ञात्यां श्रुता गुणाः श्रुता एव सर्वत्र भवन्ति, गुणवतो भेदाभावात् । न हि देवदत्त शौर्यादिगुणत्वेन स्वदेशे प्रसिद्धो देशान्तरं गतस्तेदं स्वैरभिभाषितशौर्यादिगुणोऽप्यतद्गुणो भवति । ... तस्मादेकप्रधानसंबद्धा धर्मा एकत्राप्युच्यमानाः सर्वत्रैवोपसंहर्तव्या इति ।

[424] (Sūtra 11) The fourth Adhikaraṇa contains seven Sūtras (11-17) — According to Śaṅkara, Sūtras 11-13, 14-15 and 16-17 form three separate Adhikaraṇas.

The question is whether the natural (Svarūpa) attributes of Brahman are to be taken up in all the Brahmadevidyās.

The objector says that only those attributes which are mentioned in a particular context are relevant in that context.

The Siddhānta is that Brahman (the principal entity) being the same, all its attributes have to be included everywhere.

[425] (Sūtra 12) The objector says — If the Siddhānta view is accepted, attributes like प्रियशिखत्वं (having Priya as the head) spoken of in the Taittiriya would have to be taken as Brahmaguṇas.

The answer is — Priyaśirastva etc., are not the attributes of Brahman; they are only metaphorically attributed to Brahman described as having a human form. Otherwise, Brahman would be possessed of parts, and subject to increase and decrease, which is contradicted by the Sruti, सत्यं ह्यनमनन्तं ब्रह्म.

Śaṅkara remarks — न चैते प्रियशिखत्वादयो ब्रह्मधर्माः, कोसधर्मास्त्वेते...अपि च परस्मिन्ब्रह्मणि चित्तावतारोपायमात्रत्वेनैते परिकल्प्यन्ते, न द्रष्टव्यत्वेन... सत्यप्युपास्यस्य ब्रह्मण एकत्वे, प्रक्रमभेदादुपासनाभेदे सति मान्यग्यधर्माणामन्धोऽव्यवसायः । यथा च द्वे नायविकं वृषतिमुपासते. छत्रेणैका चामरेण चान्या, तत्रोपास्यैकत्वेऽप्युपासनाभेदो धर्मव्यवस्था च भवति, एवमिहापीति । उपचितापचितगुणत्वं हि सति भेदव्यवहारे सगुणे ब्रह्मण्युपपद्यते, न निर्गुणे परस्मिन्ब्रह्मणि ।

Both Rāmānuja and Śaṅkara agree that प्रधानस्य means ब्रह्मणः आनन्द etc., are the स्वरूपगुण of Brahman according to Rāmānuja. The word प्रधान suggests that there is some अप्रज्ञान feature of Brahman which can be associated with Priyaśirastva etc. This almost looks like the sanctioning by the Sūtrakāra of the Para and Apra divisions of Brahman referred to by Śaṅkara.

[426] (Sūtra 13) As regards the attributes Ānanda etc., they are to be included everywhere as they are capable of pointing out to the real nature of Brahman.

अर्थसमाना :— अर्थप्रतीत्यनुबन्धिनः (Rāmānuja); अर्थसामान्याश्रयिण्यस्य ब्रह्मणो धर्मिण एकत्वात् (Śaṅkara).

[427] (Sūtra 14) The metaphorical description of Brahman as having a human form, and the attributes Priyaśirastva etc., are for the purpose of meditation alone, there being no other justification for the same.

According to Śaṅkara, the passage under discussion is—इन्द्रियैर्भ्यः परा ह्यर्थाः... पुरुषाश्च परं किञ्चित् from the Kāṇḍaka, and the question is whether the various entities referred to therein, are to be understood as superior to or beyond the preceding ones, or only the Puruṣa as the supreme of all. The Siddhānta is that पुरुषः सर्वेभ्यः परः is the thesis which alone points out to the right knowledge. No purpose is served by understanding the various entities as superior or otherwise.

(Sūtra 15) The word Ātman expressly shows that the पुरुषविधत्त is metaphorical, as Ātman cannot have any head, wings etc.

Śaṅkara says that the Puruṣa is called Ātman (एष सर्वेषु भूतेषु गूढोत्तमः न प्रमाद्यते) for the purpose of conveying the idea of the Highest Place.

(Sūtra 16) The word Ātman in the passage (अन्योऽन्तर आत्मा, आनन्दमयः) means the Paramātman, as in other passages like आत्मा वा ददमेव एवाय आसीत् .

According to Śaṅkara who begins a new Adhikaraṇa here, the passage under discussion is आत्मा वा...स ईक्षत लोकान् सृजा इति. The objector says that the Lokasruti can belong only to the Ātman, the Paramātmā being connected with the Mahābhūtasruti to start with. The Siddhānta is—The Paramātmā is meant here in conformity with other Sruti-passages like तस्माद्वा एतस्मादत्मान आनाशं समूतं. Where some particular feature like 'having a human form' is actually mentioned, there may be some justification in understanding Ātman as some one other than the Paramātmā.

उत्तरात् — आनन्दमयविशेषात् वाक्यात् (Rāmānuja), उत्तरमुपलभ्यते, 'स ऐक्षत रेमानु छजा इति' इत्येवमादि. तस्मात् (Sankara)

[428] (Sūtra 17) In the passages प्राणमय मनोमय, etc., also, it can be emphatically stated that the Paramātmā is there. The next sentence सोऽकामयत shows that the word Ātman is to be explained as Paramātmā (Rāmānuja seems to give this as an alternative interpretation of उत्तरात् in the last Sūtra)

Sankara — Only on the supposition that the Paramātmā is meant here, that the परमात्मैकत्वं emphatically stated prior to creation, can be justified, (लोकादिवचनं तु श्रुत्यन्तप्रसिद्धमहभूतघटपन्तरमिति योजयिष्यामि श्रुत्यन्तरसिद्धो हि समानरिपयो विशेष श्रुत्यन्तरेष्वप्युपसर्तव्यो भवति ।)

Sankara gives also an alternative interpretation of the two Sūtras 16 and 17 — The two passages in the Brha योऽयं विज्ञानमय प्राणेषु and स वा एष महानज आत्मा, show ब्रह्मात्मता similarly, the two passages in the Chāndogya सदेव सोऽम्येदमप्र- and सत्त्वनसि describe तादात्म्य — The objector says that the two sets of passages are अतुल्यार्थ, the answer is they are तुल्यार्थ, उत्तरात् means तादात्म्यापदेशात् सर्वमेतत् तादात्म्यप्रतिपादनायानेवायकल्पते, न तादात्म्यसंपादनायम् । तस्मादेवजातीयकेषु वाक्येषु प्रतिपादनप्रसार-नेदेऽपि प्रतिपाद्यार्थान्नेह इति सिद्धम् ।

[429] (Sūtra 18) Both Sankara and Rāmānuja take this Sūtra as forming a separate Adhikarana

The Brha and the Chāndogya refer to the sipping of water (Ācamana) before and after eating food, the water sipped is credited with furnishing clothing for the naked fire or Prana

The question is whether the sipping of water is enjoined here (आनामेदं is optative, and so निधिग्रह्य is there), and अन्नं कुस्ते (no विधिग्रह्य here) implies only glorification

The Pūrvapakṣin's view is that as Ācamana can be understood from the Smṛtis as a part of the normal procedure, Ācamana cannot be the subject of an injunction

[430] The Siddhānta is—The clothing of the fire with water—which is an Apūrvā thing is enjoined here, because the Sāstra can be significant if only some Apūrvā or Aprāpta is referred to (कार्वाक्यानात् अप्राप्तार्यानात्) Ācamana is Prāpta from the Smṛtis the Aprāpta प्राणवासस्वानुसंधान is enjoined here in the case of the water sipped

Rāmānuja regards this Sūtra as a continuation of Sūtra 10 (Sūtras 11–17 being regarded as dealing with प्रासादिक matter).

According to Saṅkara, the question discussed is whether both Ācamana and Anagnatācintana are enjoined, or if only one, which one?

The Pūrvapakṣin says — Both Ācamana and Anagnatācintana should be regarded as enjoined. I take both of them to be Apūrvā; or Ācamana is enjoined and the other is merely for glorification.

The Siddhānta is — Ācamana is not enjoined, as it is not entitled to be called Apūrvā, being well-known in the Smṛtis; neither can the present passage be taken as the basis of the Smṛti-description, because here the Śruti is concerned with Prāṇavidyā, while the Smṛti deals with the Ācamana in a general way for ensuring purity or cleanliness (न च भिन्नविषययोः श्रुतिस्मृत्योर्बलबलभावेऽवकल्पते). There cannot be two injunctions either; in that case there would be वाक्यभेद which is a serious blemish to be avoided at all costs. It is therefore better to say that पश्चान्नददि is enjoined upon the water the sipping of which is well-known.)

[431] (Sūtra 19) The sixth Adhikaraṇa contains only one Sūtra.

Sāṅḍilya-vidyā is described twice by the Vājasaneyins — in the Agni-rahasya Section, and later on in the Br̥ha proper, with some additional attributes. Here in both places, Saṃyoga, Codanā, Nāman etc., are the same; only the उपास्यगुण differ.

The Pūrvapakṣin says that उपास्यगुणभेद means रूपभेद and रूपभेद shows विद्याभेद.

The Siddhānta is — The two Vidyās are the same, because the Upāsya is the same.

Saṅkara — यथा भिन्नासु शास्त्रासु विद्यैकत्वं गुणोपसंहारश्च भवति, एवमेकस्यापि शाखायां भवितुं नर्हति, उपास्याभेदात् । [432] (Sūtra 20) The seventh Adhikaraṇa contains three Sūtras.

In the Br̥ha Satya-Brahman is described as Upāsya existing in the orb of the Sun, with its secret Adhidaivata name अहः, and in the right eye, with its secret Adhyātmā name अहम्.

The question is whether the two secret names are to be associated with both the places or not.

The Pūrvapakṣin says that as the Upāsya is the same, the Vidyā is the same, and so, there ought to be Guṇopasaṃhāra in both cases.

Saṅkara — एका हीयं सत्यविद्या, अधिदैवमध्यात्मं चाधीत. उपसमाभेदात्, व्यतिपक्षपाठाच्च । कस्य तस्यामुदितो धर्मस्तस्यामेव न स्यात्? यो ह्याचार्ये कश्चिदनुगमनाद्विचारार्थोदितः स प्रामगतेऽरभ्यगते च तुल्यवदेव भवति । [433] (Sūtra 21) The Siddhānta is — Here is उपास्यरूपविशेषः the स्थानं are different; so, there is विद्याभेद (in the case of the Sāṅḍilya-vidyā, the उपास्यस्थान is the same).

Saṅkara — एकस्यापि त्वस्याविशेषोपादानेनैव, उपनिषद्भिरोपदेशात्, सत्त्वस्यस्यैव सा भवितुमर्हति । अस्ति चायं दृष्टान्तः — रात्र्यप्याचार्यस्वरूपानगमे यदाचार्यग्यानीनस्यानुवर्तनमुक्तं न तत्तिष्ठतो भवति, यच्च तिष्ठत उक्तं न तदासीनस्येति । प्रामाण्ययोस्त्वाचार्यस्वरूपानपायात्, तत्त्वरूपानुवर्तस्य च धर्मस्य प्रामाण्यमूलन-विशेषाभावाद्भयत्र तुल्यवत्तायः, इत्यदृष्टान्तः सः ।

(Sūtra 22) The passage तस्यैतस्य तदेव रूपं यदमुष्य रूपं furnishes the reason why there is no गुणोपसंहार where the आधार is different (which means that there is विद्याभेद). If there is विद्येभ्यः अतिदेश has no scope. But here is अतिदेश (extension of the rule) in respect of Rūpa etc.

Saṅkara — अद्यादित्यस्यानभेदमिदं न्यमानं, अन्योन्यस्मिन्नुपमं हार्यान् पश्यन्, इहातिदेशोऽदित्य-
पुन्यगतान् रूपादीनक्षिपुष्य उपसंहरति ' तस्यैतस्य तदेव रूपम् ' इत्यादिना ।

[434] (Sūtra 23) The eighth Adhikaraṇa contains only one Sūtra.

The question is whether the attributes वीर्यसंश्रुति, बुद्ध्याप्ति referred to in respect of Brahman, are to be associated with all Vidyās.

The Siddhānta is — They cannot obviously be considered in all Vidyās. बुद्ध्याप्ति and वीर्यसंश्रुति cannot surely be connected with Vidyās associated with अल्पस्थानः.

संश्रुतिबुद्ध्याप्ति is a समाहारद्वन्द्व compound.

Saṅkara remarks — अत एव आयतनविशेषयोगात् ... समानगुणान्नानेन हि प्रत्युपरधापितास्तु विप्रकृष्टदेशास्त्वपि विद्यास्तु विप्रकृष्टदेशा गुणा उपसंहियेरमिति युक्तम् । ... तस्मात्, वीर्यसंश्रुत्यादीनां शाण्डिल्य-
विद्यादिष्वनुपमं हार इति ।

[435] (Sūtra 24) Only one Sūtra in the ninth Adhikaraṇa

The question is whether the Puruṣavidyā in the Taittirīya (where is described the Puruṣa-sacrifice) and that in the Chāndogya (where the fruit यद्वैराजं जीवति is given) are the same.

The Pūrvapakṣin says — The two पुरुषविद्याs are one, as they are called by the same name, and there is रूपैश्च also inasmuch as the limbs of a human being are compared to the parts of a sacrifice.

[436] The Siddhānta is — The Vidyās are different; the special attributes mentioned in one are not found in the other. Thus—

Taittirīya

(1) The three Savanas

(सार्यं प्राप्तमैष्यन्दिने)
are mentioned.

(2) There is no दीक्षा- कल्पन of अशिषिष्या etc.

(3) Ātman is spoken of as Yajamāna, Śraddhā
as his wife etc.

Chāndogya

The सवनत्व refers to a man's life.

दीक्षाकल्पन is mentioned.

No such description.

So, there is रूपभेदः कलसंयोग also is different, the acquisition of Brahman (in the Taittirīya) and Āyusprāpti (in the Chāndogya).

Saṅkara remarks — यदपि किञ्चिन्मरणावभ्युत्पादिसाम्यं, तदप्यल्पयस्त्वाद्भूयसा वैलक्षण्ये- नाभिभूयमानं न प्रत्यभिज्ञापनक्षमम् । ... विदुषो यज्ञस्य हि, तच्चैते समानाधिकरणे पठ्यौः । विद्वानेव यो यज्ञस्तस्येति ।
... व्यधिकरणे त्वेते पठ्यौः, विदुषो यो यज्ञस्तस्येति । ... तस्मात्, शास्त्रान्तरापीतानां पुरुषविद्यापर्मणांमा-
सामिन्वादीनामप्राप्तिस्तौत्तरीयके ।

[437] (Sūtra 25) Only one Sūtra in the tenth Adhikaraṇa.

The question is whether the different introductory Mantras शुक्रं प्रविश्य, शं नो मित्रः etc., and the Karmans, Pravargya etc., are parts of the Vidyā (विद्या) or not.

The Pūrvapakṣin says—As these are found in the same संनिधि, and as some of the Mantras are not found elsewhere, they should all be taken as विद्या.

[438] The Siddhānta is—The Mantras in question cannot be Vidyāṅga: they are employed in Vedic study, Abhicāra-karman etc., and so they are subsidiary to the study-injunction. They are mentioned in the Vidyā-section, not because they are Vidyāṅga, but because, like the Upanisads they are to be recited by day (not by night) and are to be taught in a forest (not at the house).

Śaṅkara remarks — एवमन्येषामपि मन्त्राणां केषांविहिद्वेन, केषांविद्वत्त्वेन, केषांविद्वत्प्रमाणान्तरेण, इत्येवमर्थान्तरेषु विनियुक्तानां रहस्यपठितानामपि सतां न संनिधिमन्त्रेण विद्याशेषत्वोपपत्तिः । दुर्बलो हि संनिधिः श्रुत्यादिभ्य इत्युक्तं प्रथमे तन्त्रे...तथा कर्मणामपि प्रवर्गार्थानामन्यत्र विनियुक्तानां न विद्याशेषत्वोपपत्तिः । ...अस्यानुवचनादिघर्मसामान्यास्तु संनिधिपाठ इति संतोष्यम् ।

[439] (Sūtra 26) Only one Sūtra in the eleventh Adhikaraṇa.

The knower of Vidyā is said in some Sruti-passages to secure Brahman, or Paramasāmya (highest similarity) with it, by abandoning his sinful deeds, or both meritorious and sinful deeds; other passages speak of the good deeds and sinful deeds being shared respectively by friends (or dear relatives) and by enemies (or undesirable relatives).

The question is whether all these ideas are to be clubbed together, and form part of all Vidyās.

[440] The Siddhānta is—All these must be taken together. Hāna (abandonment) implies Upāyana (taking up) and vice versa (so as to ensure that the original position is not changed, and there is no vacuum—One may ask, however, why this is necessary at all) and so, even if these ideas occur in different sections, they must be considered together. To understand these as being optional is but the last resort, when there is no other alternative. To take a similar instance, the Kauṣītakinis say in a general manner, कुशा वानस्पत्याः (कुशा is a word of the feminine gender); but Sāṅkhyanins particularise the Kuśās as belonging to, or chopped out of the Udumbara tree, and this particularisation is held to be in order. Similarly देवासुराणां छन्दोभिः (where the Chandases are spoken of as referring to the Gods and the Asuras) is interpreted in the light of देवछन्दांसि पूर्वम् which points out the order to be followed.

[As far as possible, विकल्प should be avoided, as it is associated with eight blemishes.

A modern student studying at the University, who is accustomed to see options given to almost all questions in his examination paper would be interested to know that the Pūrvamīmāṃsā looks upon Vikalpa or option in the case of an injunction with abhorrence and recommends that Vikalpa is to be avoided at all costs, as it is अदोषप्रस्त.

• This is how a Vikalpa is associated with eight blemishes—

We have, suppose, the two injunctions

(A) नृदिभिर्यजेत, and

(B) यवैर्यजेत.

Now, all such injunctions in the Karmakāṇḍa are equally authoritative and powerful.

If we take our stand on A, and sacrifice with the Vṛhis, then the following blemishes would result—

(1) Discarding the authority of B.

(2) Acknowledging the अप्राप्त्य of B, by ignoring the injunction there.

To correct our mistake, if we take our stand on B, then the Doṣas are—

(3) Discarding the authority of A.

(4) Acknowledging the अप्राप्त्य of A, by ignoring the injunction there.

Now, believing that we made a mistake in first taking our stand on A, we take our stand first on B, then the Doṣas are—

(5) }
and } same as 3 and 4 above.
(6) }

If we change over to A, the two Doṣas would be—

(7) }
and } same as 1 and 2 above.
(8) }

Thus there are eight Doṣas. It would be seen that the craze for analysis in detail produces these eight Doṣas; they can be easily reduced at least to four].

So also, द्विर्य्येन वोडशिनः स्तोत्रमुपाकरोति, and ऋक्षिज उपनायन्ति are to be interpreted in the light of सूर्ये वोडशिनः, and अनर्च्युत्सगायेत् respectively.

Saṅkara — वागुष्टेयत्वेन संकीर्त्यते, दि नार्थमिदं सूत्रम् । ... तदुक्तं अथैवास्तेष्व विधूयनश्रुतिष्वेतेन सूत्रेणैतच्चिन्तयितव्यम् ।

[441] (Sūtra 27) The twelfth Adhikaraṇa comprises five Sūtras.

Saṅkara makes three Adhikaraṇas out of the five Sūtras (27-28; 29-30 and 31).

The question discussed is—When do the giving up and the taking up of good and evil deeds take place—at the time when the body is given up, or when the knower of Vidyā is proceeding by the Devayāna path ?

The Pūrvapakṣin says—The Śruti-passages refer to both the alternatives. It is better to conclude therefore that some portion of the Sukṛta-duṣkṛta is given up at the separation from the body, and the rest while on the journey by the Devayāna.

The Siddhānta is — the Sukṛta-duṣkṛta is given up entirely at the departure from the body; for, there is nothing to be experienced as a result of the Sukṛta-duṣkṛta further on. The attainment to Brahman rules out any other enjoyment. ताडिनः are the Chandogas.

(Sūtra 28) The Śruti-passages have to be explained so as not to contradict the above conclusion, and not according to one's will. The shaking away of the Sukṛta-duṣkṛta mentioned in the Kauṣītaki on the journey by the Devayāna, must be taken to have happened prior to the journey.

उन्वतः—यथेष्टम् (This is hardly satisfactory; उन्वतः is almost meaningless, and पदानामन्वयो वर्णनीयः has to be supplied). उभयाविरोधाद्—क्षुतेः, अर्थस्वभावस्य च. अविरोधेन.

Śāhkaṛa takes उभयाविरोधाद् to mean निमित्तनैमित्तिकयोः क्षपतेः—If Sukṛta and Duṣkṛta are abandoned on the way, how could they be destroyed later? Yama, Niyama etc., can not be practised in the absence of the body; their observance is possible only in the state of a Sādhaka.

According to Nimbārka, उभय refers to हान and उपादान (Sukṛta is received, by friends, and Duṣkṛta by the enemies, of their free will).

Nimbārka's interpretation suits the context better.

[442] (Sūtra 29) The Pūrvapakṣin argues—The Śruti-passage describing the Devayāna path could be significant only on the supposition that a portion of the Sukṛta-duṣkṛta is given up at the departure from the body and the remaining portion on the journey itself; otherwise, if the whole of the Sukṛta-duṣkṛta is given up or destroyed at the time of the separation from the body, even the subtle body would not be there, in which case the Ātman with no body at all, can not proceed on the journey.

[According to Śāhkaṛa this Sūtra does not embody the view of the the Pūrvapakṣin. उभयया is taken by him to mean अर्थवती (गतिः), and न, अर्थवती; the course of the Devayāna is both significant (for those who go in for saguṇaśaṣṭa) and not significant (in the case of those who secure Brahman straightaway), so that there could be no conflict with the Śruti-passages like निरञ्जनः परमं साम्यमुपैति. While it must be admitted that it is somewhat unusual to speak of the division of गति into अर्थवती and न, अर्थवती, and that the Sūtrakāra does not explicitly refer to the Saguna and Nirguna Vidyās, Śāhkaṛa's interpretation is by no means wide of the mark. A general rule, though of universal application, has got to take into account the possibility or otherwise of its being applicable to particular cases. (For instance, there is usually a general rule under which a candidate at an examination is given 'grace marks' under certain circumstances; but this does not apply to a candidate who has already secured a sufficient percentage of marks).

Nimbārka understands उभयया to mean that both good and evil deeds are, shaken off; otherwise, if the good deeds still remain, there would not be non-return of the Soul, which is specially mentioned by the Śruti.

(Sūtra 30) The Siddhānta is—There is the destruction of all Karman, but owing to the potency of the Vidyā, the knower is provided with the subtle body all the same, as is mentioned in the Śruti (तद्विद्यायां देहसवचलक्षणार्थः) The Vidyā might not be intended for producing the subtle body, but it could do so incidentally. (For instance, a canal or tank built for providing water for purposes of irrigation, can also supply water for drinking, washing etc.)

Sankara's comments—गतिरारण्यमूतो ह्यर्थः पर्यङ्कविद्यादिषु रागद्वेषादिसंश्लेषात् तदर्थवर्तते गतिः । न हि सम्यग्दर्शने तद्विद्यायां पञ्चविंशतिः तत्रानर्थमिति । न तत्रैव विमर्शो दृश्यः, यथा लोकं ग्रामप्राप्ते देशान्तरप्राप्य पन्था अवश्यते न, आरोग्यप्राप्ते, एवमिदमिति ।

[443] (Sūtra 31) Sankara reads this Sūtra after the next one, and forms two Adhikaranas of the two

The objector points out that in the case of Vasistha, Apāntaratamas (an ancient Vyāsa) and others, a new birth, a new body etc., have been stated. How could this be?

The answer is—There are Jñāins and Jñāins, the Prārabdha-karman of some requires them to take another birth, and they do not go by the Devayāna path

Sankara mentions besides Vasistha and Apāntaratamas (वेदाचार्यं पुराणिर्विष्णुनियोगात् कलिद्वैपायनं सर्वौ कृष्णद्वैपायनं सर्वभूतः), Bhṛgu Sanathumāra, Dakṣa, Nārada etc. All these act under the orders of the Lord (एवमपान्तरतमं प्रवृत्तयोऽप्यश्वरा परमेश्वरेण तेषु तेष्वधिकारेषु नियुक्ताः सन्ति सत्यपि सम्यग्दर्शने कैवल्यहेतावक्षीणकर्माणि यावदधिकारमवशिष्टं तदवसाने चापश्यन्ति ।)

[444] (Sūtra 32) Rāmānuja takes this Sūtra as forming the thirteenth Adhikarana and reads सर्वेषां for सर्वसा (which is Sankara's reading), अद्वा तप इति — अद्वा = Ved;c for अद्वा (or, अद्वा तप both can be taken as nom. sing.)

All Upāsananisthas have to go by the Devayāna path, not only those engaged in Upāsanas where the path is actually mentioned. Śrutis and Smṛtis, all agree on this point

Sankara says that in certain Saguna-vidyās such as Paryāyaka-vidyā, Upakosala-vidyā, Pañcāgni-vidyā, Dahara-vidyā, Gati is actually mentioned. Gati is not mentioned in Madhu-vidyā, Sāṅdilya-vidyā, Soḍaśakala-vidyā, Vaiśvānara-vidyā etc., but it is clear from Śruti and Smṛti that the Gati is meant for all who know the Saguna-vidyās

[445] (Sūtra 33) The fourteenth Adhikarana comprises two Sūtras. Sankara takes Sūtra 33 as forming a separate Adhikarana

In the Brāhma and the Mundaka, Brahman is described as Akṣara, and as one possessing negative qualities, Asthūlatva etc.

The question is whether these negative qualities are to be associated with all Vidyās, or not

The Pūrvapakṣin argues that the negative attributes by themselves cannot enable us to understand the true nature of Brahman so they should be associated only with those Vidyās where they are actually mentioned

The Siddhānta is—As Brahman is the same throughout, and the negative qualities are useful in pointing out its peculiar nature being opposed to what is fit to be abandoned—, all the attributes must be associated with all Vidyās; the Guṇas must be provided with some Guṇin, they cannot be left just hanging in the air, so to speak; for instance, the Mantra अग्निर्वै होत्रं वेतु in the Sāmaveda, which is subsidiary to जामदग्न्यचतुर्त्रपुरोडाश, is made use of by the followers of the Yajurveda (for recitation silently), as it pertains to the principal Upāsya. Jaimini also says मुह्येन वेदसंयोगः.

(The चतुर्त्र sacrifice was instituted by Jamadagni. The Mantra अग्निर्वै... is sung loudly when the Puroḍāśa is offered; but it is recited silently, being subordinate to the Upasad mentioned in the Yajurveda. The Ādhāna-karman is the Pradhāna (principal rite) in the Yajurveda, and in conformity with the Pradhāna-rite उपास्यत्वं is resorted to there (उपास्य यजुषा). The Puroḍāśa-pradhāna is the business of the Adhvaryu concerned with the Yajurveda).

Sankara says—समानो हि सर्वत्र विद्येयनिराकरणरूपो ब्रह्मप्रतिपादनप्रकारः । ... प्रपञ्चार्थं चार्थं चिन्ताभेदः । ... यथा जामदग्न्येऽह्नेन पुरोडाशिनीपुंसस्तु चोदित्वाह पुरोडाशमन्त्राणाम् 'अग्निर्वै होत्रं वेदधरम्' इत्येवमादीनाम्, उद्गातृवेदोत्पन्नानामपि, अध्वर्युभिरभिर्षव्यो भरति, अध्वर्युर्कृत् रुवायपुरोडाशप्रदानस्य प्रधान-तन्त्रत्वाच्चाह्वानात् ।

[446] (Sūtra 34) According to Sankara, this Sūtra constitutes a separate Adhikaraṇa.

The negative attributes particularise the positive attributes Ānanda etc., and are to be meditated upon; thus alone can the nature of Brahman be differentiated from others. Other attributes Sarvakarmatva etc., may be confined to the particular Vidyās.

The Pūrvapakṣin says—The passages ॥ रुपणे... in the Muṇḍaka and ॥ पितृन्ती... in the Kaṭha refer to different Vidyās, as in the former, one bird is said to be the enjoyer, the other being only the looker on; while in the latter both are said to be enjoyers.

The Siddhānta is—There is विद्येकत्व (इयदामननात् means इयत्तापरिच्छिन्नं द्विबोपेतं द्वयैरुपनिमित्तमामनन्ति). Both these passages describe जीवद्वितीय-ईश्वरः; the context shows that the Paramātmā is the वेद्य, and so, there is no विद्याभेद. (प्रपञ्चार्थ एवैव योगः, तस्माच्च, अधिकथनोपसंहारः)

[447] (Sūtra 35) The fifteenth Adhikaraṇa comprises two Sūtras In the Bṛha

Uṣasta asks the question,

यत्साक्षादपरोक्षादब्रह्म...

तन्म आनन्द

and

Kahola asks the question

यदेव साक्षादपरोक्षादब्रह्म...

the answer given is

यः प्राणेन प्राणिनो स त आत्मा... एष त आत्मा सर्वान्तरः, अतोऽन्यद् आर्तम् ।

the answer given is

योऽज्ञानायापिनासे शोकं मृत्युमत्येति... अतोऽन्यदातम् ।

The Pūrvapakṣin says—There is विद्याभेद here; for, the answers are different, though the question is the same. In the first answer, the Pratyagātman

(who is the Prāṇitr, and also Sarvāntara, being associated with Bhūtagrāma) is meant, and in the second, the Paramātman.

The Siddhānta is—There is no viśābheḍ. For, the question and answer pertain to the Paramātman alone who is beyond hunger and thirst, who is inside all and who is Prāṇana-kartr (the Pratyagātman = not Prāṇitr in Susupti). In both the answers अनोऽप्यदर्शम् occurs, which can only refer to everything else other than the Paramātman, being described as miserable. The repetition of the question and answer is for purpose of showing the unique character and greatness of the Paramātman. In the Śvetaketu-episode, the question (भूय एव मा भगवान् विज्ञापयतु) and the answer (एतदाम्भमिदं सर्वं...तत्त्वमसि) are repeated as many as nine times, still the Vidyā = one Śankara splits this Sūtra into two Sūtras, अन्तरा भूतप्राप्तवत्स्वात्मनः is a separate Sūtra.

Śankara says—अन्तरा प्राणावेशोपात्त्वत्मनो विदेहत्वमिति । सर्वान्तरो हि स्वानोमयान्पविशिष्टः पृच्छयते च प्रत्युच्यते च । न हि द्वावात्मानावेकस्मिन्देहे सर्वान्तरौ संभवतः ।...एकस्य तु भूतप्राप्तयनैव सर्वान्तरत्वं स्यात्...अथवा भूतप्राप्तवदिति श्रुत्यन्तरं निदर्शयति यथा—एते देव सर्वभूतेषु गृह...उपदेशान्तरवदुपपत्तौ. —'त आत्मा तत्त्वमसि श्वेतकेतो' इति नवहृत्सोऽप्युपदेशो न विद्याभेदो भवति...उक्तमोपसहाराभ्यामेकार्थवगमाद् ।

[448] (Sūtra 36) There cannot be viśābheḍ as the question and the answer refer to the same topic, and there is the same injunctive expression (विष्टासेद्), and the same Upāśya, सर्वान्तरात्मनश्च. The idea about प्राप्तवद्हेतुत्वं in Usasta's question has to be incorporated in भगवानाद्युक्तीत्वं in Kahola's question, and thus both come to know of Brahman being differentiated from Jiva. Similar is the case in the other Sadvidyās in the Chāndogya.

Rāmānuja takes इतरत्वं to mean practically the same thing as उपदेशवत् in the last Sūtra.

[449] (Sūtra 37) परा देवता expressed by सत् is referred to in other Sruti-passages, and so, the attributes सत्य etc., are to be incorporated there also.

[Śankara takes व्यतिहारोक्तिरिति इतरत्वं, and सैव सयादय as forming two separate Adhikaranas. The *विषयवाक्य*s are — तयोऽहं मोक्षो .. in the Āitareya, and खं वा अहमस्मि .. in the Jābāla. The question is whether the मति referred to here = उपवक्ष्या or एवक्ष्या.

The Pūrvapakṣin says that the मति = एवक्ष्या. The व्यतिहार is intended for strengthening the एकत्वमति.

The Siddhānta is—व्यतिहारोऽयमाध्यानायाग्न्यायेत. इतरत्वं । यदेतरे गुणा. सर्वोत्तमप्रभृतय आध्यानायाग्न्यायन्ते तद्वत् ।

सैव मत्पादय — The *विषयवाक्य*s are, स यो हितं महद्यज्ञं ... and त्यक्तमयमसो म आदितः, in the Brha.

The question is whether two Satya-vidyās are described here or only one.

The Siddhānta is—Only one Vidyā is referred to, तद्यत्तत्त्वमयम्, इति प्रकृताकर्षणात्

Śankara further says—केचित्सुनस्मिन्सूत्रे, इदं च वाजमनेयस्मदयादित्यपुष्टाविषयं वाक्यं, छान्दोग्ये च, अयं य एषोऽन्तरादित्ये दिक्षमयः पुष्टो दृश्यते, अयं य एषोऽक्षिणि पुष्टो दृश्यते, इत्युदाहृत्य

तेवेयमक्षयादित्यपुरुषाद्वियया विया, उभयनैवेति कृवा सत्यादीन्गुणान् वाजसनेयिभ्यश्चान्दोगानामुपसंहार्यान्मन्त्रानो
तन साधु लक्ष्यते । छान्दोग्ये हि...कर्मसंबन्धिचिह्नानि भवन्ति...नैवं वाजसनेयके किंचित्कर्मसंबन्धि चिह्नमस्ति ।
तस्मात् प्रक्रमभेदाद्विद्याभेदे सति गुणव्यवस्थैव युज्यते ।]

Rāmānuja attacks the arrangement and interpretation by Śaṅkara, of the two Sūtras. He says that as the Sarvātmabhāva is already known from तत्त्वमसि etc., nothing remains to be known by 'the व्यवहारानुसंधान in the passages अहं वै त्वमसि and तयोऽहं सोऽमौ etc. There can not be उपासनेभ्य in स यो ह वै तन्मह्यक्ष .. and तद्यत्तत्त्वमसौ स आदित्यः..., because there is स्थानभेद (अक्षि and आदित्य). There is the fault of mutual interdependence (दत्तेतराध्यत्व),—if we hold there is एवविद्यान्, then the पूर्णफल is प्रधान, and the उत्तरफल is subsidiary; when the प्रधानगुणभाव is understood, then there is विद्येभ्य.

[450] (Sūtra 38) The sixteenth Adhikarana comprises two Sūtras.

The Pūrvapakṣin says that in the Chāndogya Ākāśa characterised by the eight attributes is the Upāśya, in the Bṛha, one abiding in the Ākāśa, possessing the attributes वशित्व etc., is the Upāśya. So, there is रूपभेद and consequently विद्याभेद.

The Siddhānta is—There is no रूपभेद. The same Brahman which is elsewhere described as having the attributes सत्यकामत्व etc., is described in both places, as is clear from its being हृदयायतन, सेतु etc. Attributes वशित्व etc., are but the particular features of Satyasamkalpatva etc. The fruit—acquisition of Brahman—is the same. It has already been proved in I.3.13, that Ākāśa in the Chāndogya-passage means Brahman; in the Bṛha, Ākāśa means the void in the heart.

Śaṅkara—कामादीति सत्यकामादीत्यर्थः । यथा देवदत्तो दत्तः, सत्यभामा भामेति । ...सगुणा हि ब्रह्मविद्या छान्दोग्य उपदिश्यते...वाजसनेयके तु निर्गुणमेव परं ब्रह्मोपदिश्यमानं दृश्यते...वशिष्ठादि तु तत्तत्तुल्यर्थमेव गुणजातं...गुणवत्तत्तु ब्रह्मण एकत्वाद्विभूतिप्रदर्शनाय गुणोपसंहारः सूत्रितो नोपासनायेति द्रष्टव्यम् ।

Though there is no explicit reference to the division—Saguṇa and Nirguṇa—in the passages, Śaṅkara's interpretation strikes as logically convincing.

[451] (Sūtra 39) The Śruti-passages mention the various attributes of the Upāśya Brahman with respect, and condemn their अवेदनः they also emphasise Brahman's glory now and then. Passages like अग्राहो न गृह्यते show that Brahman is प्रपञ्चविरक्षण, as it cannot be known by any other Pramāṇa.

[Śaṅkara takes this Sūtra and the next one as forming a separate Adhikarana.

The विषयवाक्य is from the Vaiśvānara-vidyā in the Chāndogya तद्यज्ञत प्रथमा मागच्छेत्तद्धोमं...प्राणाय स्वाहा, followed by स एतदेवं विद्वानग्निहोत्रं जुहोति.

The question is whether there is the लोप of Prāṇāgnihotra, when the Bhojana is over.

The Pūrvapakṣin says there is no Bhojanalopa as another Śruti in the same place makes the Svāmi – bhojana the principal thing, and so, Agnihotralopa is out of question ... अयत्तद्व्यैकतागुणविशेषविधानार्थमिदं वाक्यं तद्यज्ञतमिति । अतो गुणलोपे न मुख्येत्येत्येवं प्राप्तम् । भोजनलोपेऽप्यत्रिवर्त्येन वा द्रव्येणाविरुद्धेन प्रतिनिधानन्यायेन प्राणाग्निहोत्रस्यानुष्ठानमिति ।]

[452] (Sūtra 40) When the Pratyagātman is merged into Brahman, his movement at will is described in the Śruti, and that is the fruit fit for being enjoyed by the Released one; so, the attributes सत्यज्ञानत्व etc., have to be associated with him.

[This is the Siddhānta—sūtra according to Śaṅkara — उपस्थिते भोजनेऽनन्तरमा-
देव भोजनद्रव्याग्रयणोपनिषत्ताव प्राणाग्निहोत्रं निवर्तितव्यम् । ... भोजनपक्ष एवेते मन्त्रद्रव्यदेवतासंयोगात्पुन ह्येता निवर्तयितव्याः । गत्वादरदर्शनवचनं तद्भोजनपक्षे प्राथम्यादिवचनार्थम् । ... तस्माद्भोजनश्लेषे श्लेष एव प्राणाग्नि-
होत्रस्येति ।]

While Rāmānuja takes Sūtras 40-41 as a continuation of the sixteenth Adhikaraṇa, Śaṅkara takes them as concerned with quite another problem—where there is Prāṇāgnihotraślopa when there is Bhojanalopa. It is difficult to discover what was in the mind of the Sūtrakāra. It is clear, however, that Rāmānuja's interpretation practically covers the same ground as was covered by the preceding Sūtras.

[453] (Sūtra 41) Both Rāmānuja and Śaṅkara take this Sūtra as forming a separate Adhikaraṇa, and the विषयवाक्य. भोगमित्येतदक्षरमुद्गीथमुपासीत... is the same.

The Pūrvapakṣin says that the Udgīthopāsana etc., being कर्माङ्गाग्रय, and having a separate fruit indicated by the passage यदेव विद्यया करोति... तदेव वीर्यवत्तरं भवति, must be, as a rule, gone through; just as the Anuṣṭhāna is gone through, with the ladle made of leaves having a separate fruit — not hearing any calumny.

The Siddhānta is — There can be no rule that the meditation on the Udgītha etc., has to be gone through in the case of Karmans; for Karmans are spoken of in connection with both the wise and the non-wise.

Upāsanaśloka is the principal here, and must have a separate fruit viz. heaven, other than the Karmaphala (वीर्यवत्तर means 'capable of flouting the karmaphala').

कर्माङ्गाग्रय have a separate Phala, and so they can not be associated with Upāsanaśloka as a rule, like the Godohana in the sacrifice. रात्रिसन्न्यास — Even if there is no mention of the fruit in the injunction-sentence proper, the Vidhi-vākya is competent to refer to the fruit — रात्रौ हवेवाक् is an injunction-sentence not mentioning the fruit, but the fruit प्रतिष्ठा is to be associated with it, considering the glorificatory passage प्रतिष्ठन्तीह वा एते... गोदोहनादिवत्—गोदोहनेन पशुकामस्य प्रणयेत् is the Vidhi-vākya (Godohana—the vessel used for milking the cow) which enjoins only one who is desirous of securing cattle, to bring the water in the Godohana-vessel. One who is not Paśukāma may bring the water in any manner he likes. Godohana is not a necessary adjunct for the sacrificial Karman.

Śaṅkara says—यथा कल्पाग्रयावपि गोदोहनादीनि फलसंयोगादतिदयानि, एवमुद्गीथायासन्नान्यपीति द्रष्टव्यम् । अत एव च कल्पमूलकारा नैवजातीयकान्युपासनानि प्रत्युप कल्पार्थवन्तः ।

[454] (Sūtra 42) Both Rāmānuja and Śaṅkara take this Sūtra as forming a separate Adhikaraṇa.

In the Chāndogya, the meditation on Daharākāśa as the Paramātman is described and also the Upāśanā of the attributes Satyakāmatva etc.

The Pūrvapakṣin says that when once the Guṇin, the Daharākāśa is meditated upon, there is no need to meditate upon the Daharākāśa again while meditating upon the Guṇas

The Siddhānta is that the Daharākāśa particularised by specific qualities is different from the Daharākāśa in its natural form, so, the repetition of the meditation on the Daharākāśa is necessary, just as separate offerings are made to Indra, the Rājan, to Indra, the Adhirāja, to Indra, the Svarāj, although Indra is the same

[According to Sankara the subject for discussion is whether Prāṇa the best (or, absorber) of the sense-organs Vāk etc., and Vāyu, the best (or, absorber) of the Deities Agni etc., (described in the Brha and the Chāndogya) are separate or the same

The Siddhānta is they are separate —

आध्यानायै ह्ययमध्यात्माधिदेवविभागोपदेत, सोऽसत्याध्यानपुण्यकलेऽनर्थक इत्याह । तत्त्वामेदेऽध्यवस्थामेदादुपदेशमेदयोनानुचिन्तनमेदोपपत्ते । तदुक्तं सकर्षे 'नाना वा देवता पुण्यज्ञानाह' इति । विधेय्येऽपि त्वध्यात्माधिदेवमेदात्प्रयुक्तिमेदो भवति, अग्निहोत्र इव सायप्रत कालमेदाह ।]

[455] (Sūtra 43) The nineteenth Adhikarana contains only one Sūtra Sūtras 44-50 and 51-52 form the twentieth and twentfirst Adhikaranas Sankara takes Sūtras 44-52 as forming only one Adhikarana.

In the Taittiriya, after the Dahara-vidyā comes the Nārāyaṇa-anuvāka describing the Akāśa as thousand-headed etc

The Pūrvapakṣin says that the context shows that the Nārāyaṇa-anuvāka is just a continuation of the preceding Dahara-anuvāka, so the same Dahara-vidyā is mentioned here

The Siddhānta is — Various characteristic features of the Paramātman are found here, such as Asthūlatva, Ānandagūnatva etc Līnga (चिन्द्भूत वाक्यम्) is always more powerful than the Prakaraṇa, as Jaimini has declared Expressions like Padmakōśapratikāśa reminding one of the Hārḍākāśa cannot point out to the Dahara-vidyā in the face of the Līnga

सहस्रशीर्षम्—Here the accusative must be treated as the nominative, in accordance with the expression तदुपासितव्यम् where the termination तव्य shows what the Upāśya is

[Sankara takes आत्मनोऽग्नीर्मानोमयान्मनश्चित् वाञ्छित . कर्मचितोऽग्निचित (where the imaginary or superimposed fires are mentioned) as the विषयवाक्य, and the question is whether these मनश्चितादि fires are subordinate to the sacrificial Kriyā or are केवलविद्यात्मक The Siddhānta is that though the context favours the view that they are क्रियानुप्रवेशिन, the Līngas show that they constitute an independent Vidyā]

[456] (Sūtra 44) The Śatapatha-Brahmana mentions the fires, मनश्चित्, वाञ्छित, प्राणचित्, अशुचित्, श्रोत्रचित्, कर्मचित्, and अग्निचित्

The question is whether these fires are विद्यारूप or क्रियारूप

The Pūrvapakṣin says that they are क्रियारूप as the context shows that the इष्टकचित् fire is the subject-matter. Even if the fires are विद्यारूप, there क्रियारूपत्वं is appropriate like the मानसग्रह (the Soma cup imagined in the mind)

In a twelve-day or दशरात्र sacrifice the tenth day is called अ-विद्यास्य (when no वाक्य is to be uttered) the sacrificial acts like the taking up of the Soma-cup etc., are to be gone through in the mind

Sankara remarks — लिङ्गमपि त्वेवातायकं न प्रकरणादवलीयो भवति । अन्यार्थदर्शनं हेतुः । सापादिनाग्निप्रशमारूपात्वात् । मानसवत् । यथा-दशरात्रस्य दशमेऽद्विनि आविवाग्नये पृथिव्या पात्रेण, समुद्रस्य सोमस्य, प्रनापनये देवतायै गृह्यमाणस्य ग्रहणासादनहवनाहरणोपदानभक्षणानि मानसान्येवान्नायन्ते । स च मानसोऽपि ग्रहकस्य क्रियाप्रकरणात् क्रियाशेष एव भवति, एवमयमप्यग्निकप इत्यर्थः ।

(Sūtra 45) The Pūrvapakṣin continues — Further, the passage एकैक एव तावान्याधानतो दूरे shows that the strength of the इष्टकचित् fire gets into each of the imagined fires as well so the imagined fires are क्रियामय

[457] (Sūtra 46) The Siddhānta is — The fires मनश्चित् etc., are विद्यारूप alone, as is clear from the expression एव in विद्यया दैवैव एवविदधिता भवन्ति, and the कृतु is also विद्यामय as is seen from the passage ते मनसैवापायन्त मनसैवाचीयन्त

Sankara reads दर्शनाच्च as a separate Sūtra. By दर्शन is meant the Sūtra लिङ्गभूयस्त्वात् (III 3 44).

[458] (Sūtra 47) Śruti, Liṅga and Vākya are more powerful than Prakarana. All these favour the विद्यारूपत्वं of the imagined fires, and so the independent state of the fires मनश्चित् etc., stands unchallenged

[459] (Sūtra 48) Though there is no actual injunction, nor is seen any connection with the fruit, still the विद्यामय sacrifice as being separate from the क्रियामय sacrifice, is pointed out by the accessories mentioned such as मनसैव ग्रहा अग्रहन्त. By आदि we are to understand Śruti, Liṅga and Vākya. From the Anubandhas are known other Vidyās as being separate from the Dahara-vidyā. The injunction though not expressly stated can always be understood to be there, as also the fruit.

Sankara says — एवमनुवधादिभ्यः कारणेभ्यः स्वातन्त्र्यं मनश्चित्तादीनाम् । प्रहान्तरपृथक्त्ववत् । यथा प्रहान्तराणि शाण्डिल्यविद्याप्रवृत्तिनि स्थेन स्वेनानुबन्धमानानि प्रपञ्चेय सर्वेभ्यः प्रहान्तरेभ्यश्च स्वपन्त्राणि भवन्ति, एवमिति । इदथावेति राजसूयप्रकरणपठिताया प्रकरणादुरभ्यो वर्णनयानुबन्धात्, राजसूयाच्च राजसूयस्य । तदुक्तं प्रथमे कण्ठे — 'कन्वयोयामिति चेन्न वर्णनयसयोगात्' (जे सू ११।१।७)

[460] (Sūtra 49) The objector says that the मनश्चित् fires are quite similar to the actual fires they have the same potency as that of the fires, so they should have क्रियामयकन्वुप्रवेश

The answer is — Being similar does not mean that an entity should be possessed of every characteristic of the entity compared to some characteristic or other possessed by both is sufficient for the function of Atideśa. For instance, in the Satapatha the मण्डल्युक्त is said to be Mṛtyu this means only that the मण्डल्युक्त is the controller like Mṛtyu not that he abides in or goes to the Mṛtyuloka. The Atideśa also shows that the मनश्चित् fires have their fruit through विद्यामयकृत्, as the इष्टकचित् fire has from the particular sacrifice.

Śaṅkara says—न मानसप्रज्ञासामान्यादपि मनश्चितादीनां क्रियाशेषत्वं कल्पम् ।...न हि किञ्चित् कस्यचित्केनचित् सामान्यं न संभवति...मृत्युवत् ।...अग्निर्वै मृत्युः, इति चाग्न्यादित्यपुरुषयोः समानेऽपि मृत्युशब्दप्रयोगे नात्यन्तसाम्यापत्तिः । यथा च 'असौ वाव लोको गौतमाग्निः...' इत्यत्र न समिदादिसामान्यालोकस्याग्निभावापत्तिः ।

(Sūtra 50) The next Brāhmaṇa passage अयं वाव लोक एषोऽग्निश्चितः...shows that the मनश्चित passage also points out to विद्यामयत्व. The Vaiśvānara-vidyā also enjoins Vidyā. Therefore, the Agnirahasya-passage cannot be referring to कियैकविषय. मनश्चित etc., are to be associated with the Brhā-passage, as there are so many parts of the fire that are to be imagined in respect of the fire's मनश्चित etc.

Śaṅkara says—भूय न्यवयवाः संपादयितव्या विद्यात्याग्नित्येतस्मात्कारणादग्निनानुवक्ष्यते विद्या, न कर्मोद्भवत्वात् । [461] (Sūtra 51) The twenty-first Adhikaraṇa comprises two Sūtras.

Some say that the Pratyagātman should be thought of as being the knower, doer etc., because as such he abides in the body of the worshipper. The passage यथाकृतु ... refers to the Upāśya.

[462] (Sūtra 52) The above view is refuted here. The Pratyagātman with the form as knower, is not to be meditated upon, but the Paramātman possessed of the attributes Apahatapāpmatva etc., who is different from the Ātman in the Samsāra-state and is to be reached by the Released. Just as the attainment to Brahman in its real nature is mentioned; so also is mentioned the realisation of Atman as he really is, which takes place after a lapse of time.

Śaṅkara takes the above two Sūtras as referring to the views of the Lokāyatikas, and their refutation (Bhāskara also understands the Lokāyatikas by एके). Śaṅkara says—समाप्ता प्रासङ्गिकी कथा when he begins his comment on the next Adhikaraṇa. The reference to the doctrine of the Lokāyatikas is clearly out of place here; for the whole of the third Adhyāya dealing with the Vidyās and the Upāśanās, presupposes the existence of the Ātman as apart from the body. Could it be that these two Sūtras are an interpolation? The interpretation by other Bhāṣyakāras is not satisfactory either.

Śaṅkara — इह देहव्यतिरिक्तस्यात्मनः सद्भावः समर्थ्यते धन्यमोक्षाधिस्तरसिद्धये ।... प्रथमे पादे शास्त्रकलोपभोगयोग्यस्य देहव्यतिरिक्तस्यात्मनोऽस्तित्वमुक्तम् । सत्यमुक्तं भाष्यकृता न तु तत्रात्मास्तित्वे सूत्रमस्ति । इह तु स्वयमेव सूत्रकृता तदस्तित्वमाक्षेप्युर सरं प्रतिष्ठापितम् ... आक्षेपपरिपूर्वैश्च हि परिहारोक्तिर्विवाक्षितेऽर्थे स्थूणावित्सननन्यायेन रडो बुद्धिमुत्पादयति ।

Śaṅkara reads the Sūtra as व्यतिरेकस्तद्भावाभावात्..., Bhāskara, Nimbārka, Śrīkaṇṭha etc; read...तद्भावभाविवात्.

[463] (Sūtra 53) The twenty-second Adhikarana comprises two Sūtras.

In connection with the Udgīthopāsanā, the Upāsanās concerned with the parts of the sacrifice, such as Om, Pañcaviḍha Sāman (Hinkara, Prastāva, Udgītha, Pratihāra and Nidhana), Uktha, this Loka, are mentioned

The Pūrvapakṣin says that these Upāsanās connected with the Udgītha are to be associated only with the particular recensions.

The answer is—The Upāsanās are to be associated with all the Sākhās of the Vedas, as the sacrifice is the same everywhere (Sūtra 54) The Mantras are made use of in all Sākhās By आदि, we are to understand Jāti, Guna, Samkhyā Sādrśya, Krama, Dravya and Karman (all these are to be considered in all Sākhās).

Sankara says — मन्त्राणां कर्मणां गुणानां च शास्त्रान्तरोत्पन्नानामपि शास्त्रान्तर उपसमूहो दृश्यते तत्साध्याध्याया कर्मोद्धाना सर्वत्रानुवृत्तिरेवमाश्रितानामपि प्रत्ययानामित्यविरोधः ।

[464] (Sūtra 55) The twenty-third Adhikarana comprises only one Sūtra

In the Vaiśvānara-vidyā, Vaiśvānara is the Paramātman having the three words as his body, with the various limbs equated with Dyau, Āditya etc

The question is whether the Upāsanā is to be of Vaiśvānara as a whole, or of the various parts.

The Pūrvapakṣin says—There should be व्यस्तोपासन, as there is a separate Upadeśa and also Phalabheda

[465] An objector points out that in that case the समस्तोपासन would not be in order as a separate fruit is mentioned, there is no Vākyabheda in this arrangement, as the case is similar to the instruction about नामाद्युपासन and its fruit in the Bhūmavidyā where also a separate fruit is mentioned for भूमविद्या

The answer is — समस्तोपासन is more appropriate, because thereby alone is एकवाक्यता secured, the उपासन and the फल about the अद्वैतोपासन are just अनुवाद For instance, Vaiśvānara is offered द्वादशरूपाल (offering on twelve pots/herds), though अष्टरूपाल etc., are mentioned in connection with the sacrifice, which shows that there is to be समस्तोपासन. In the नामाद्युपासन in the Bhūmavidyā, no disaster is mentioned, as accruing from the wrong Upāsanā, while here in the व्यस्तोपासन of Vaiśvānara, the loss of the head, the loss of eye-sight etc., are mentioned, so the two cases are not on the same level

Śaṅkara says — भूयः पदार्थोपचयात्मकस्य समस्तस्य वैधानरोपासनस्य ज्यायस्त्वं प्राधान्यमस्मिन् वाक्ये विवक्षितं भवितुमर्हति, न प्रत्येकमवयवोपासनानामपि । कतुवत् । यथा कतुषु दर्शपूर्णमासप्रभृतिषु सामस्येन साङ्गप्रधानप्रयोग एवैको विवक्ष्यते, न व्यस्तानामपि प्रयोगः प्रयाजादीनाम् । नाप्येकदेशाङ्गयुक्तस्य प्रधानस्य तद्वत् ।... केचित्चत्र समस्तोपासने पक्षं ज्यायांसं प्रतिष्ठाप्य ज्यायस्त्ववचनादेव किल व्यस्तोपासनपक्षमपि सूत्रमार्गेऽनुमन्यत इति कथयन्ति, तदयुक्तम् । एकवाक्यताकगतौ सत्यां वाक्यभेदस्त्वनस्यान्याभ्यन्तात् ।

[466] (Sūtra 56) The twenty-fourth Adhikaraṇa comprises only one Sūtra.

There are various Vidyās, Sadvidyā, Bhūmavidyā etc., described in the same Sākhā or different Sākhās having the same fruit Brahmaprāpti ; there are others, with the fruit concerning Prāṇa etc.

The Pūrvapakṣin says that as the Brahman to be known is the same, there is ह्यैक्य in the case of the Vidyās, and so विवक्ष्य is clearly indicated.

The Siddhānta is — The Vidyās are different as there is Bheda evident all through — Bheda in respect of Śabda Abhyāsa, Samkhyā, Guṇa, Prakriyā and Nāmadheya. So, there is विवक्षेद.

Śaṅkara says — वैधैक्यनिमित्ते च विधैकत्वे सर्वत्र निरङ्कुशे प्रतिज्ञायमाने समस्तगुणोपसंहारेऽस्य प्रतिज्ञायते । [467] (Sūtra 57) The twenty-fifth Adhikaraṇa comprises two Sūtras.

The question is whether the different Vidyās are to be optionally gone through, or they are compulsory.

The Siddhānta is — The fruit of all these viz. Brahmaprāpti being the same, there is no point in going through all of them; so, विरूप is obviously indicated.

Śaṅkara takes this Sūtra as forming a separate Adhikaraṇa.

[468] (Sūtra 58) The Vidyās that cater for some specific object desired, may be combined according to one's will; for, the fruit is not अवशिष्ट there (अधिकस्याधिकं फलम्).

(Rāmānuja's comment on this Sūtra is half as short as the Sūtra itself)

Śaṅkara takes this Sūtra as forming a separate Adhikaraṇa.

(Sūtra 59) The twenty-sixth Adhikaraṇa contains six Sūtras. With this Adhikaraṇa, the third Quarter of the third Adhyāya comes to an end.

Sūtras 59-62 form the Pūrvapakṣa.

The question discussed is whether the Udgītha-vidyās associated with the parts of the Udgīthakratu, are to be taken up as a rule in the Kratus being meant for the Kratu, or optionally.

The Pūrvapakṣin says that the Vidyās must be taken up as a rule. For, in the injunction उद्गीथमुपासीत, there is no mention of फलमेवञ्च (in the case of गोदोहनेन पशुनामस्य प्रणयेत्, फलसंक्षेप is established by the expression पशुनाम; so, गोदोहन is optional; only he who is पशुनाम can use the गोदोहन). In all cases, the Upāsana is connected with the Udgītha. There is फलनिर्देश in the passage यदेव नियया करोति ...तदेव कीर्तयन्तम्, but it is merely a glorification (Arthavāda), as in the case of one using the ladle made of leaves, not hearing any calumny.

(Sūtra 60) There is no additional qualification in उद्गीयमुपासीत (like पञ्चकामस्य), so the Upāsānā is only उद्गीयाङ्ग.

(Sūtra 61) The passage होतृपदनादेवापि दुष्कृतोपमसमाहरति proves the समाहार (combination) rule. Thus—होतृ-सदन is the seat of the Hotṛ priest, then, the work of the Hotṛ, which is to recite the Om. When the Om is properly recited by the Hotṛ, even if the Udgāṭṛ priest commits a fault in singing the Udgītha (which is the same as Om), there is no flaw. Thus the two, Om and Udgītha, are to be considered together, and so, the Upāsānā becomes a part of the sacrifice.

(Sūtra 62) The Sruti ओमिति. आधाययति: ओमिति शंसति etc., shows that Om is associated with the Upāsānā; hence like the Udgītha etc., the Upāsānās—Udgīthadi—are to be gone through as a rule.

[469] (Sūtra 63) The Siddhānta is—The Udgītha-upāsānās are not associated with the Udgītha in the Sruti. Association is possible in such cases only when one thing is subordinate to another. Vidyā is said to make Karman more powerful; that means it ensures some fruit different from that of the sacrifice. Being more powerful, in effect, means giving the fruit without delay. In the case of the passage पर्णमयी जुहुः ..., the use of the ladle is not directly the means of the fruit—hearing no calumny; so, the फलश्रुति there is merely अर्थवाद.

(Sūtra 64) The Sruti says that the realisation of Brahman affords protection to all. If उद्गीयामुपासनस्य are to be gone through as a rule, the fruit would ensue from the Upāsānā itself, and the protection by Brahman would be meaningless.

So, the Upāsānās are not to be gone through as a rule, as they are intended to give some special fruit.

In III, 3 (third Quarter of the third Adhyāya) the important question is dealt with from a practical point of view viz. how to reconcile the different Vidyās described in the Upaniṣads, under different names, sometimes under the same name, but with different details.

Rāmānuja arrives at the following major conclusions in this connection :—

(1) There is त्रिवैक्य, if the Codanā (injunction), Vedyā (the entity to be known), Ākhyā (name) and Phalasaṃyoga (association with the fruit) are the same, as Codanā etc., enable one to conclude that the Vidyās are identical.

(2) Repetition, different context, different Vidheyā do not necessarily lead to Vidyā-bheda. In the case of one and the same Vidyā, it is possible to have the above three features concerning the different types of students learning the Vidyā.

(3) Any specific qualification laid down for the students does not lead to Vidyā-bheda; for, that pertains only to the Veda or Svādhyāya of the students.

(4) All the Upāsanās are meant for the realisation of the Paramātmā, according to the Śruti. This means that the various attributes (Gunas) mentioned in respect of the Paramātmā, are to be ordinarily combined for the purpose of the Upāsanā.

(5) Some times, though the Nāmadheya and Codanā in the Vidyā are the same Prakāraṇa-bheda and Rūpa-bheda lead to Vidyā-bheda.

(6) We must distinguish between the natural or essential attributes, and the superimposed attributes of Brahman; only, the former are to be combined or taken note of elsewhere. The superimposed attributes have their own use for the purpose of the Upāsanā.

(7) Only those superimposed Gunas which are not mentioned elsewhere can be the subject of a Vidhi or injunction.

(8) Being connected with a particular place (Sthāna-sambandhitva) shows Rūpabheda which is responsible for Vidyā-bheda.

(9) Certain Gunas like Dyuvyāpti cannot be associated with any limited or Alpa-Sthāna described in a particular Vidyā, and so, there cannot be Upasamhāra of them.

(10) When Rūpa, Phala and Samyoga (with the Phala) are known to be different, the Gunas described in one Sākhā cannot be associated with the same Vidyā in another Sākhā.

Rāmānuja, on the whole, has ably applied the above principles to the particular cases discussed

This Quarter is usually neglected by the students, it is therefore thought necessary to give here a brief summary of the questions raised and discussed here.

Vaiśvānara-vidyā

(1) This Vidyā is described in the various recensions with some variations, all the same it is one Vidyā because—

(Jaimini Sūtra (एकं वा सयोगं रूप-बोधना-आख्या-विज्ञेयत् II 49) is our guide in such cases.)

(A) Codanā or Vidhi is the same.

(B) Rūpa (Vaiśvānara) also is the same.

(C) Ākhyā (or, name, Vaiśvānara) is the same.

(D) Phalāsamīyoga (Brahma-prāpti) is the same.

(2) Vidheya-bheda, or different context, or repetition of the Śruti does not necessarily prove Vidyā-bheda, as the teaching has to take into account the capacity of the learners.

(3) Certain peculiar features like the Siro-vrata are connected with the Veda-study and not with the Vidyā.

(4) When Vidyāikya is established, the attributes mentioned in other recensions are to be incorporated everywhere.

Udgītha-vidyā.

(5) The Udgītha-vidyā described in the Chāndogya is different from that in the Bṛha, because

(A) the Prakaraṇa is different ;

(B) the Chandogas worship the Praṇava which is a part of the Udgītha, while the Vājins worship the whole of the Udgītha. Thus Prakara-bheda shows Vidheyā-bheda and Rūpa-bheda which lead to Vidyā-bheda.

(6) Mere Saṃjñāika does not lead to विवेक.

Prāṇa-vidyā

(7) Additional Guṇas mentioned do not make the Vidyā different.

(8) What may be called Svarūpa(basic)-Guṇas of Brahman must be incorporated everywhere.

(9) Guṇas like Priyaśīrastva based upon some superimposition upon Brahman, are valid only in the particular context, and are useful only for meditation-purposes.

(10) The word Ātman is often used to mean the Paramātmān.

(11) The Śāstra enjoins only what is Apūrva; what can be understood from the Smṛti, Ācāra etc., can not be the subject of a Vidhi.

(12) A mere difference in the list of Guṇas does not produce Rūpa-bheda.

(13) Even if the Upāśya is one, Upāśya-rūpa-viśesa does make the Vidyās different ; e g. Brahman worshipped as abiding in the Sun's orb, and as having the eye as the Adhāra.

(14) The possibility of incorporating various attributes has got to be carefully considered ; e. g. संवृत्तिवृत्ति etc., can not be incorporated in the Vidyās concerned with limited Sthānas ; such attributes serve the purpose of glorifying the Vidyā in question, that is all.

Puruṣa-Vidyā

(15) The Puruṣa-vidyās in the Taittirīya and the Chāndogya are different, because there is Rūpa-bheda and Phala-bheda; so, the attributes in one recension cannot be incorporated elsewhere.

(16) The Mantras recited at the beginning of the Upaniṣads, and the Karmans associated with them are not Vidyāṅgas; they are associated with the Abhicāra-karman, or study.

(17) The question about the abandonment and acceptance of the Sukṛta and Duṣkṛta of the Vidvat is solved as meaning that Hāna must be regarded as incomplete without the Upādāna being indicated and vice versa.

The Sukṛta and Duṣkṛta are completely given up when the Vidvat abandons the body.

It is unnecessary to hold that some part of the Karman remains to account for the subtle body accompanying the Soul after death. The Vidyā-māhātmya ensures this.

In the case of Vasiṣṭha and others, their Prārabdha-karman caused their association with another body.

(18) All those going in for some Upāsana or other have to go by the Arcirādi path.

(19) In the case of all Brahma-vidyās, the attributes Asthūlatva etc., associated with the Akṣara-Brahman, have to be understood.

(20) प्रश्नप्रतिवचनभेद does not lead to विद्याभेद, so long as the injunction is the same and the entity referred to is the same.

(21) In the Chāndogya, Ākāśa is the Upāśya; in the Brh the entity abiding in the Ākāśa is the Upāśya; but this does not lead to Vidyā-bheda, as the Vidyā is easily understood as being the same, because the Guṇas, and the Phala (Brahma-prāpti) are the same, and the word Akāśa itself means Paramātman. The various Guṇas indicate respect and सत्यकामत्व etc., are definitely associated with the Mukta.

(22) Udgīthopāśanas are to be invariably associated with Karmans.
Dahara - vidyā

(23) Different Gunas mentioned are to be associated with the Dahara and are to be meditated upon as directed.

(24) Where special qualities of the Para Brahman are definitely mentioned, पदब्रह्म must be taken to be the Upāśya (e.g. though the context refers to the Dahara-vidyā, the Nārāyaṇa-section deals with the Highest Brahman, the Nārāyaṇa); these characteristics (Līngas) are more powerful than the context, as laid down by Jaimini.
Manasācīta fires etc.

(25) The fires Manasācīta etc., are not कियारूप, but विद्यारूप, and so the sacrifice described is विद्यामय. Śruti, Līnga and Vākya are always more important than Prakarana. An Atidesa cannot be accepted merely on the strength of any common characteristic. So, the Agnirahasya-passage cannot indicate कियैकविषयत्व.

(26) Ātman is to be meditated upon in the form in which he is found in the state of Mokṣa.

(27) Like the Mantras, the Upāśanas also associated with the Udgītha etc., are to be regarded as belonging to all recensions or Sākhās.
Vaiśvānara-vidyā

(28) The Vaiśvānara (Paramātman) described as having the three worlds as his body, has to be worshipped as a whole and not in parts. It is only then that एकत्रायता is duly ensured.

(29) The various Vidyās with their special characteristics must be treated as being separate; even though all of them point out to the same Phala, Brahmaprāpti.

(30) The different Vidyās cannot be joined together, and there is no point in doing so; as the Phala is the same. Where the Phala is specifically shown to be different, the Vidyās cannot be considered together, because there cannot be between them the relation of part and the whole or अङ्गान्निभाव.

This Quarter deals with the role played by Vidyā and Karman in securing Mokṣa.

The first Adhikaraṇa contains as many as twenty Sūtras, and is the longest of all Adhikaraṇas. Sūtras 1, 8-20 are the Siddhānta-sūtras while 2-7 represent the Pūrvapakṣa.

[470] (Sūtra 1) अतः—विद्यात (विद्या was the matter in hand in the last Quarter)

Bādarāyana holds that Mokṣa can come only from Vidyā or Jñāna, as is expressly stated in the Sūtri

[471] (Sūtra 2) Jaimini holds that after all Vidyā enables the sacrificer to perform his duty properly, and hence it is subordinate to the sacrifice. Just as the materials for the sacrifice are but the auxiliaries of the sacrifice Vidyā is also on the same footing. So विद्यात पुरुषार्थे only an Arthavāda not to be understood literally.

[472] (Sūtras 3-5) Jaimini's view is fortified by the following arguments —

(1) Brahman-knowers like Janaka, Aśvapati, Kekaya and others are known to have performed sacrifices.

(2) The Śruti says whatever is performed by Vidyā (विद्या — the instrumental case shows that Vidyā is Karmāṅga) is more potent. The passage यदेव विद्या करोति occurs in the context dealing with Udgīthavidyā but as Śruti is always more powerful than the context, the passage must be understood as referring to Vidyās in general.

(3) Both Vidyā and Karman are associated with the Jīva, as is clear from the passage त (जीव) विद्याकर्मणी समन्वयते ।

[473] (Sūtras 6-7) Karman is prescribed by the Śruti (वेदमधीत्य) for those possessed of Vidyā.

तद्वत् — विद्यावत्

(5) कुर्वन्नेव कर्माणि, it is clear from this passage that एव excludes Jñāna, and Karman alone is capable of giving its fruit independently.

[474] (Sūtra 8) The Siddhānta is that Bādarāyana's view is the correct one. The Śruti describes the Highest Brahman alone as the Vedya (fit to be known), being far superior to the Jīva who is the Kartr.

[475] (Sūtra 9) If the Śruti describes Janaka and others as engaged in Karman, it also refers to Kāvaśeyas and other Rsis as deliberately giving up all Karman as the fruit of Karman is opposed to Mokṣa the fruit of Vidyā.

[476] (Sūtra 10) The passage यदेव विद्या करोति is misunderstood by the Pūrvapakṣin. It refers only to the Udgītha-vidyā the matter in hand. If the Śruti had said यदेव करोति तद्विद्या, the passage would have been meant for general application.

[477] (Sūtra 11) The passage विद्याकर्मणि समन्वयमेते simply means that Vidyā and Karman give their fruit independently. When one says—'Let these hundred rupees be divided between A and B', fifty rupees are given to each one of them. There is no question of any joint or co-operative ownership.

[478] (Sūtra 12) The passage वेदमधीन्य confines itself to the Adhyayana, and has nothing to do with any subsequent act.

आधानवत्—The Śruti अग्नीनादधीत enjoins only the laying on of the fires, not the subsequent adjustment of the fires as required by the sacrificial procedure.

[479] (Sūtra 13) The passage हुवर्त्तवेद्...does not refer to any Karman having a separate fruit as such; the Karman can very well be subordinate to Vidyā.

(Sūtra 14) Or, the passage is meant only to glorify Vidyā.

[480] (Sūtra 15) The Śruti ... किं प्रजया करिष्यामः clearly says that the householder's stage of life could be abandoned or skipped over by the Vidvat. This shows that Vidyā cannot be Karmāṅga.

(Sūtra 16) The Śruti क्षियते हव्यप्रत्विः ... proclaims that all Karman is completely annihilated when the Highest is realised. So, Vidyā can never be Karmāṅga.

[481] Sūtras 17-20 describe the exact position of the Saṁnyāsins (Urdhvairetas — One who does not indulge in sexual intercourse).

(Sūtra 17) The question is—Can the Saṁnyāsāśrama be accepted as a recognised stage of life at all?

The objector says—The passage यावज्जीवमग्निहोत्रं जुहोति shows that the Agnihotra has to be performed throughout one's life; the Saṁnyāsins do not perform the Agnihotra. So, it is better to say that the Saṁnyāsāśrama is not recognised as authoritative.

The Siddhānta is—The Śruti which is always more powerful than the Smṛti, actually says त्रयो धर्मस्तथाः (three pillars of Dharma) and refers to Pravrajins by name in this connection. Obviously, therefore, यावज्जीव ... refers to those who continue to take interest in the Saṁsāra.

[482] (Sūtra 18) Jaimini points out that the passage त्रयो धर्मस्तथाः does not contain any injunction; there is only Anuvāda here, or the passage is meant to be only a glorification of the Brahmopāsana which is the subject-matter. As regards the passage ये के चारुण्ये ..., it is really concerned with describing the Devayāna path, and there cannot be any question about any injunction about the Āśramas. The Śruti वीरहा वा एष देवानां ... actually condemns the Agni-worship in so many words. In short, the Śāstra does not countenance the Saṁnyāsāśrama.

[483] (Sūtra 19) Bādarāyaṇa points out that in the expression त्रयो धर्मस्तथाः, the important word is त्रयः (three); and the three pillars of Dharma must refer to, if we look carefully to the context, the three Āśramas—

(1) Brahmacārin (Adhyayana and Brahmācārya), (2) Gṛhastha (गृहोऽध्ययनं दानम्), and (3) Vaikhāṇasa and Sannyāsa (तपः). The Viṣṇupurāṇa puts this beyond all doubt. The Sannyāsāśrama is, therefore, surely on the same level as the Gṛhasthāśrama and is अनुष्ठेय.

The passage ये चेमे अरण्ये ... may contain the Devayāna-vidhi, but that Vidhi surely presupposes the Sannyāsāśrama as pointed out by the word Tapas which is a special characteristic of that Āśrama.

[484] (Sūtra 20) The Sūtrakāra gives his opinion that it would be better to say that the passages त्रयो धर्मेत्कन्याः etc., contain the injunction (Vidhi) itself, like the Dhāraṇa, in accordance with the Jaimini-sūtra विधिस्तु धारणेऽपूर्वत्वात्।

[शेषलक्षण — लक्षण means Adhyāya].

In the Mahāpitṛ sacrifice, and the Pretāgnihoṭra, the oblation placed in the ladle is to be taken to the Āhavanīya fire, with the Samidh held under the oblation; though the next passage उपरि हि देवेभ्यो धारयति does not contain any Vidhi, still as holding the Samidh above the oblation in a sacrifice to the gods, is an Apūrva thing, we must understand that a Vidhi is intended here in accordance with the dictum अत्रास्ते विधिः.

ऋणश्रुतिः — One is born with the burden of three debts (पितृ-ऋण this is discharged when one gets a son; देव-ऋण, this is discharged by performing sacrifices etc., in accordance with the Sāstric injunctions; ऋषि-ऋण, this is discharged when the study of the Vedic lore is carried out properly.—It is needless to say that one who dies without discharging these debts deserves to be condemned); यावज्जीवनमग्निहोत्रं जुहुयात् is the जीवश्रुति, वीरहा वा is the अपवादश्रुति. All these passages can refer only to those who, not being totally Virakta, continue to take interest in worldly affairs.

[485] The second Adhikaraṇa contains two Sūtras.

(Sūtra 21) — उद्गीथ is the Omkāra; परार्थं most praiseworthy (पर means Brahman, अर्थः fit to occupy the Ardha or place).

अष्टमः — The Omkāra is the eighth thus—

(1) पृथिवी — the Rasa of the Bhūtas — because पृथिवी supports the Bhūtas,

(2) अर् — the Rasa of Pṛthivī — waters are the Prakṛti of Pṛthivī.

(3) ओषधि — the Rasa of Ap — the Oṣadhis get their sustenance from the waters,

(4) पुष्य — the Rasa of Oṣadhis — Puruṣa lives on Oṣadhis.

(5) वाक् — the Rasa of Puruṣa — Vāk helps Puruṣa to be successful in life.

(6) ऋक् — the Rasa of Vāk — Ṛk is the most important manifestation of Vāk.

(7) सामन् — the Rasa of Ṛk — Cf. वेदानां सामवेदोऽहं (Gītā X. 22).

(8) उद्गीथ — The Rasa of Sāman — Udgītha is most appreciated in Sāman.

The question discussed is whether the passage ॥ एष रसना रसतम ॥ is intended only to glorify Udgītha and others, or Udgītha and others are looked upon as Rasa.

The Pūrvapakṣin says that Udgītha and others are just glorified here, for, it is taken for granted that they are कवकः (इषमेव जुहूः स्वर्गो लोक आहवनीय ॥ only स्तुतिर as it is already propounded that Juhū ॥ पृथिवी, and Svargaloka ॥ the आहवनीय fire)

(Sūtra 22) The Siddhānta is—No mere स्तुतिरसत्त्व is intended here, रसनादिद्यष्टि is to be super imposed upon Udgītha and others because that is the Apūrva thing referred to here, which cannot be grasped by any means of proof. There is no other Vidhi near about, which would have made the passage somehow स्तुतिर. Further, it is obvious that expressions like उपासीत show that उपासनाविधि ॥ is intended here

[486] (Sūtra 23) The third Adhikarana contains two Sūtras

The question discussed ॥ as follows —

There are certain Ākhyānas (narratives, episodes) described in the Sruti like the Pratardana and Śvetaketu Ākhyānas. Are these Ākhyānas intended for being used independently for the Pariplava (revolving cycle of narratives) in the Aśvamedha or, do they give instruction about a particular Vidyā and so are विद्याविधयः ?

[Pariplava or the revolving cycle of legends or narratives, ॥ a very important feature of the Aśvamedha. During the period of one year,—from the time when the horse, the victim-designate in the Aśvamedha, ॥ let loose to wander at will, guarded by valiant warriors who frustrate all attempts to capture it, and returns victoriously — there are to be held thirty-six sessions, each one lasting for ten days, when discussions on cultural matters are held (in the sacrificial pandal) and different Ākhyānas are narrated with a different President presiding on each day, representing the various constituent elements of the society, for the purpose of bringing about 'emotional integration' in the Society at large

The ten Presidents (or kings) for the ten days of one sessions, in succession are — Manu, Yama, Varuna, Soma Arbuda Kādraveya, Kubera, Asta Dhānva, Matsya and Tārksya, and Dharma [See the Article 'The Pariplava — Revolving cycle of legends' by R. D. Karmarkar, published in the Annals B. O. R. I Vol XXXII Pp 26-40]

The Siddhānta is that the Ākhyānas are intended to praise or glorify the Brahma-vidyā. Not all Ākhyānas are used in the Pariplava those that are specifically mentioned may have their use in the Pariplava only

(Sūtra 24) All the same, they are connected with some Vidyā-vidhi, as in आत्मा वा अरे द्रव्यं यया सोऽपेदीत्. This passage ॥ is not to be understood independently, it is connected with the passage mentioning Hiranya (gold) as the Dakṣiṇā. So, it is clear that 'the weeping of Agni' is associated with the Karmavidhi which prescribes gold as Dakṣiṇā (silver ॥ is not to be used for Dakṣiṇā, as it was produced out of tears that Agni shed !)

[487] The fourth Adhikarana contains only one Sūtra.

(Sūtra 23) The Samnyāsins are already possessed of Vidyā, and so they are not in need of any assistance from the performance of sacrifices etc.

[488] Only one Sūtra in the fifth Adhikaraṇa.

The Pūrvapakṣin says that the Śruti uses the expression यज्ञेन विवादिपन्ति (not यज्ञेन विन्दन्ति) which means that sacrifices are the means for creating the desire for Jñāna; they are not ज्ञानसाधन.

The Siddhānta is—इच्छा surely refers to something wished for, and Jñāna is what is to be ultimately secured by means of sacrifices etc.

अश्वत् — The horse is the means used for movement, but the horse does require the saddle, the bridle etc., to be put in proper order before the movement takes place; similarly Vidyā does require the help of sacrificial acts, before it achieves its object viz. salvation.

Interpretations by other Bhāṣyakāras are:—

अश्वत् — 'अश्वत्' इति योग्यतानिर्दर्शनम् । यथा च योग्यतावशेनाश्वो न लाङ्गलाकर्षणे निवृज्यते (this is not the case in Western countries, where the horse is invariably used for ploughing the fields) रथचर्यायां तु युज्यते । ... एवम् (शङ्कर) ।

यथा, अश्वस्य गमनक्रियापरंपरया ग्रामप्राप्तिसिद्धेतुत्वं तद्वत् । (श्रीरुद्र)

यथा ... अश्वमेधोपासने संवत्सरे समारोपिताश्वोऽङ्गतयापेक्ष्यते, तथैव स्वशरीरश्रद्धाप्रणवादौ समारोपितोऽग्न्युपवीतमन्त्रादियज्ञाद्यङ्गतयापेक्ष्यते । (विज्ञानभिक्षु) ।

[489] Only one Sūtra in the sixth Adhikaraṇa.

(Sūtra 27) The question discussed is whether Śama, Dama etc., are to be cultivated by the house-holder or not.

The Pūrvapakṣin says—The house-holder's main interest is in the performance of sacrifices; this involves the activity of sense-organs prompted by the mind. Śama, Dama etc., would put an end to such activity. They might be helpful for a Samnyāsin, but not certainly for a house-holder.

The answer is—Śama, Dama etc., by producing concentration, ultimately enable one to secure Vidyā. Sacrifices etc., also by destroying all sin, are of great help in promoting the concentration of mind, which is the means for securing salvation.

[490] The seventh Adhikarana comprises four Sūtras.

(Sūtra 28) The question discussed is whether the Śruti permits अमक्ष्यमक्षण without any restriction in the case of all Prāṇavids.

The Pūrvapakṣa is—The Śruti allows one engaged in Prāṇavidyā to eat any अमक्ष्य. It goes without saying therefore that one intent upon the far more important Brahma-vidyā should be allowed this concession.

The Siddhānta is—Even the Brahmavids can have recourse to अमक्ष्यमक्षण only when their life is in grave danger; there can be no question of any Prāṇavid claiming this concession.

(Uṣasti Cākrāyana indulged in अमक्ष्यमक्षण as a last resort, when his life could not be saved otherwise.)

इयः — इमं (elephant) अर्हतीति, one rich enough to maintain an elephant; perhaps the chief of the village (Patil or Patel) is meant. मटनी — Hail-shower.

[491] The eighth Adhikaraṇa comprises four Sūtras.

(Sūtra 32) The question discussed is whether the sacrificial Karmans etc., (which are useful for securing Brahmanvidyā, and hence are विद्याङ्ग) are to be performed even by those who go in for Āśrama-dharmas only, and are not desirous of securing Mokṣa.

The Siddhānta is — These Karmans are prescribed by the Śāstras as Nitya Karmans, and so they must be duly performed, even if there is no desire for Mokṣa.

(Sūtra 33) Further, such Karmans are useful in producing Vidyā, and can be looked upon as co-workers of vidyā.

(Sūtra 34) These Karmans can be described as both Nitya (obligatory, being prescribed by the Śāstras) and Anitya (voluntary, being useful for विद्योत्पत्ति for those who crave for Mokṣa), their case is similar to that of Agni-hotra etc., which are Nitya (यावज्जीवनमग्निहोत्रं जुहोति), and also Anitya, being meant for those who crave for Svarga (स्वर्गं कामो जुहुयात्). Thus the Karmans are both विद्यार्थ and आप्रमार्थ.

(Sūtra 35) These Karmans remove the obstacles in the way of Vidyā, and produce the necessary वित्तवृद्धि; they are enjoined upon those who go in for Vidyā or Jñāna.

[492] The ninth Adhikaraṇa comprises four Sūtras.

(Sūtra 36) The question discussed is whether those who unfortunately could not claim to belong to some Āśrama, are competent to go in for Brahmanvidyā.

[The Anāśramins are :— (1) A Brahmachārīn who has not entered the Gṛhasthāśrama; (2) a house-holder who has lost his wife and has not married again; (3) a Parivrājaka who has not cultivated Vairāgya (detachment from worldly affairs).]

The Pūrvapakṣin says — The Anāśramins are beyond the pale of any Āśrama; they can have no competence (Adhikāra) for the Brahmanvidyā.

The Siddhānta is — The Anāśramins have the Adhikāra. Raikva was a Brahmanvid, before he was able to secure a wife; Bhīṣma and Saṁvarta were life-long Brahmachārīns (Saṁvarta officiated as the priest at the sacrifice of King Marutta, when his brother Brhaspati instigated by Indra declined to officiate), and other Anāśramins are known to be ब्रह्मविद्यानिष्ठ.

(Sūtra 37) The Manusmṛti also supports the Siddhānta. These Anāśramins were able to master Brahmanvidyā, thanks to their practising Japa, Upavāsa (fasting), worship of the Deities etc.

(Sūtra 38) विशेषः, अनुग्रहः. The विशेषs are तपस्, धनं etc.

(Sūtra 39) All things considered, it is better to belong to some Āśrama and to perform the prescribed duties conscientiously. It is wrong to shirk one's responsibility, even when one has the competence to shoulder it. An आपद्धम् must be regarded as exceptional.

[493] The tenth Adhikaraṇa comprises four Sūtras.

(Sūtra 40) The question discussed is — What is the position of those who, having deliberately opted for the life of a life-long Brahmācārin, or of a Forest-dweller (Vaikhāṇasa), or of a Sannyāsīn, have ceased to be faithful to their ideals?

[494] (Sūtra 41) The Siddhānta is—There is no ray of hope for them. The Śāstra is quite specific and unequivocal on the point. As is clearly stated in Atrismṛti there is no Prāyaścitta for them.

अधिकारलक्षण—the sixth Adhyāya of the Pūrvamīmāṃsā.

(Sūtra 42) The Pūrvapakṣīn points out that some Ācāryas regard the loss of celibacy by a life-long Brahmācārin, as a minor sin (Upapātaka) and admit a Prāyaścitta in that case. अक्षन्वत्—the Prāyaścitta for the partaking of honey is the same in the case of the ordinary and life-long Brahmācārīns. Such a procedure may well-nigh obtain in the case of other Āśramas also.

(Sūtra 43) The Siddhānta is—Prāyaścittas hold good only in the case of those who are not qualified for Brahmavidyā; they only remove the obstacles in the way of securing Svarga-loka. This is quite clear from the Smṛti-passages, and the code of conduct for the Śiṣṭas.

[495] The eleventh Adhikaraṇa comprises two Sūtras.

(Sūtra 44) The question discussed is whether the Udgītha-upāsana and others which form a part of the Karman, are to be gone through by the Yajamāna, or by the priest.

Ātreya, representing the Pūrvapakṣa, says that Yajamāna is the Kartṛ, because in the case of the Upāsana, both the Phala (the removal of the obstacles) and the Upāsana belong to the same person. Where the sacrificial act is impossible to be performed by the Yajamāna, it may be done by the priest, (■ for instance, the carrying of the fire or water in the Godohana vessel. This function is specifically allotted to the Adhvaryu priest; and so, even though the Yajamāna is entitled to the Phala, this task cannot be performed by him. In the present case, however, the Yajamāna can act as the Kartṛ).

(Sūtra 45) The Siddhāntin says — In the case of the Godohana, the Yajamāna does not perform the act, not because he is physically unable to do so, but because the services of the sacrificial priest, so to speak, are purchased by the Yajamāna for such acts. In the case of the Udgītha-upāsana, the same position holds good; the priest is there to perform the necessary functions.

The general rule to be followed in such cases is — One who is qualified to perform a particular sacrifice, is alone qualified to go through the Upāsana associated with that (In the case of Daharopāsana and others which are not क्रमोद्ग, it is the Yajamāna who is the Kartṛ, because the Phala accrues to him).

[496] The twelfth Adhikaraṇa comprises three Sūtras.

(Sūtra 46) The Bṛha-passage तस्माद्वाङ्मनःपाण्डित्यं निर्विद्य बाल्येन तिष्ठसेन् । बाल्यं च पाण्डित्यं च निर्विद्यथ मुनिः, is discussed at length.

The question is — How many injunctions are found here? Three (in respect of बाल्य, पाण्डित्य and मौन), or two (बाल्य and पाण्डित्य only) ?

The Pūrvapakṣin says—There is no injunctive expression like त्याज् after मुनिः, so मौन cannot be enjoined; it is merely an Anuvāda of the Jñāna understood from पाण्डित्य. Only two Vidhis are intended here, बाल्य and पाण्डित्य (which includes मौन) The Siddhānta is — Just as sacrifices, Sama, Dama, Contemplation etc., are the co-operating agencies for the Vidyā, the three Bālya, Pāṇḍitya and Mauna are to be understood as Sahakāri-agencies here.

Mauna can also mean प्रकृष्टमनन (associated with sages like Vyāsa); though there is no actual विधिः after अथ मुनिः, such a Mauna being Aprāpta, deserves to be enjoined here.

By resorting to the three, Bālya, Pāṇḍitya and Mauna, one can hope to be Brahman-knower. So, Mauna must be understood to be the third Sahakārin of Vidyā.

[497] (Sūtra 47) The objector points out that the passage अभिसमाप्त्य कुटुम्बे... says that a person on the completion of his studies should become a house-holder; after passing his whole life as a house-holder in the proper way, he ultimately goes to Brahmāloka. Here is no reference to Mauna which is a characteristic of the Parivrājaka stage of life.

The answer is that the Vidyā is to be pursued in all Āśramas; the passage simply means that all Āśramas including the Gṛhasthāśrama are useful in their own way.

(Sūtra 48) Similarly, the Bṛha-passage referring to Brāhmaṇas turning their backs upon लोकैषण, पुत्रैषण etc., and taking to निश्वाचर्ये, is really intended to refer to the duties of all Āśramas, which are the Sahakārins of Vidyā, like Mauna as shown above.

[498] Only one Sūtra in the thirteenth Adhikaraṇa.

(Sūtra 49) The passage बाल्येन तिष्ठसेत् is discussed here. What is meant by बाल्येन ? Does it mean the innocent nature of a child, free from guile or ostentation, or its wayward behaviour unregulated by any rules ?

The Pūrvapakṣin (who has a sense of humour, or is a simpleton pure and simple) opines that just as a child behaves at its sweet will (in the matter of urinating etc.), the Vidvat is free to do what he likes and should not bother himself about prohibitory injunctions like मुरो न विवेत्; for, they are contradicted by the special injunction बाल्येन तिष्ठसेत्.

The Siddhānta is — बाल्य means the innocent nature of a child. The Vidvat should not give himself airs, should not advertise his merits and so forth.

[499] Only one Sūtra in the fourteenth Adhikaraṇa.

(Sūtra 50) The question discussed is whether the Vidyā (with its fruit, material prosperity here) is able to produce its effect, immediately after the Karmans are performed, or after a lapse of time.

The Pūrvapakṣa view is that the Vidyā should be in a position to deliver the goods immediately it is secured.

The Siddhānta is—There can be no hard and fast rule in this connection. It would all depend upon the obstacles present in a particular case. If there is present some more powerful Karman, the fruit would be delayed. The very fact that the Śruti says with reference to the Udgītha-Vidyā, there is no obstacle in the way of its fruit, shows that the absence of obstacles can not be guaranteed everywhere.

[500] Only one Sūtra in the fifteenth Adhikaraṇa.

(Sūtra 51) The मुक्तिफला-विद्या also, like the अभ्युदयफला-विद्या takes effect, subject to the force of the obstructing agencies. It is true that the Karman, the means of the मुक्तिफला is bound to be normally most powerful, but it is not unlikely that in the case of a few Brahmavids, some evil Karman done in the former births may cause some delay.

तदवस्थाधृतेः—प्रतिबन्धाभावप्रतिबन्धसंप्राप्तिरूपावस्थाधृतेः ।

Rāmānuja's interpretation of Sūtras 50 and 51, leaves much to be desired. The expression मुक्तिफला seems to have been borrowed from the Sūtra मुक्तिफलानियमः. Rāmānuja places both the Vidyās on the same level, regards the fruit being delayed by some obstructing cause. This is against the Śruti ब्रह्मविद् ब्रह्मैव भवति which ensures instantaneous fruition for the Brahmavid.

Śaṅkara takes ऐहिक to include आमुष्मिक as well, and remarks तस्माद् ऐहिकमामुष्मिकं वा विद्याजन्मप्रतिबन्धक्षयापेक्षयेति स्थितम् ।

There is no doubt that मुक्तिफलानियमः means 'Unconditioned मुक्तिफल', 'मुक्तिफल having no strings attached to it.' The force of एवं is this—As the ऐहिक and आमुष्मिक fruits are hedged in by some restrictions, there is no restriction regarding the मुक्तिफल which is absolutely unfettered (एवं is associated with the idea of वैधर्म्ये).

Śaṅkara says—यथा मुमुक्षोर्विद्यासाधनावलम्बिनः साधनवीर्यवशाद्विद्यालक्षणे फल ऐहिकामुष्मिकफलवत्कृतो विशेषप्रतिनियमो दृष्टः, एवं मुक्तिफलक्षणेऽप्युत्कर्षोपर्युक्तः कश्चिद्विशेषप्रतिनियमः स्वादित्वाशङ्कयाह— (As no question of delay is possible in the case of मुक्तिफल, Śaṅkara makes the doubt of the Pūrvapakṣin refer to उत्कर्ष and अपकर्ष in the Mukti itself) एवं मुक्तिफलानियम इति । ॥ खलु मुक्तिफले बोधदेवभूतो विशेषप्रतिनियम आशङ्कितव्यः । कुतः ? तदवस्थाधृतेः । मुक्त्यवस्था हि सर्ववेदान्तेष्वेकरूपेणावधार्यते । ब्रह्मैव हि मुक्त्यवस्था, न च ब्रह्मणोऽनेकार्थयोगोऽस्ति ।

Śaṅkara's interpretation appears to be convincing.

Nimbārka says that मुक्तिफलानियमः means that Mukti may take place after the fall of the present body, or after the fall of many subsequent bodies, taking his stand upon the Śruti-passage तस्य तावदेव चिरं ..But this ignores completely the passage ब्रह्मविद् ब्रह्मैव भवति ।

This Quarter contains the discussion of some interesting matters, such as the role of Saṁnyāsins, and how far the Saṁnyāsin could flout the Śāstric injunctions in respect of अमृतमक्षण etc. The Sūtrakāra stands by the Śruti which says that the Saṁnyāsins are beyond the jurisdiction of the rules governing the other three Āśramas. But the fact that such a discussion was found necessary shows that there must have been a number of bogus Saṁnyāsins in those times, who abused their privileges. The Sūtrakāra could only point out that such renegades could not claim any protection from the Śruti.

IV. 1

The fourth Adhyāya is usually called the Phalādhyāya, as it discusses Mokṣa in all its aspects, which is the fruit of Vidyā.

The first few Adhikaraṇas of the first Pāda continue the topic (the means for the Brahma-vidyā) from the previous Adhyāya.

The first Adhikarāṇa comprises two Sūtras.

[501] (Sūtra 1) In various Sruti-passages, वेदन is mentioned as the means for securing Brahman. The question is whether this वेदन is to be gone through only once or is to be repeated till the attainment to Brahman.

The Pūrvapakṣin says :— In ordinary cases like the pounding of coarse rice to remove the husk, we actually see that the pounding has to be continued till the rice-husk is removed. Brahman is imperceptible; there is no reason to believe that the वेदन must be repeated (if one वेदन is incompetent to give its fruit, mere duplication of the वेदन would not improve matters) to attain to Brahman. So, वेदन once gone through ought to suffice.

The Siddhānta is :— वेदन does not mean mere knowledge; it includes Dhyāna (contemplation) and Upāsana (worship). The Śruti-passages make it clear that वेदन, चिन्तन, ध्यान, उपासन mean one and the same thing, by introducing a topic with उपासन and वेदन and ending it with वेदन, उपासन, ध्यान etc.

(Sūtra 2) The Viṣṇupurāṇa also endorses the same. पञ्चभिरङ्गैः—The six अङ्गs are :—यम, नियम, आसन, प्राणायाम, प्रत्याहार and धारणा.

Read the following from Śaṅkara's comments :—

भवेदादृत्यानर्थक्यं तं प्रति यस्तत्त्वमसीति सङ्कदुक्तमेव प्रज्ञातत्त्वमनुभविषुं शक्नुयात् । यस्तु न शक्नोति तं प्रत्युपयुज्यत एवावृत्तिः । ... न हि दृष्टेऽनुपपन्नं नाम । दृश्यन्ते हि सङ्कच्छ्रुताद्वान्मन्यमान्द्वितीयं तं वाच्यार्थमावर्तयन्तस्तत्तदाभासव्युदासेन सम्यग्प्रतिपद्यमानाः । ... येषां पुनर्निपुणमतीनां नाज्ञानसंशयाविपर्ययलक्षणः पदार्थविषयः प्रति-
यन्धीऽस्ति, ते शक्नुवन्ति सङ्कदुक्तमेव तत्त्वमसिवाच्यार्थमनुभवितुमिति तान्प्रत्यादृत्यानर्थक्यमिष्टमेव । ... यस्य तु नेयोऽनुभवो द्रागिव जायते तं प्रत्यनुभवार्थं एवादृत्यभ्युपगमः । तत्रापि न तत्त्वमनिवाच्यार्थात्प्रच्याव्यादृतौ प्रवर्तयेत् । न हि वरपाताय कन्यामुद्राहयन्ति ।

[502] The second Adhikaraṇa comprises only one Sūtra.

(Sūtra 3) The question discussed is — Whether Brahman is to be meditated upon as different from the worshipper (or meditator) or as the Ātman of the worshipper. (Śaṅkara has no difficulty in explaining the Sūtra as advocating the identity of Brahman and Ātman).

The Pūrvapakṣin says — The Brahmasūtras themselves have advocated that Brahman is different from Ātman (II. 2. 22, III. 48, I-1. 14 etc.). So, Brahman should be meditated upon as different from Ātman.

The Siddhānta is :—

प्रत्यगात्मन् is the Ātman of the शरीर; likewise the परब्रह्मन्, of the प्रत्यगात्मन्. This is made clear in the Jābāla-Sruti,— त्वं वा अहमस्मि ... अहं वै त्वमसि.

सर्वस्य चिदचिदस्तुनस्तत्त्वत्वा.... the whole world (both sentient and non-sentient) is the body of the Paramātmān, from whom it is produced, in whom it gets dissolved, through whom it is active and by whom it is controlled.

The शरीर (denoted by the word मनुष्य) is the प्रकार of the जीव (प्रफुरिन्) and ultimately refers to जीव; similarly जीव (denoted by the word अहं) is the प्रकार of the परमात्मन्, and ultimately refers to the परमात्मन्.

The objector says that he can understand अहं वै त्वमसि, because जीव (denoted by the word अहं) is the body of the परमात्मन् and so ultimately refers Brahman; but what about त्वं वा अहमस्मि (त्वं referring to परमात्मन् is not surely the body of the Jīva)? The answer is—The objector need not be so hyper-critical. After all, all words अहं, त्वं etc., ultimately denote the Paramātmān, as has been already made sufficiently clear.

As regards the Śruti-passages pointing to एकत्वं as well as difference between Jīva and Brahman, it is clear that there is तात्पर्यभेद involving गुणगुणिभेद. The श्रुति itself says अकुरुत एव: implying that the Highest alone is कुरुत (all-perfect).

[503] The third Adhikaraṇa comprises two Sūtras.

(Sūtra 4) (Vallabha reads प्रतीकेन in place of प्रतीके न and interprets the Sūtra to mean that symbol-worship can not produce Mokṣa). Sāhaka takes Sūtra 4 as forming a separate Adhikaraṇa, प्रतीक means a symbol, representative.

The question is:—In the injunction मनो ब्रह्मेत्युपासीत (where is involved symbol-worship), which is the उपास्य,—मनस् or Brahman?

The Pūrvapakṣin says—In the last Sūtra, आत्मेति was taken to mean that आत्मन् is the उपास्य; so here ब्रह्मन् should be the उपास्य.

The answer is—In प्रतीकोपासना, the प्रतीक is the उपास्य; the प्रतीक again is not the Ātman of the उपासक.

(Sūtra 5) The objector argues that if one were asked to choose as उपास्य between मनस् and Brahman, one is not likely to choose an insignificant entity like Manas, in preference to the all-powerful Brahman.

The Siddhānta is—Manas is to be looked upon as Brahman, because normally we find that as a matter of courtesy an inferior entity is looked upon as a superior one and not vice versa. No one would dare to look upon a King as a servant, but a King's servant is often courteously looked upon as the King himself, and this courtesy is known to pay.

[504] The fourth Adhikaraṇa comprises only one Sūtra.

(Sūtra 6) The Śruti-passage under discussion is य एवामौ तपति तमुद्गीथमुपासीत... The question is whether उद्गीथ is to be looked upon as आदित्य, or आदित्य as उद्गीथ.

The Pūrvapakṣin says—In the last Sūtra, the rule was laid down that there should be उत्कृष्टरति on a निकृष्ट entity. Now उद्गीथ is कलसायन, being directly the कर्माङ्ग, while आदित्य is not a फलसाधन; hence उद्गीष is superior to आदित्य. Again in the expression य एवासौ तपति, यः being used first brings to our mind आदित्य who is the proper उद्गीष here. This means there should be आदित्ये, उद्गीषदृष्टिः.

The Siddhānta is — Even a child knows that आदित्य is superior to उद्गीष. The Pūrvapakṣin should better stop arguing for the sake of mere opposition. It is again not a universal rule that what is stated first is more important or is the उद्गीष. Even Pāṇini does not observe such a rule (in the Sūtra वृद्धिरादैच्, though the word वृद्धि comes first, it is not the उद्गीष).

[505] The fifth Adhikaraṇa comprises five Sūtras.

It lays down certain directions for carrying out the meditation in the most effective manner. Śaṅkara remarks that these directions can only be associated with Upāsanaṁ other than those connected with sacrificial acts or directly with सम्मगदृशन (कर्माङ्गसंश्लेषेण तावदुपासनेषु कर्मतन्त्रत्वाभासनादिचिन्ता, नापि सम्मगदृशेण वस्तुतन्त्रत्वाद्विज्ञानस्य).

(Sūtras 7, 8) A sitting posture is commended for purposes of meditation (उपासनं... न च तत्र उच्यते ध्याने वा संभवति, गत्यादीनां चित्तविक्षेपकत्वात् । तिष्ठतोऽपि वेदधारणे श्यायतं मनो न सूक्ष्मवस्तुनिरीक्षणक्षमं भवति । शयानस्याप्यरुमादेव निद्रयाभिभूयेत । Śaṅkara).

(Sūtra 9) The Śruti-passage ध्यायतीव पृथिवी ... clearly shows ध्यान to be associated with अवलम्ब.

(Sūtra 10) The Gītā amplifies the same idea.

(Sūtra 11) Śaṅkara takes this Sūtra as a separate Adhikaraṇa in order to accommodate the Śruti-passage समे शुची ... which contains some specific suggestions.

The meditator is given full latitude in the choice of time, place etc., for his meditation. Whatever would lead to concentration, he should adopt. The Svetāśvatara-passage makes some detailed suggestions no doubt, but they are not binding; the Sūtrakāra refers to this by the expression अविशेषात् (तत्रतेषु विशेषेष्वनियम इति सुहृद्भूत्वा, आचार्य आचष्टे । Śaṅkara).

[506] The sixth Adhikaraṇa comprises only one Sūtra.

(Sūtra 12) The meditation is to be carried on till the Soul's departure from the body. For आ प्रयाणात्, Śaṅkara and others read आ प्रयाणात्, Rāmānuja all the same explains आ प्रयाणात्, as आ मरणात्. The Pūrvapakṣin here apparently wants the उपासन to be carried out in one day; in Sūtra 1, the आरुति was to be gone through only once.

[507] With the seventh Adhikaraṇa which comprises only one Sūtra, the link with the last Adhyāya is ended, and discussion about the विद्याफल commences.

(Sūtra 13) There are three kinds of Karman :—

(1) आरब्ध — which has started giving its fruit, as a result of which the present body is resorted to by the Jīva.

- (2) संचित — past Karmans which have not as yet begun to produce their effect.
- (3) आगामि — future Karman.

The objector says:— In view of the explicit statement in the Smṛti that no Karman can be destroyed unless its fruit is experienced, the संचित Karman cannot be overcome by the विद्या which is the means for वृद्धप्राप्ति. So, the absence of contact with the future sin, and the destruction of the previous sin must be understood as meant for the glorification of Vidyā.

The answer is — Such is the power of Vidyā that it enables one to get rid of उत्तराधिक्येय and to destroy पूर्वाय as declared by the Śruti.

It must be remembered that the expression ननु कर्तुं दीयते कर्म simply describes the inherent power of Karman and refers to what is the normal procedure. Actually it is the अप्रीति of the Paramātman for an evil-doer, which causes the fruit of the Karman to be experienced. But for one who has secured the right knowledge (एवंविदि पापं कर्म न लिप्यते), there is no अप्रीति of the Paramātman. Thus the two passages refer to two different situations.

The आगामि sin can only be the result of some unconscious fault, and so that cannot hurt one who has secured विद्या.

[508] The eighth Adhikaraṇa comprises only one Sūtra.

(Sūtra 14) The last Sūtra was concerned with अय (sin). This Sūtra states what the position is with reference to the पुण्यकर्मन्.

The Siddhānta is that the पुण्यकर्मन् is also on a par with the पाप (whatever stands in the way of विद्या, whether पुण्य or पाप, is पाप according to the Śāstra). The only difference is that while पाप ceases to exist immediately when there is विद्याप्राप्ति, पुण्य ceases to exist only after the fall of the body.

पाते तु — विदुषः शरीरपाते मुक्तिरित्यवधारयति (शङ्कर).

— पाते शुक्रकर्मक्षयश्चरितपाते तु, इतरस्य...पुण्यापुण्यकर्मणः, अयंशेषः (श्रीकृष्ण).

— पाते अनित्यमार्गे भगवद्भावात् व्युत्तिः पात इत्युच्यते । ...तुदाव्योक्त्या. अस्मिन्मार्गे पापस्य व्यवच्छेद एव (बलम).

Nimbārka reads the Sūtra as इतरस्यान्येवमशेषः पाते तु.

[509] The ninth Adhikaraṇa comprises only one Sūtra.

(Sūtra 15) The सुकृतदुक्कृत that have not started giving their fruit, cease to exist when the fall of the body takes place.

कुलालचक्रवत् — The potter's wheel goes on revolving even when the दण्ड which started the motion is taken off, by its own momentum (the आरब्धकर्मन् automatically goes on functioning till the fall of the body).

[510] The tenth Adhikaraṇa comprises three Sūtras.

(Sūtra 16) The question discussed is what exactly the position is in respect of the नित्यकर्मन् like the Agnihotra, and the नैमित्तिककर्मन्, when the विद्याप्राप्ति has taken place.

The Pūrvapakṣin says that obviously the नित्य and नैमित्तिक Karmans (having an independent fruit of their own) have no purpose to serve after विद्या is secured.

The Siddhānta is:— Agnihotra etc., which are नित्य Karmans stand on a different level; the previous सुकृत ceases to have anything to do with the Vidvat. Agnihotra etc., actually help the Vidyā as is clear from the Śruti. Besides, failing to do the नित्यकर्मन्s would adversely affect the Vidyā which has already been secured. (This is a very unsatisfactory argument. Vidvat surely is not bound down by any Āśramakarmans, but the Sūtrakāra has to yield to the universal popular acceptance of the नित्य Karmans as being compulsory for a person as long as he lives).

(Sūtra 17) Apart from the previous पुण्यकर्मन् to his credit, the Vidvat may go in for some साधुकृत्या like the performance of a sacrifice for bringing on rain (वारीरि-इष्टि). Now this साधुकृत्या does not help the Vidyā. This साधुकृत्या is appropriated by the friends of the Vidvat, and the दुष्कृत go to the enemies, according to the authors of some recensions. (This rough and ready method of disposing of the सुकृतदुष्कृत is entirely unphilosophical, but the Sūtrakāra has no other alternative left to him, in view of the specific Śruti passage).

उभयोः— पूर्वोत्तरयोः पुण्यकर्मणोः (उमातुज); नैमिनिवादरायणोराचार्ययोः (शाङ्कर).

(Sūtra 18) The Śātyāyanaka makes it clear that the appropriation of the साधुकृत्या of the Vidvat, by the friends, is for the sake of ensuring that the fruit of the Karman gone through does not affect the Vidvat.

[511] The last Adhikaraṇa (11th) comprises only one Sūtra.

(Sūtra 19) विद्यायोनित्वादी—The body of the Vidvat when he has secured the Vidyā. According to Rāmānuja there may be one or more bodies taken to by the Vidvat, before he becomes मुक्त.

Commentators like Rāmānuja, who understand by the Vidvat, the devotee of the Highest, find some difficulty in reconciling the various Śruti-passages describing the role played by the नित्यकर्मन्s, the सुकृत and दुष्कृत that have not started giving their fruit, the fall of the body or bodies etc., in the case of the Vidvat. Śaṅkara quietly takes the whole discussion here (as well as similar topics dealt with in the remaining three Pādas of the fourth Adhyāya) as referring to the Vidvat who has secured the सगुणविद्या, or as dealing with the Lower Brahman. Read the following comments of Śaṅkara on Sūtras 16-19—न हि ब्रह्मविद् आगाम्यभिद्वेष्टादि संभवति. अनियोज्यब्रह्मात्मस्वप्रातिपत्तेः शास्त्रस्याविषयत्वाद्। सगुणाहं तु विद्याहं कर्तृत्वानतिरुतेः संभवयागाम्यप्यभिद्वेष्टादि। ... तस्माद्विद्यासंयुक्तं नित्यमभिद्वेष्टादि विद्याविहीनं चोभयमपि सुसुक्ष्मा मोक्षप्रयोजनोद्देशेनैव जन्मनि जन्मान्तरे च प्राग्ज्ञानोत्पत्तेः कृतं...ब्रह्मविद्यया सहैककार्यं भवतीति स्थितम्। ... सिध्दाज्ञानावष्टम्भं हि कर्मान्तरं देहपात उपभोगान्तरमारभते, तच्च सिध्दाज्ञानं सम्यग्ज्ञानेन दग्धमित्यतः साध्वेत्, आरब्धकार्यक्षये विदुषः केवल्यमवश्यं भवतीति।

This Pāda describes the condition after death of the Vidvat. According to Śāṅkara this description applies to the devotee of the Lower Brahman, on the very convincing grounds that in the case of one who has realised the Highest Brahman, oneness with Brahman is immediately attained (ब्रह्मविद् ब्रह्मैव भवति) and there could be no coming and going in the case of Mokṣa which is नित्य and is not something that is to be acquired anew.

As there are Śruti-passages describing the course after death all the same, the Sūtrakāra takes notice of them.

[512] The first Adhikaraṇa comprises two Sūtras.

(Sūtra 1) The question discussed is what is the meaning of संपद्यते in वाङ् मनसि संपद्यते...

The Pūrvapakṣin says—As Manas is not the material cause of Vāk, there cannot be the merging of Vāk into it (a कार्य alone can be merged into the कारण); so, what gets merged is the functioning of the Vāk.

The Siddhānta is that the वाक्स्वरूप, not वाग्बुद्धि, gets merged into Manas (the Śruti uses the word वाक् and not वाग्बुद्धि). A dying man, although becoming speechless, continues to have his mind functioning. Actually it would be better to explain संपद्यते as संयुज्यते (becomes associated with it).

According to Sāṅkara, it is the वाग्बुद्धि that is merged in the mind (बुद्धिर्बुद्धिमत्तोरभेदोपचारात्). It is only the दृश्यपक्षम् that is intended here.

(Sūtra 2) There is similarly संयोग of other sense organs with the Manas. उपशान्ततेजाः— one who is dying.

[513] The second Adhikaraṇa comprises only one Sūtra.

(Sūtra 3) The Manas in conjunction with the sense-organs becomes connected with Prāṇa.

The Pūrvapakṣin argues that Manas is the Kārya of Anna, and Prāṇa that of waters. So, it is possible to say that Manas gets merged into waters, through Anna (which is पृथिवीरूप and पृथिवी is the Kārya of waters).

The Siddhānta is that here also संपद्यते means संयुज्यते. Anna and waters are not the material cause of Manas and Prāṇa which are merely nourished by them.

आप्यायन— augmenting, nourishment.

[514] The third Adhikaraṇa comprises only one Sūtra.

उपगम — connection; by आदि are to be understood उल्कावृत्ति, प्रतिष्ठा, and तेज संपत्ति.

[515] The fourth Adhikaraṇa comprises two Sūtras.

(Sūtra 5) पृथिवीमयः — connected with पृथिवी.

(Sūtra 6) प्राणस्तेजोमयः — here तेजम् means तेजम् conjoined with other elements; each one of the elements by itself is unable to function.

[516] The fifth Adhikaraṇa comprises seven Sūtras.

अनुबोध्य—अदग्धा (अन् + gerund of उष् to burn, with उप)

(Sūtra 7) The question is whether the departure from the body goes through the same procedure in the case of the Vidvat and the Avidvat.

The Pūrvapakṣin says—The departure takes place in the case of the Avidvat only. For, the Śruti says that the Vidvat secures immortality here and now.

The Siddhānta is that both the Vidvat and the Avidvat go through the same process till the entrance into the Nāḍī when their paths bifurcate (the Vidvat passing out of the 101st Nāḍī in the head, and the Avidvat passing out of the eye, head or other parts of the body).

In the passage ब्रह्म समश्नुते etc., अमृतत्व means only the absence of connection with the past and future sins; and ब्रह्मन् means the realisation of Brahman at the time of Upāśanā.

[517] (Sūtras 8) The Śruti makes it quite clear that there persists the connection with the body (the Samsāra-state) till the Devayāna path is reached.

(Sūtra 9) The subtle body accompanies the Vidvat. The Kausītaki describes the Vidvat as conversing with the Moon, even when the gross body is no more. This shows that the subtle body must be there.

(Sūtra 10) The अमृतत्व referred to in the Śruti—passage does not arise, as the cessation of bondage with the Samsāra has not taken place.

(Sūtra 11) Actually the body is found to be warm sometimes, after death; this can certainly be due to the existence of the subtle body in the case of the Vidvat (this is a very unsatisfactory argument).

[518] (Sūtra 12) The Pūrvapakṣin again points out that in the case of the Vidvat, the Śruti definitely rules out Utkrānti :—

Having described the Utkrānti in the case of the Avidvat (who is कामयमान, full of desires) the Śruti describes the Vidvat (who is अकामयमान) in the passage, न तस्य प्राणा उत्क्रामन्ति, ब्रह्मेव सन्नह्यायेति, as having no उत्क्रान्ति.

Likewise, Yājñavalkya when asked by Ārtabhāga tells him that the Prāṇas of the dying man do not go out of the body, but are merged in the body itself.

This clearly shows that the Vidvat secures immortality in this world itself.

The Siddhānta is — न प्राणानमुत्क्रान्तिः — In this passage what is repudiated is the उत्क्रान्ति of the Prāṇas from the Pratyagātman, not the उत्क्रान्ति from the body. In the passage न तस्य प्राणा उत्क्रामन्ति, तस्य refers to the शरीर, the matter in hand, not the शरीर which is not mentioned in the Śruti.

न तस्य प्राणा उत्क्रामन्ति — The Pūrvapakṣin supplies here the अपादान, शरीर from which something is to go out. The Siddhāntin supplies जीवात्, and argues as follows:—It is true that तस्य (gen. sing.) goes with प्राण, but there is no point in understanding like that, because जीव is surely connected with the प्राण only and not with any other entity, and there is no propriety in telling people what is well-known. So, it is better to suppose that तस्य means here तस्मात् (meaning जीवात्, as no अपादान is mentioned directly). After all, the genitive can be understood to give the sense of any case ! Do we not use the expression नृत्यं गृणोति ? Or, we might as well say that तस्य refers to the general idea of अपादान, and तस्मात् emphasises its particular aspect.

If the objector is still not satisfied, we draw his attention to the reading न तस्मात्प्राण ... in the Mādhyandina recension. When the body ceases to exist, the Prāṇas get separated from the Vidvat; the Prāṇas hold on till the Vidvat's attainment to Brahman by following the Devayāna path.

As regards the questions asked by Ārtabhāga to Yājñavalkya, they obviously concern the Avidvat (if they concern the Vidvat, the refutation would be on the lines chalked out above).

Questions by Ārtabhāga

Answers by Yājñavalkya

कति ग्रहाः ?—(ग्रह—Indriyas)

— अष्टौ ग्रहाः

कति, अतिग्रहाः ? (अतिग्रह—Objects of sense)—

अष्टावतिग्रहाः

कतमे ते ?— ग्रह, अतिग्रह

— प्राणो वै ग्रहः, सोऽपानेन, अतिग्रहेण, गृहीतः, अपानेन हि गन्धस्निग्धति । etc.,

प्राण, अपान

वाक्, नामन्

जिह्वा, रस

संक्षुम्, रूप

धोत्र, शब्द

मनस्, काम

हस्त, कर्मन्

त्वक्, स्पर्श

कामिन्देवना यस्या मृत्युस्मृत् ?

— अग्निर्वै मृत्युः, सोऽशमनम्

यत्रायं पुरुषो म्रियते क्रियेत न जहाति ?

— नामेत्यनन्तं वै नाम, अनन्ता विश्वे देवा, etc.

(All this is for the edification of the Avidvat).

(Sūtra 13) The Smṛtis also describe the Vidvat as departing from the Nāḍī in the head.

ग्रहलोक — The world of हिरण्यगर्भः परं यतिम् — ब्रह्म.

[519] The sixth Adhikaraṇa comprises only one Sūtra.

(Sūtra 14) The question is whether the subtle elements enveloping the Jīva go straightaway to do their job of furnishing a suitable body for the Jīva in accordance with his Karman, or they first are merged into the Paramātman for a while.

The Siddhānta is that the subtle elements get connected with the Paramātman, as the Śruti expressly says तेजः परस्पां देवतायाम्—

Just as in the states of deep-sleep and dissolution, the activity of the subtle elements is at a stand still, so here also there is a cessation of the activity for some time.

[520] The seventh Adhikaraṇa comprises only one Sūtra.

(Sūtra 15) This close connection of the subtle elements with the Paramātman is not of the nature of merging, but is just अवयवभावः; for, the same expression संपद्यते (which was used in connection with वाक्) is used here. There is no reason why that expression should be taken here in a different sense (अभिधानैरुप- different meaning) such as लयः; for, at the time of departure (उत्क्रान्ति) there is no purpose served by getting merged into the Paramātman, nor is there any mention in the Śruti of any emergence of a fresh creation in case there was a लयः.

So far, the Vidvat and the Avidvat take to the same path after the departure from the body. Afterwards their courses are different.

[521] The eighth Adhikaraṇa comprises only one Sūtra.

(Sūtra 16) — The Śruti says that the Vidvat goes out by the 101st Nāḍī in the head, while the Avidvat goes by any of the other Nāḍīs.

The Pūrvapakṣin says that it would be better to assume that there is no hard and fast rule about the Nāḍī to be made use of. The Nāḍīs are so many and so subtle; it would be difficult for the departed Jīva to choose a particular Nāḍī out of them.

The Siddhānta is that the Vidvat, owing to the power of his Vidyā, can easily make the proper choice. Further, there is the tip of the heart glowing, thus providing the Vidvat with sufficient light. It must not be forgotten that the Vidvat is all along favoured by the Paramātman staying in his heart (हृदि).

[522] The ninth Adhikaraṇa comprises only one Sūtra.

(Sūtra 17) The Śruti describes the Vidvat after the departure from the body as going up, following the rays of the Sun only. As the Śruti uses the expression एतरेषु रुमितिः, there can be no question of the Vidvat having any discretion in the matter. He has to go by following the rays, not in any other manner.

The objector points out that at night time, the Sun's rays do not shine so the poor Vidvat is likely to be stranded, if we interpret the passage literally.

The answer is that even at night time, the Sun's rays are not totally absent (they are not experienced as giving out their full warmth). Again, the Śruti makes it quite clear that the Sun's rays extend to both the worlds, like a royal road joining two cities.

[523] The tenth Adhikaraṇa comprises only one Sūtra.

(Sūtra 18) The Pūrvapakṣin points out that he may agree that there do exist the Sun's rays at night to help the Vidvat, but such a contingency is hardly likely to arise, for the Śāstra categorically censures death at night time; so, one dying at night time cannot attain to Brahman.

The Siddhānta is — The attainment to Brahman has nothing to do with the time of death. As has been already pointed out, Brahmaprāpti is due to the fact that the अनाद्यकर्मन् is destroyed by the विद्या, the future Karman is unable to contact the Vidvat, and the प्रारब्धकर्मन् refers only to the last body. This being the case, the references to the time of death concern only the Avidvat. What causes going down or a lower status is the connection with Karman, which is absent in the case of the Vidvat. So, the expression दिवा च चक्षुष्य etc., refers to the Avidvat.

[524] The eleventh Adhikarana comprises two Sūtras

(Sūtra 19) Just as dying at night does not affect adversely the Brahmaprāpti, dying during the Dakṣiṇāyana (December 21 to June 20) is of no consequence

The Pūrvapakṣin points out that one dying during the Dakṣiṇāyana goes to the Moon, and he returns when his Karman is exhausted, and there is no Brahmaprāpti in his case. The very fact that Bhīṣma (of the Mahābhārata fame) waited till the Uttarāyana began, to end his life shows that death during the Dakṣiṇāyana is censurable.

तेषां तत्पर्यवैति—According to the Pūrvapakṣin तेषां means ज्ञानिना as well as कर्मिणाम्, and तत् means कर्मन्.

The Siddhānta is — The passage refers to the Avidvats and तत् simply means what leads a person to the Moon-world. Again, the passage तस्माद्वाहणे महिनात्मनोति shows that the Vidvat even after going to the Moon does attain to Brahman, as nothing can bind him down to Samsāra. Bhīṣma was a great Yogin and had the power to regulate his time of death. That only shows that dying during the Uttarāyana is praiseworthy and no special importance is associated with it. So, the references to the return from the Moon etc., are valid in the case of the Avidvat only.

The objector points out that the Gītā actually uses the word काल, and shows how there take place आवृत्ति and अपुनरावृत्ति in the case of the Vidvat

(Sūtra 20) The Siddhāntin says: —

(1) The passage in question in the Gītā does not refer to मरणकाल at all, as determining the return (if death occurs at night) and non-return (if death occurs during day).

(2) यत् काले actually means यत् मार्गे, and तं कालं, तं मार्गम्.

(3) अग्नि, ज्योतिष् etc., धूम, रात्रि etc., refer to their supervising Deities, these Deities point out to the Devayāna and the Pitryāna as the paths to be followed respectively by those seeking salvation, and those seeking earthly prosperity.

(4) Deities अग्नि etc., show the Devayāna to the Vidvat, irrespective of the fact of his dying at night in the dark fortnight during the Dakṣiṇāyana, just as the Deities Dhūma etc., point out the Pitryāna to the Avidvat irrespective of his dying during day in the bright fortnight during the Uttarāyana.

(5) The word काल in effect means the कालमिमानी देवता or the guide.

(6) The Gītā, after all, is a Smṛti work and cannot override the Śruti; the passage in question concerns the Yogins mainly and is intended to remind the reader of the Devayāna and the Pitṛyāna.

It is instructive to see how the different Bhāṣyakāras try to interpret the Sūtras so as to find out from them their own views. Thus Madhva finds in Sūtras 7-14, a discussion about the natures of Viṣṇu and Lakṣmī, and the question whether Lakṣmī or Prakṛti is merged in Viṣṇu or not (He also reads समना in place of समाना), explains अनुपोष्य as रूत एव, अनुपोष्य, अविभाग as परमेश्वरकामाद्य-विभाग and so on.

Vallabha refers to the Puṣṭimārga and Maryādā-mārga (which corresponds to the path followed by the worshipper of the Lower Brahman, as described by Saṅkara).

Broadly speaking, the various Śruti-passages refer to four classes of people taking to different courses after death—

(1) Those who become Mukta, immediately they realise Brahman (for these, there is no going anywhere after death).

(2) Those whose Jīvas leave by the 101st Nāḍī in the head, and who take to the Devayāna path.

(3) Those who have good Karman to their credit go by the Pitṛyāna, to the Moon and return to the mortal world, after their Sukṛta is exhausted.

(4) The evil-doers go to Yamaloka, and are born again and again as worms, lower animals etc. (Only No. 2 is dealt with in this Pāda. Nos. 3 and 4 have been treated in the previous Pādas).

The Sūtrakāra seems to hold the view that the two paths Devayāna and Pitṛyāna do not emphasise the time when death occurs, and it is only the Smṛti like the Bhagavadgītā that attaches some importance to the time of death. The expression स्मर्ते चैते implies that after all the description found in the Smṛti-works is not as authoritative as that found in the Śruti. Again, the time factor is meant to be attended to only by Yogins who are able to fix the time of their death by their special powers.

स्मर्ते चैते—योगसाहो न श्रौते (शङ्कर).

—योगसाहो न प्रत्यक्षश्रुतिविहिते (भास्कर).

—सतिद्वयं स्मर्यते (निम्बार्के).

Saṅkara is forced to take एते as referring to Yoga and Sāṅkhya (the two paths Devayāna and Pitṛyāna are mentioned in the Śruti, and so they cannot be described as स्मर्ते or न श्रौते). It seems to us that the last Sūtra (योगिनः प्रति...) was added later on by some one taking his cue from the passage in the Bhagavadgītā. (एते—सङ्कल्पे गतीं वेत्ते, चैते सती पार्थ ज्ञानयोगी मुखति कथन Gītā 8-26-27).

In this Pāda, the Devayāna path is described in detail. The various Śruti-passages are reconciled and a complete picture of the path is presented. As all the Śruti-passages are of equal value, an attempt is made, as was done in the Guṇopasaṁhāra Pāda (III. 3), to accommodate the divergent statements in this connection, by arguments sometimes crude, but often ingenious. Then follows a description of the nature of the Brahman reached. (Read the article 'Devayāna and Pitryāna,' by R. D. Karmarkar, published in the Proceedings of the Third All-India Oriental Conference, Madras.)

[525] Sūtras 1-5 describing the Devayāna path are divided into four Adhikaraṇas (each of the first three Sūtras forms an Adhikaraṇa by itself, and Sūtras 4-5 comprise the fourth Adhikaraṇa).

(Sūtra 1) The Devayāna path (Devayāna by itself means the Devapatha — the path by which the gods acting as guides take the Jīvas to their destination. Brahmapatha — the path leading to Brahman) is described in various ways in the Upaniṣads Chāndogya, Kauṣītaki and Bṛhadāraṇyaka. As it is not possible to ignore any Śruti passage (because all such passages are equally authoritative), ways and means are found to bring all the details in one coordinated scheme as follows :—

(1) Arcis (Agniloka to be explained as a Karmadhāraya compound, अग्निश्च लोकश्च, and not अग्नेः लोकः)

(2) Day

(3) The Bright fortnight

(4) Uttarāyaṇa (December 21 to June 20, the six months when the Sun takes to the northerly course)

(5) The Year

(6) Vāyu (Devaloka)

(7) Aditya

(8) Candramas (the Moon)

(9) Vidyut

(10) Varuṇa

(11) Indra

(12) Prajāpati

(13) Brahman.

Though the details differ in different Śruti-passages, some giving more constituents and some less, there can be no hesitation in concluding that the path described is the same, known as Arcirādi.

[526] (Sūtra 2) The Kauṣītakins put in वायुलोक as No. 2 after Arcis (अग्निर्लोक). This would mean that Day would come after वायुः but this conflicts with the idea categorically expressed that there should be कर्म्यमन throughout. So, we must put in वायुलोक before आदित्यलोक.

वायु must come after संकर (वायु is mentioned elsewhere as the abode of the gods; so वायु can be identified with देवलोक).

[527] (Sūtra 3) The objector says that वरुण should be placed after वायु in accordance with the Kausītaki-text; for, वायु cannot come after अर्चिस्, nor after विद्युत् (because the non-human person there takes the Jīva straight to Brahman). The order from अर्चिस् to विद्युत् is, however, more or less fixed; but as provision must be somehow made for वरुण, as also for इन्द्र and प्रजापति, some order has to be disturbed, and the best way out of the difficulty is to place Varuṇa after विद्युत्. The position is that Vidyut and Varuṇa are both connected with water (Varuṇa is the lord of waters) and so should be near each other, but why should Varuṇa be placed after Vidyut, and not before?

The answer is that Vidyut is more directly and obviously connected with water, and so Vidyut should come first !

[528] (Sūtra 4) The question discussed is :—What do अर्चिस् etc., the constituents of the Devayāna represent ? Are they the sign-posts, or the places for enjoyment, or the guides who take the persons desirous of attaining to Brahman to their goal ?

The objector says that Arcis etc., are the sign-posts because we do find sign-posts on a big road for helping a traveller to reach his destination. If this view is not acceptable, as Day, Fort-night etc., indicate only the time element and not any signs or places as such, Arcis etc., may be looked upon as भोगभूमि (as the Kausītaki actually uses the expressions अग्निर्लोक etc.).

The Siddhānta is—Arcis etc., must be understood to mean 'the supervising Deities', because they have to act as guides as the expression ... स एतान्महा समयति shows. It is true that the expression समयति is used first, with reference to the वैद्युत्-पुरुष, but the context shows that the idea applies to the previous members Arcis etc., as well.

(Sūtra 5) It is the वैद्युत्-पुरुष who acts as the guide as directly mentioned. We must suppose therefore that वरुण etc., play the role of being merely अनुप्राहक (co-helpers).

After Sūtra 4, Śāṅkara and others read an additional Sūtra, उभयव्यामोहात्-सिद्धिः. (Vallabha reads an additional Sūtra after Sūtra 3, वरुणाचार्येन्द्रप्रजापती, so as to give prominence to इन्द्र and प्रजापति). According to Śāṅkara, the Sūtra उभय...means that there is the necessity for the help by the guides as both (उभय) the Jīvas and the Stations on the way are incapable of finding the way for themselves.

[529] The fifth and the last Adhikaraṇa contains ten Sūtras. Sūtras 6-10 give the view of Bādari; Sūtras 11-13, the view of Jaimini; and Sūtras 14-15 the view of Bādarāyaṇa, which is the Siddhānta.

The question discussed is :—Which worshippers are taken to Brahman by the guides ?—Worshippers of Hiraṇyagarbha, or only the worshippers of the Highest Brahman; or worshippers of the Highest Brahman and the worshippers of the Pratyagātman with Brahman as the Antāryāmin ?

(Sūtra 6) Bādari says that the Arcirādi-guides take the worshipper of Hiraṇyagarbha (or, Brahmadeva) by the Devayāna path; for, the worshipper of the Highest Brahman is not required to go anywhere (the attainment to Brahman is automatic); a movement towards is possible only in the case of something that is परिच्छिन्न, while Brahman is अपरिच्छिन्न.

(Sūtra 7) The expressions ब्रह्मलोकन्, प्रजापतेः समा वेदन्, show that the worshipper goes to the worlds of Brahmadeva.

(Sūtra 8) The passage स एनान् ब्रह्म गमयति, uses the expression ब्रह्म (neuter), not ब्रह्मण (ब्रह्मदेवं). This shows that Brahmadeva is not referred to here—This objection can be met with in the following way:—Brahmadeva (Hiraṇyagarbha) is the first-born and so very near to Brahman. Hence he could be referred to as Brahman! (Besides, it has been already pointed out that Brahman being अपरिच्छिन्न, cannot be gone to).

[530] (Sūtra 9) At the time of Pralaya, when the Brahmaloка is destroyed, the Vidvat reaches the Highest Brahman and there is no return for him.

(Sūtra 10) The Smṛti also says the same thing viz. when the प्रतिमं चर (प्रलय) occurs, the worshippers reach the highest place.

[531] (Sūtra 11) Jaimini holds the view that the Brahman reached is the Highest Brahman; for, that is the primary sense of the word Brahman. It is true Brahman is निराक and सर्वगत, but it can be spoken of as being particularised by some Time-factor or Place-factor.

As regards the contention that ब्रह्मलोकन् suggests the worlds of Brahmadeva, it can be argued that Brahmaloка means here, Brahman itself is the Loka (that is, ब्रह्मलोक is a Karmadhāraya compound; it is cumbrous to take an expression as a Bahuvrīhi compound, when a Karmadhāraya is possible. For instance, निराकस्थपतिः if dissolved as निराकानां स्थपतिः, would put one in mind of two entities (निराक and स्थपति), which is cumbrous; but निराकस्थ स्थपतिः would refer to only one entity, if taken as a Karmadhāraya and thus is more acceptable.)

The Śruti also supports this view. अदितिः पशान्, here actually one पश is spoken of as many.

Brahman, which is परिपूर्ण, सर्वगत etc., can have various worlds associated with it, by its own free will. (अत्यन्ताय means 'totally').

(Sūtra 12) The Śruti by using the expression परं ज्योतिः shows that the Highest Brahman is meant.

[532] (Sūtra 13) The passage यज्ञोऽहं मतामि ब्राह्मणनाम् also refers to the Para-Brahman (यज्ञस्त्व means अहम् and अहं means the inner Controller, परमात्मन्).

Further, ब्रह्मलोक is described as अकृत, and so it cannot mean the world of Brahmadeva.

[533] (Sūtra 14) Bādarāyaṇa gives his own view as the Siddhānta thus —

(1) It is wrong to say that the worshippers of the Kārya Brahman are taken along the Arcirādi path, because the Sruti says परं ज्योतिषसंपदः.

(2) It cannot be said either that only the worshippers of the Para-Brahman are taken, because there is the Sruti-passage declaring that those who know the Five-Fire-Vidyā are taken by the Arcirādi path (Both these views — 1 and 2 — are thus faulty).

(3) It is better, therefore, to conclude that the worshippers of (or, meditators on) the Para-Brahman barring those who worship Brahman under some symbol (who worship Nāman etc., the symbols of Brahman as Brahman, or Nāman etc., as the symbols of Brahman), — the प्रतीकालम्बन-worshippers have no right to be called the worshippers of the Highest Brahman.

(4) The general rule, whatever will (to sacrifice or to worship) one has, one attains to that after death, clearly states the position. — The worshippers of Pañcāgnis go by the Arcirādi path and attain to Brahman. The Symbol-worshippers, on the other hand, go in for a somewhat mixed Upāsānā, and are not entitled to travel by the Arcirādi path.

(Sūtra 15) The Symbol-worshippers are described in the Sruti as securing only a limited objective, not Brahman

प्रकृतिवियुक्तं — apart from the subtle elements. (The passage ब्रह्मणा सह ते सर्वे... in the Kūrmapurāṇa refers to the Yogins in the world of Brahmadeva and not the travellers along the Arcirādi path),

According to Sankara, the last two Sūtras form a separate Adhikaraṇa (6). The view of Bādari is the Siddhānta viz. the souls are guided to the Lower Brahman, as going to is not possible in the case of the Parabrahman. These worshippers of the Lower Brahman in due course attain to the Highest Brahman, along with Hiranyagarbha, the Lord of Brahmaloṇa.

Jaimini's view is that the destination is the Para-Brahman to which the Karmins are taken. (There is no word like ॥ in the Sūtra परं जैमिनिर्मुक्त्यन्ताद्, to show that Jaimini's view is the Pūrvapakṣa or is intended to be refuted). It appears to us that the Sūtrakāra had to refer to Jaimini who was too big a person to be ignored, while discussing the nature of Mokṣa. (In IV. 4.5, similarly Jaimini's view is referred to). Śaṅkara very astutely remarks:— तस्माद् 'कार्यं बादरिः', इत्येव एव रिधतः पक्षः । 'परं जैमिनिः' इति तु पक्षान्तरप्रतिभानमात्रप्रदर्शनं प्रज्ञाविनासनायेति द्रष्टव्यम् । Śaṅkara also reads उभयथा, अदोषात्, in Sūtra 15 and says प्रतीकालम्बनान्वर्थात् सर्वानन्याविकारालम्बनाद्ययति ब्रह्मलोकमिति बादरायण आचार्यो मन्यते । न ह्येवमुभयथाभावाभ्युपगमे कथिहोयोऽस्ति । ... तत्कृतुश्चास्योभयथामात्रस्य समर्थको हेतुर्द्रष्टव्यः ।

Śaṅkara is usually attacked for regarding कार्यं बादरिः as the Siddhānta-Sūtra, and for taking Jaimini's view as the Pūrvapakṣa, which is not the usual order to be followed in the respective positions of the Pūrvapakṣa and the Siddhānta. We have already suggested above that it is not necessary to regard Jaimini's view as the Pūrvapakṣa, and Bādarāyaṇa's view points out to an exception to Bādari's view. Sāhaka spiritedly remarks (Sūtra 14, न च कार्ये...) न ह्यस्यपि संभवे मुक्त्यस्यैवार्थस्य ग्रहणमिति कथिदाज्ञापयिता निघते । ... येनितुनः पूर्वणि पूर्वप्रमृष्टानि भवत्युत्तराणि सिद्धान्तसूत्राण्येतेषां व्यवस्थामनुसृत्यमानाः परस्परिणा एव गतिभृतीः प्रतिष्ठापयन्ति, तदनुगमं गन्तव्यत्वानुपपत्तेर्द्वयम्... Sāhaka is on firm ground in arguing that any interpretation must take into account what is possible and reasonable, and one must not follow blindly any hard and fast rule.

Reviewing the Sūtras in this Pāda (IV-3) as a whole, it is clear that they can be divided into three Sections:—

(1) Sūtras 1-6 describe the Devayāna path by which the Brahman-worshippers proceed after death.

(2) Sūtras 7-13 describe the destination (or, Gantavya) of the Brahman-worshippers.

(3) The last two Sūtras mention the authoritative view of Bādarāyaṇa, excluding the Symbol-worshippers from enjoying the privilege of using the Devayāna-path.

Rāmānuja takes Section 2 (Sūtras 7-13) as referring to the Gantavya, and not to the Gantavya. He, therefore, takes कार्य to mean 'the worshippers of Kārya' which is quite unjustifiable (perhaps he was forced to give this meaning to Kārya, as Sūtra 14 refers to the Gantavya).

There is nothing to show that Bādari's view is the Pūrvapakṣa and that of Jaimini the Siddhānta. Actually, Jaimini who is a confirmed Karmamārgin is only indirectly interested in Parabrahman, and his view could not possibly be regarded as the Siddhānta. But as Jaimini and Bādarāyaṇa were very well-known philosophers, Jaimini, the Sūtrakāra thought, deserved mention, when the destination of the Vidvat was being discussed. Bādari obviously wants all Brahman-worshippers (whether worshipping Brahman directly or under a Symbol) to be placed on the same pedestal. Bādarāyaṇa improves upon this and declares that the Symbol-worshippers could not attain to the same destination as the Direct-Brahman-worshippers, as that comes into conflict with the Tat-kratu-nyāya.

Nimbārka and Keśava Kāśmīrin follow Sāhaka generally. Madhva does the same and makes it clear that Bādari and Jaimini represent the Pūrvapakṣa.

IV. 4

The fourth Pāda of the fourth Adhyāya discusses the nature of Mokṣa which is secured by those who are entitled to use the Devayāna path, the relation of the Released Souls with the Highest, and their functions and responsibilities.

[534] The first Adhikaraṇa comprises three Sūtras

(Sūtra 1) The question discussed is whether the Mukta after being merged into the Para-jyotis becomes manifest as possessing a new form, or his own natural form.

The Pūrvapakṣin says that obviously a new form must be there, if nothing new or additional is to be gained by the Mukta, what purpose is served by the Mokṣaśāstra? If the Mukta is to have nothing more than his own nature, then Mokṣa would not be worth having. The Śruti itself describes Mokṣa as not merely the cessation of misery, but infinite bliss, knowledge etc. So, the expression स्वेन रूपेण must be taken to mean 'with the peculiar nature involving infinite bliss, which had not been there before, and which was acquired anew.' Surely one's स्वरूप is always there, it cannot be said to be manifest or acquired at any stage.

The Siddhānta is—The expression स्वेन रूपेण must mean 'by his own nature'. If some new or peculiar form is to be secured by the Mukta, स्वेन रूपेण would be meaningless. A surely is not expected to manifest himself by the form of B, or by some new form.

[535] (Sūtra 2) The Pūrvapakṣin reads too much in the expression अभिनिवृत्ते. What is conveyed by the expression is that the Mukta is free from any connection with the body or Karman, and there is the manifestation of his own nature.

[536] (Sūtra 3) The Pūrvapakṣin says.—If mere स्वस्वभावमिव exists in the state of Mokṣa, what difference can be there between the state of deep sleep (where there is no connection with the outside world) and the state of Mukti?

The answer is that in the state of Mukti, there is the manifestation of the natural attributes, अपहृतपाप्मत्वं, सत्यसंस्त्यत्वं etc., which is lacking in the Suṣupti-state. In short, there is the विकास of the attributes ज्ञान, आनन्द etc., which had been cramped up on account of the shackles of Karman prior to Mukti.

[537] The second Adhikaraṇa comprises only one Sūtra

(Sūtra 4) The question discussed is—What is the relation between the Paramātmān and the Mukta? Does the Mukta-Jīva consider himself to be different from the Paramātmān (who is his Atman), or as not different from him, being just the mode of the Paramātmān (just as the body is the प्रकार of the Jīvātman, so the Jīvātman is the प्रकार of the Paramātmān)?

The Pūrvapakṣin says — The Mukta obviously remains separate from the Paramātmān—

(1) The Śruti-passage सोऽद्भुते... सह ब्रह्मणा shows that the Mukta-Jīva enjoys along with Brahman; that means the Mukta and Brahman are two different entities.

- (2) ...परमं साम्यमुपैति } The expressions साम्य and साधर्म्य presuppose
(3) ...मम साधर्म्यमागताः } two different entities; there can be no साम्य or साधर्म्य with oneself.

The Siddhānta is — The Śruti सोऽद्भुते... really means that the Jivātman, when Mukta, enjoys just the realisation of the true nature of Brahman. By admitting the प्रकारप्रकृतिभाव between the Mukta and the Paramātmān, साम्य and साधर्म्य can be adequately explained.

[538] The third Adhikaraṇa comprises three Sūtras (5-7) and gives the views of Jaimini, Auḍulomi and Bādarāyaṇa about the nature of the Ātman, manifested in the state of Mukti.

(Sūtra 5) Three possible views about the nature of Ātman in the state of Mukti would be—the possession

- (1) of the qualities अपहृतपाप्मत्वादि.
- (2) of only विज्ञान (not अपहृतपाप्मत्वादि);
- (in both these, there is no question of non-sentiency being associated),
- (3) of both अपहृतपाप्मत्वादि and विज्ञान.

Jaimini holds the first view, because the qualities अपहृतपाप्मत्वादि are mentioned in connection with Brahman (ब्रह्मण इदं ब्रह्मम्), and these are associated with the Pratyagātman as well, in the Prajāpati-discourse etc., in the Chāndogya, and eating, sporting etc., are associated with him. If only विज्ञान were to be the nature, eating etc., would not be possible.

[539] (Sūtra 6) Auḍulomi (the same who is mentioned in I. 4. 21) holds the second view viz, only विज्ञान is the nature, as the Śruti emphatically says that the Ātman is विज्ञानघन एव, प्रज्ञानघन एव etc. As regards the qualities अपहृतपाप्मत्वादि mentioned in the Śruti, they can be explained as denying the existence of qualities opposed to them. Thus :—

अपहृतपाप्म means that Brahman is free from पाप्मन् of any kind

विजर means freedom from old age

विमृत्यु means freedom from death

विशोक, अविजिघत्स, अविपास mean freedom from misery, hunger and thirst.

सत्यकाम—having no desires not fulfilled at any time; and so on.

[540] (Sūtra 7) Bādarāyaṇa holds that as the Śruti mentions both विज्ञानघनत्व and अपहृतपाप्मत्वादि, and as the Śruti is the final authority, both the views, that of Jaimini, and that of Auḍulomi must be accepted.

It would be wrong to dub any of the two views as impossible, or as due to Avidyā. When we say विज्ञानघन एव, that means there is not even the smallest part of Ātman that is non-sentient. The एवकार means that the absence of connection with विज्ञान is not found in any part of the Ātman; that is, एवकार is अयोग्यवच्छेदार्थक and not अन्ययोग्यवच्छेदार्थक (that is, referring to the absence of other qualities), because that would come into conflict with several positive statements in the Śruti. A mass of salt is known to be saltish by the tongue, but the form etc., of the mass can be known by the eye; a mango-fruit is रसवत्, but its skin etc., have रसभेद; similarly Ātman can have विज्ञानस्वरूपत्व as well as स्वप्नरासस्वरूपत्व.

Śaṅkara has a very short comment on this Sūtra — एवमपि पारमार्थिकचैतन्यमात्रस्वरूपान्युपगमेऽपि व्यवहारापेक्षया पूर्वस्याप्युपन्यासादिभ्योऽवगतस्य ब्रह्मास्त्यैश्वर्यरूपस्याप्रत्याह्यानादविरोधं वादरायण आचार्यो मन्यते ।

[541] The fourth Adhikaraṇa comprises two Sūtras.

(Sūtra 8) The question discussed is — Is the activity of the Mukta (who is सत्यसंकल्प) due to his संकल्प alone or does it depend upon any additional effort or agency?

The Pūrvapakṣin says — In practical life, we find kings and others (who are सत्यसंकल्प) have to take recourse to some additional effort (such as ordering their servants) for getting things done. So, the activity of the Mukta should also be प्रयत्नान्तरसापेक्ष.

The Siddhānta is — The Mukta by his mere संकल्प can get what he wants; no other effort is needed, as the Śruti itself vouchsafes.

संकल्पादेव — Here the एवकार is अन्ययोग्यवच्छेदार्थक as there is no other Śruti-passage speaking of any प्रयत्नान्तर. If there had been such a Śruti-passage, the एवकार would have been only अयोग्यवच्छेदार्थक, so as to accommodate that Śruti-passage. In the case of विज्ञानघन एव, the एवकार had to be taken as अयोग्यवच्छेदार्थक, so as not to come into conflict with the Śruti mentioning the qualities सत्यकामत्व etc.

(Sūtra 9) The Mukta has no one to boss over him. He is स्वराट् (self-ruler). (This does not repudiate the over-all supremacy of the Paramapuruṣa).

Śaṅkara takes this and the remaining Adhikaraṇas as describing the Vidvat who has realised only the Lower Brahman; for, according to him the Vidvat who has realised the Highest Brahman becomes one with it, and no further details are required about him.

[542] The fifth Adhikaraṇa comprises seven Sūtras.

The question discussed is whether the Mukta has a body and sense-organs, and if so, whether he creates them and different worlds at his will, whether he could be called omniscient etc.

(Sūtra 10) Bādari holds the view that the Mukta has no body or sense-organs, as connection with these is bound to be associated with misery which the Mukta surely does not experience.

[543] (Sūtra 11) Jaimini holds that the Mukta has a body and sense-organs, because the Śruti actually says that Ātman becomes three-fold, five-fold etc. This reference must be associated with the body, as the Ātman is incapable of being divided. The Śruti अशरीरं वाच सन्तं प्रियाप्रिये न स्पृशतः must be understood to refer to a body not in the state of Mokṣa, but to the ordinary body which is subject to Karma producing happiness and misery.

[544] (Sūtra 12) Bādarāyana says as the Śruti endorses both अशरीरत्वं and अशरीरत्वं, we must conclude that the Mukta at his will can have a body or not.

द्वादशाह—A sacrifice extending over twelve days.

सत्र is a long sacrificial session, where there are several Yajamānas, and where the injunctions used are असीरन् (connected with the root अस्) or उपेयु, (connected with the root ए with उप) etc.

अदीन—a sacrifice extending over several days where there is only one Yajamāna, and the injunction is याजयेद् (connected with the root यज्) etc.

A द्वादशाह sacrifice can be associated with both kinds of विधेः; so it depends upon the sacrificer to decide at the commencement whether he wishes to perform a Satra or an Abina.

(Sūtra 13) When the Mukta wills that he should have no body, he carries on with the body and sense-organs created by the Lord, as in a dream.

[545] (Sūtra 14) The Paramāpuruṣa sometimes creates the world of Piṭrs for the enjoyment by the Mukta, as in the waking state. The Mukta also can himself create such worlds if he likes.

Śaṅkara's comments on Sūtras 13 and 14 are more to the point :—इदं तनो. सेन्द्रियस्य शरीरस्याभावं, तदा यथा संये स्थाने शरीरेन्द्रियविषयेष्वविद्यमानेष्वप्युपलब्धिमात्रा एव पित्रादिकामा भवत्येवं मोक्षेऽपि स्थूरेवं क्षेत्रदुपपद्यते। ...भावे पुनस्तनोर्यथा जागरिते विद्यमाना एव पित्रादिकामा भवत्येवं मुक्तस्याप्युपपद्यते।

Śaṅkara takes Sūtras 15 and 16 as a separate Adhikaraṇa.

[546] (Sūtra 15) The question discussed is—Ātman is atomic in size; how can he function in several bodies simultaneously?

According to Śaṅkara the question is :—त्रियाभावादिव्यनेकशरीरसंगे किं निरात्मकानि शरीराणि दाक्षयन्त्राणां च सृज्यन्ते, किंवा चात्मकान्यस्मदादिशरीरवदिति भवति वीक्षा। तत्र चात्मनसोर्भेदादुपपत्तेरेकेन शरीरेण योगादितराणि शरीराणि निरात्मकानीति।

Rāmānuja's reference to Ātman being atomic in size is hardly pertinent while considering the relation of the Ātman with different bodies.

The atomic size of the Ātman in respect of the body has already been dealt with in II. 3.

As a lamp situated in one place envelops all places by its lustre, or as the Ātman though situated in the heart etc pervades the whole of the body by his sentiency, the Ātman can very well pervade different bodies.

प्रदीपवत् — the simile is explained by other commentators as under :—

यथा प्रदीप एकोऽनेकप्रदीपभावमापद्यते विस्तरशक्तियोगात्. एवमेकोऽपि सन्निधानैश्वर्ययोगादनेकभावमापद्यते सर्वाणि शरीराण्यविकारितः। (शङ्कर)

यथा तैलवर्तिसंयोगभेदे तत्र तत्राविरतिः प्रदीपस्तथा सर्वज्ञनिष्कामवैश्वे शरीरेषु चेतनान्तोऽसद्भावः। (भास्कर)

[552] (Sūtra 21) The परमसाम्य of the Mukta with Brahman, comprises just the privilege of realising Brahman as it is, that is all.

[553] (Sūtra 22) The Pūrvapakṣin is afraid that if the Mukta is completely under the control of the Paramapurusa, it may happen that he would be required to go back to the Saṁsāra, if the Paramapurusa so wills it.

The answer is that the Paramapurusa who regards the Mukta (Jñānin) as one dearest to him, could not be so thoughtless. A return to the Saṁsāra can possibly arise from Karman, longing or Vāsanā associated with the Mukta. But all these three could not exist in the case of the Mukta. In the Bhagavadgītā the Lord himself has given such a specific assurance, and who could possibly question the word of the Lord ?

It is usual to criticise adversely Śaṅkara's position in respect of this last Pāda which according to Śaṅkara describes the state of the Vidvat meditating on the Lower Brahman only. It is claimed that the Sūtrakāra could not have concluded his Sūtras with the description of the lower Vidvat ! Against this it must be clearly understood that the business of the Sūtrakāra appears to be to describe the philosophical position obtaining in the Upaniṣads and not to preach a system of his own. Hence, the views of Bādarī, Jaiminī and others from whom Bādarāyaṇa differs, are given due prominence. As far as Śaṅkara is concerned, the higher Vidvat becomes one with the Highest Brahman and there is no room to discuss his state any further; it is the lower Vidvat whose fate deserves to be discussed in the light of popular superstition and relevant philosophical data from the Upaniṣads. Śaṅkara cannot therefore be blamed for believing that Sūtras IV. 4.1-7 alone describe the higher Vidvat.

According to Madhva, the Released Soul experiences only joy and never suffers pain. Vallabha also sees in this Pāda, the two-fold distinction among the devotees, those following the Puṣṭimārga and those following the Maryādāmārga. On the whole, however, the Bhāṣyakāras do not differ very much in the interpretation of the individual Sūtras in this Pāda.

इदम् विशेषः—The मुक्त-Jīva is to be distinguished from the बद्ध-Jīva as follows :—The बद्ध-Jīva has a limited knowledge and so cannot have jurisdiction on bodies other than his own ; the मुक्त-Jīva's knowledge is unlimited, and so at his will he could control other bodies. In the case of the बद्ध-Jīva, Karman is the regulating agency ; in the case of the मुक्त-Jīva, his will regulates his conduct.

[547] (Sūtra 16) The Pūrvapakṣin points out that the Śruti-passage प्राज्ञेनात्मना etc., says that the मुक्त knows neither वाङ्म nor आन्तर; so, how can he be described as omniscient ?

The answer is — The passage in question does not refer to the मुक्त; it refers to the सुषुप्ति-state, where the Jīva merges into the प्राज्ञ (the Paramātmā) or to the state of death (where तेजस् is said to merge into the परा देवता).

[548] The sixth Adhikaraṇa (with which the fourth and the last Adhyāya of Brahmasūtras, comes to an end) contains six Sūtras.

The question discussed is the nature of the privileges enjoyed by the Mukta who is described as attaining to परमसाम्य with the Highest.

(Sūtra 17) The Mukta cannot participate in the activity connected with the creation of the world etc. That is the privilege of the Highest alone. This is made perfectly clear by the Śruti-passages themselves in the relevant contexts. Again, such a question actually does not arise, for surely the Mukta could not have been there at the the time of the creation of the world.

The glory of the Mukta lies in his being able to realise the Highest Brahman as it is. This does not come into conflict with the idea of परमसाम्य. Brahman is unlimited bliss, and the Mukta also enjoys such a bliss. (In the passage एका कन्या दशेन्द्रियाणि, कन्या means the mind which illumines the objects of the sense; कन् — to illumine).

[549] (Sūtra 18) The Chāndogya-passage स स्वराद् भवति तस्य सर्वेषु लोकेषु कामचारे भवति, means that the Mukta, if he so wishes, can enjoy the different worlds supervised over by Hiraṇyagarbha and others. The Mukta can enjoy whatever is associated with the manifestations of Brahman, but that does not mean that he can control the world, like Brahman.

[550] (Sūtra 19) As the Mukta has realised the Brahman, he is not subject to any modification, though he could enjoy himself in the worlds that are subject to modification.

[551] (Sūtra 20) Both the Śruti (प्रत्यक्ष) and the Smṛti (अनुमान) definitely mention the जगद्गणपार as the peculiar privilege of the Paramapuruṣa. The attributes सत्यसं कल्पव etc., associated with the मुक्त are ultimately dependent upon the Paramapuruṣa.

[552] (Sūtra 21) The पुनरात्म of the Mukta with Brahman, comprises just the privilege of realising Brahman as it is, that is all

[553] (Sūtra 22) The Pūrvapakṣin is afraid that if the Mukta is completely under the control of the Paramapurusa, it may happen that he would be required to go back to the Samsāra, if the Paramapurusa so wills it

The answer is that the Paramapurusa who regards the Mukta (Jñānin) as one dearest to him, could not be so thoughtless - A return to the Samsāra can possibly arise from Karman, longing or Vāsanā associated with the Mukta. But all these three could not exist in the case of the Mukta. In the Bhagavadgītā the Lord himself has given such a specific assurance, and who could possibly question the word of the Lord ?

It is usual to criticise adversely Sankara's position in respect of this last Pāda which according to Sankara describes the state of the Vidvat meditating on the Lower Brahman only. It is claimed that the Sūtrakāra could not have concluded his Sūtras with the description of the lower Vidvat. Against this it must be clearly understood that the business of the Sūtrakāra appears to be to describe the philosophical position obtaining in the Upanisads and not to preach a system of his own. Hence, the views of Bādarī Jaimini and others from whom Bādarāyana differs, are given due prominence. As far as Sankara is concerned the higher Vidvat becomes one with the Highest Brahman and there is no room to discuss his state any further. It is the lower Vidvat whose fate deserves to be discussed in the light of popular superstition and relevant philosophical data from the Upanisads. Sankara cannot therefore be blamed for believing that Sūtras IV 4 1-7 alone describe the higher Vidvat.

According to Madhva, the Released Soul experiences only joy and never suffers pain. Vallabha also sees in this Pāda the two-fold distinction among the devotees, those following the Puṣṭimarga and those following the Maryādāmārga. On the whole, however the Bhāṣyakāras do not differ very much in the interpretation of the individual Sūtras in this Pāda.

Usually, an Adhikarana is named after a word or words of the which commences the Adhikarana. This rule is not followed everywhere; sometimes the Adhikarana is named after some word or topic more known in the initial Sutra.
